SANTA REMEMBERED T[HE] PREACHER

We just naturally bet that D[r.] Wa[t]kerson, our able Methodist m[in]ister, is a firm believer in old Santa Clause now.

Just listen, the Yu[le]time genie called on him a corner this week and he is worry a last all over his handsome mustache now. We don't know what he had up his stocking or not. But we doubt the capacity of even his bridal lingerie to hold the lovely gifts cating to him.

Among those [gi]fts and homely souveniers were an elegant cedar chest a beautiful and efficient [ra]nge, all installed, a system of [wa]ter connection throughout the [ho]use and many other items of use and [be]uty.

We learn that the splendid [ge]sture of his congregation were instrumental in inducing old Santa to make the call. We do not doubt that either [of] them, even a hard boiled citizen like that [ol]d guy is said to be, could not resist the hands of that devoted people [wh]en did ladies.

SICK AT CHEROKEE BLUFF

Rev. W. S. Cox and his [wife] were called to Cherokee Bluff on Saturday morning by a message announced that their son-in-law, Mr. James Roper, was very low with an attack of pneumonia.

They left by auto at once [and] we hope they found the sufferer improved on their arrival.

Mr. Roper is the son of M[r.] W. C. Roper, of our city, who also [left] early Saturday for the bedside of the sick man.

NO SMALL POX IN VERBENA

Last Friday afternoon, W. A. [Ca]ledge, of Verbena, was in our office and imparted to us the pleasing intelligence that the last smallpox excitement has all disappeared and along with the efficient quarantine service rendered by the city, the disease has been utterly stamped out and no cases exist in all that section.

Mr. Gulledge is one of the leading citizens of Verbena, and a democrat in whom there is no guile. Men of his stamp are worth a great deal to any community.

A CHILTON BOY MAKING GOOD

Last week we had a most pleasant caller, Prof. Enoch W. Robinson, who is distinctly a Chilton county product.

He is not yet old enough to vote, but is principal of one of the large consolidated schools in Chamber county, having nearly 200 pupils and employing 8 teachers.

This is a wonderful record for a brilliant young man and we are proud of him. He has been at his present location now for years. He certainly is a credit to the young men of this or any other county.

DR. J. P. CRUMPTON ILL

The many friends of Dr. J. P. Crumpton have been very uneasy about his condition for the past few days.

He suffered from a very severe attack of flue and for a time it looked like pneumonia was certain to set up, but we learn now that his condition is much more favorable.

ARE NOT SATISFIED

There is an extensive and growing sentiment of dissatisfaction out in the western part of the county, over the recent death of one Mr. Ed Smitherman, who met a violent death out there and the people charge that no effort was made at investigation.

We heard of the death at the time and were surprised that we never heard but very little more about it. Personally we were never able to gather any details at the time and do not know any of the particulars, but people who live out there, feel like the case demanded a searching investigation.

So many complaints have come to us in regard to this matter that it has become necessary for us to have some thing to say. We do not know why this matter went over so quietly, but we do know that in other counties a matter like that is always sifted to the bottom. For instance, look at the recent Edwards case in Fairfield. No time has been lost and no effort been left undone to unravel that mystery. Human life is getting cheap indeed, when a man can die with a fractured skull, under any circumstances, and no effort be made to learn the cause.

This may have been an accident, it may have been done in self defense or it may have been foul play. No one seems to know.

If no effort was made to clear up the mystery shrouding the death of this man, then we do not blame those good people out there for registering their displeasure.

We suppose our county is supplied, by law, with the same authority to go in to investigation of these kinds that other counties are, but the verdict of a coroner's jury and the legal investigation of peculiar deaths seem to be of rare occurence here.

There is another case or two that we have in mind that would show up better if legal cognizance had been taken of them.

IS VERY LOW

The many friends of Mr. W. J. Morris, who resides out about 2 miles west of Clanton, on the Maplesville highway, are growing very anxious over his condition.

He has been in bad health for several months and has undergone an operation or two, but without any permanent improvement.

It is feared that he will not be able to last much longer, as he is said to have cancer of the stomach. We certainly sympathize with him and hope that he may yet conquor in the fight and regain his health.

COL. J. O. MIDDLETON

The many friends of Col. J. O. Middleton will be glad to learn that he has been appointed assistant Federal District Attorney, with headquarters at Montgomery.

He will still reside in Clanton and his office here will still be open for business, as he will have time to alternate between there and here.

We congratulate the Colonel and know he will do credit to his new job and law breakers better set up and take notice when he appears against them.

Mr. Matthews' Roper and family of Pensacola, Florida, visited Clanton friends several days last week.

HAPPY NEW YEAR

Today the old world begins to measure off another year.

The old year that became history last night at 12 o'clock was better to us all than we deserved. Its joys and sorrows are memories only now. Its heartaches are of the forever gone past. Its hatreds and its bitterness should be buried now and every one of us should begin the new year with a clean slate. Look forward instead of backward and plan for a future in place of moaning over a past. Disinfect your entire system and destroy every germ of hatred, deceit, envy, backbiting and working of vicious, malicious and lying schemes to injure some other person. Resolve to be honest and stick to it. Make up your mind to be somebody and then do it. Help your fellow man in every laudable effort and remember that life leads us through many dark and dismal places where money means very little, but where true friends are the dearest treasure that earth affords.

Worship Almighty God instead of a dollar and love your friends more than riches.

This is the way to make the New Year a blessing instead of a curse to you and to those with whom you are associated. It is also the way to gain happiness as you go and heaven when you pass on.

To our readers we wish every happiness and prosperity for the New Year. May seed time be propitious and the harvest all you can wish.

A Happy New Year to all.

GONE TO INFIRMARY

Wallace Mims, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Harve Mims, who live just out of town on the Lock 12 road, was stricken suddenly on Saturday with an acute attack of appendicitis while over in town.

Dr. J. P. Hayes was called in to see him and found at once that only an operation could relieve him.

On Sunday evening, the patient, Dr. Hayes and the father left on No 10 for a Birmingham infirmary. We learn that the operation was performed immediately upon their arrival and was very successful, as news came at 10 that night that the work was done and the boy was resting fine.

Wallace is almost a young man and is the oldest child of his parents, and is a steady hard working boy respected by all who know him.

We trust that he will speedily recover and come back home to a most anxious mother and little brothers and sisters.

LECTURES AT MARS HILL

Rev. J. A. Edwards, Bible student from Birmingham, will deliver two lectures at Mars Hill next Sunday, one at 10 a. m. and the other at 2 p. m.

Mars Hill is located about 5 miles west of Jemison and every one is cordially invited to be on hand and hear this talented young speaker.

SENATOR ADAMS SUFFERS STROKE

All of us were saddened and shocked last Saturday morning when the sad intelligence flashed over the city that Senator S. M. Adams had been stricken with paralysis.

Dr. V. J. Gragg was summoned at once and did for the sufferer all that medical science can do in such cases and the Senator revived under his treatment and is, at present, resting well.

The Senator told us that the attack seemed to come on him slowly, as he noticed rather peculiar sensations as early as midnight, but it was early Saturday morning before it became known that he had been stricken.

The paralysis seems to be on the left side and is not total. He can still move his limbs fairly well and was sitting up in his rocker Sunday and looked and seemed very much like the same grand old man he has always been.

Hundreds of friends are earnestly hoping that he will not have further trouble, and that he will be able to speedily over come this minor attack and be out among us again battling for the right in all things and fearlessly standing up for those high ideals he holds of life in every walk.

There is hardly a man in Chilton county who wields more influence than Senator Adams, and not one in the state who is listened to with more attention when he takes up the cudgels to fight any public measure that he conceives to be wrong.

We earnestly hope for him many years of usefulness and activity and our section certainly needs him at the helm.

WONDER WHY

It looks like the effort to secure a cotton mill for Clanton is always doomed to disappointment. We have done our best but all of our efforts have been abortive.

Knowing as we do that a cotton mill is a most wonderful help to the farmers of a county, as well as a great source of revenue to the other business enterprises, we are most anxious to see one located in Chilton.

Now down in our sister town of Verbena there is ample capital to handle the cotton mill question and that would be a most ideal location for one, so we wonder if those live and progressive people down there would not become interested and locate a mill there.

According to statistics a cotton mill pays good dividends and furnishes remunerative employment for a large number of people. They are a great advertisement for and builder of a community, and we certainly would be glad if our Verbena neighbors would take this matter up and see if they do not feel like it would be a great mark of progress and profit to them and a vast help to the farmers of Chilton.

Look into it, good people, and see if you can't give us a cotton mill.

A MAD DOG EPIDEMIC

A terrible scourage of rabid dogs is raging in Birmingham. As many as 37 victims were bitten in one day and the Pasteur treatment is in demand every day.

There is also a wide spread epidemic over the State.

Last Sunday night a mad dog appeared in the neighborhood where Mr. Chas. Foshee lives. It bit all the dogs in that settlement that night and was finally killed by Mr. Foshee on Monday morning.

Dr. Hinkle tells us that he has several dogs at his vetinary hospital, undergoing a toxin treatment now that have been bitten.

Now is the time to cope with this situation before it spreads. If you have a dog you should shut him up so a rabid dog could not get to him and keep him there day and night.

Another very important thing to do is to keep little children at all times protected from the attack of any stray dog that might come along and stop them from playing with their dog pets.

If the conditions grow any worse it will be absolutely necessary for the law to intervene to protect the people.

Dr. Hinkle says that dogs may be treated and made immune from rabies, and that all dog fanciers and others who wish to keep dogs should be glad to have every dog they keep treated, and this dangerous malady be thus eliminated.

Dogs are useful and interesting animals and we never blame any body for wanting one nor for loving him, if he is any good, but on the other hand, hydrophobia is, perhaps, the most horrible disease there is and once developed it is sure death, so we can not afford to take any chances with mad dogs.

For the present, at least, don't allow any familiarities to grow up between you and any stray dog. Be careful with all dogs.

STOP WORKING THEM

Dr. C. S. Strock, of Verbena, was a most pleasant caller at our office Monday.

The doctor has lots of traveling to do over the county roads and his observation for years are worth listening to.

He is most positive in his opinion that it is a great mistake, and an actual waste of good money, to put out the road machines and rake up the roads during the wet winter months. He says the roads would be more passable for traffic in the winter time if the hard surface acquired during the dry fall and summer months, was left undisturbed during the winter, than they are following a system of work, that would be all right in dry weather, but that renders the roads a perfect log hole in the cold rainy season.

This sounds to us like a very reasonable proposition and we have no doubt that Dr. Strock knows exactly what he is talking about.

WHY NOT A LAUNDRY

If it is a fact that the canning factory is a dead issue and will not be operated any more, then why don't somebody take it over and turn it in to a steam laundry?

We have been told by people who are familiar with the operation of steam laundries, that it would be easy and not expensive to transform that plant into a laundry.

If one will only pay a little attention to the amount of laundry work sent away from Clanton every week, he will see that the trade is already established here and all to be done is to arrange to take care of it at home.

Besides, the question of securing washwomen for the family is daily becoming more difficult and more expensive. These local washerwomen are well organized and when one fixes a price there is no use to look further for a lower price.

Again, the average hand washer is very destructive to the clothes, especially any thing like lingerie, shirts, collars and etc. They treat 'em rough and about two washings is all they will stand. Besides, they are more than likely to boil your especial Sunday shirt with something that will fade on it, and when you proceed to deck yourself out Sunday morning, you find your shirt a pretty good replica of Jacob's coat of many colors.

All of these, and a thousand other wasteful annoyances can be taken care of by an up to date laundry. There is no doubt that one properly operated in Clanton would pay.

SCHOOL OPENING UP

Prof. Martin called books at the City school yesterday morning and the pupils looked real familiar tramping through town with their arms full of books.

Prof. Stevens, at the High School is allowing his bunch just a few more days to get Christmas out of their systems, but next Monday he is looking for every one or them to show up and get down to business again.

COLD BATH

On last Monday evening a young man and a lady friend was turning around near the Tallapoosa River near Cherokee Bluff, and his reverse hung with him, running backward in to the river. It is said that the water is 30 feet deep there and both of the occupants followed it down to the bottom, but fortunately neither of them lost their life.

The car belonged to Mr. William Fiquette, of Clanton. After they had fished it out of the river, it was brought to a "Ford hospital" in Clanton for repairs.

This is the second accident of this nature that has occured lately in this vicinity. One Sedan being plunged off a ferry in to the Coosa River above Lock 12 last week.

MR. BUTLER LOWE BETTER

We are pleased to be able to say this week that our good friend, Mr. Butler Lowe, who has been quite sick for some days, has about recovered and is out and about again.

Dr. Ezell and family returned yesterday morning from their holiday home going trip.

Telling the truth at all times is not popular but it certainly is satisfactory.

The cheapest guy in the world is the fellow who can be bought by flattery.

A state wide vacination of all our dogs is the next step towards safety from hydrophobia.

"Love me, love my doggie" don't mean a thing with all this hydrophobia going around.

Paris says dresses are to be worn at knee length next summer. Every man will want a job that will keep him on the streets then.

Since it developed that Mrs. Edwards did not die of poison the Edwards case has disappeared from the front pages.

They say now that bobbed hair causes the back of the neck to harden, turn yellow and crack up like a 'tater grater.

Human life is getting indeed cheap when a man can be found beat up, and his head crushed, even unto death and no one even offers to investigate.

Laws beecome more and more in disrepute every day when notorious law breakers go free, while some cheap skate, with no friends, has to pay the penalty.

One trouble in trying to aid in law enforcement is that if you or any of your kin folks ever lay down the least gap you will be prosecuted to the end of the chapter.

If the average crook could induce one to really believe all the glowing stories of loyalty and honesty he tells, his pathway would certainly be strewn with roses.

Had you ever stopped to wonder how that "junk pile" at Muscle Shoals could have developed into such a troublesome question in Congress.

War is not dead yet. Japan talks peace and builds battle fleets. Germany talks poverty and masses his armies. We laugh at the whole bunch and spend more millions on our Navy.

France has decided not to get out of Germany yet with her army. She wants to see the color of Heinie's gold before she vacates.

Just about the time a fellow concludes that he has the world by the tail with a down hill pull, his hold slips and the world goes on without him.

The stork must have brought the weather man twins or triplets to his house, for he seems to have a grouch on like that in the way he is dealing out weather to the rest of us.

Failing eyesight is sometimes caused by over work, sometimes by age, but more often of late by imbibing a little of that syncopated Christmas cheer.

We went all through the holidays without a nogg, or its equivilent, and from the way some parties we saw who had partaken looked, we will never cease to be glad that we did.

All of the modernity that can ever be crammed in to the world will never be able to stop the demand for good, clean honest men and boys where the jobs are good and the pay worth while.

The preacher in New York who is pastor of the largest church there says "it looks like the world is bound to go to hell and that is perfectly all right with him, if they want to go, why, go ahead." He is interested in saving his church if he can.

The latest bombshell in national affairs is that France has concluded to not pay us that three billion dollars she borrowed during the war. We raised that cash by the sale of Liberty bonds and our government will have the [illegible] interest and all Taxa[illegible] reduced if we [illegible] bonds. Our people [illegible] taxes to pay.

TIME TO SHAKE LOOSE

Some of the democratic senators in Washington are fussing and fuming yet over the results of the national election, ascribing many different causes for the disgraceful defeat that was ours at that time.

Most of these reasons are fallacious and foolish from the fact that they al lattempt to explain that disaster from political view points of politicians and never seem to remember that the great American poltariat had anything to do with it.

The facts of the case are very simple. That defeat was not of democracy, but of a certain element of imagined leaders, who had absolutely lost sight of, and eliminated, every vestige of any thing democratic from the issues of the campaign, and in stead had erected certain selfish ideals to work to that were totally abhorent to every really free man in the country who had more respect for his principle sof democracy than he could possibly have for the mongrel organization that dominated the notoriously undemocratic convention, that was bought by New York for a purpose and staged, too utterly apparent, for the carrying out of that purpose, for the absolute disintegration of the party.

Democracy was maliciously murdered, with malice aforethought, by these hired manipulators and selfish promotere of a system that was as far from democracy as the sun is from the earth. Purity of principles and honesty of purpose could not exist in the atmosphere of that scandalous orgirie of political crooks and thugs, so democracy forsook the scene and a blooted ghost was floated before the people as a democratic platform and, naturally an intelligent electroate with high standards and ideals of a decent and honest government of the people, refused to follow in the wake of this mongrel counterfeit.

The Democratic party of the United States is not dead, neither will it ever die in a land of freedom and self-government. The high and holy ideals of democracy are as militant today as ever and as dear to the honest voter now as ever, so long as a putrid corps of pure amalgamated crookedness and personal chicanery is bound to its chariot, it will fail to function and to rise to that eminence of power that rightly belongs to it.

In this connection we wish to say plainly and emphatically, that the state of New York has been the bane of democracy for more than thirty years. They have no party convictions at all, but manage to hold the balance of power because the leaders of both parties seem to fear them with their large electoral vote. They play one party against the other as clearly as ever a game of cards was "stacked." The one they can make the most profitable deal with is the one they tie to and, at the same time, they play the game so shrewdly that they contrive to keep the other party up there butting out their brains and resources against a situation that is already fixed.

When democracy again comes into her own, New York and the down east vote will have to be ignored. Go before the real people of the great out of doors, the real people who are the bone and sinue of the great land, and proclaim the old time principles of freedom as taught, first, last and all the time, in the school of democracy and you will discover that these people are longing for the time to dawn when democracy can again show them the way to come into their own.

Cut loose from all that down east rotteness and let the agricultural South, West and Northwest show the world how wisely and how well they can govern.

That time is coming and then democracy will mean something.

ANOTHER SHOT AT HIM

Some guy has invented a one wheel mortocycle that will make 200 an hour.

He is evidently in the employ of the fool killed and we predict that he will mop up.

Rev. J. T. Nelson, route 4, was in town last Saturday. He will be 92 years young January 4, 1925. This is remarkable when we remember the fact that he made two bales of cotton and a good corn crop last year, 1924. He did all of the work himself. He did all of the work himself.

Passing Its 74th Mile Stone

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad enters the year of 1925, proud of its accomplishments during each of the 74 years of its corporate existence and with a renewed pledge of continued service to the public.

Among the physical improvements recently authorized and now nearing completion, are the construction of 105 miles of double track costing nearly ten million dollars, the rebuilding of numerous bridges costing approximately six million, the installation of automatic signals and automatic train control costing over a million dollars and the acquisition of a large amount of additional power (engines), freight and passenger equipment.

In addition to these amounts already authorized, an additional sum of nearly ten million dollars has been appropriated for new rails, double track work, added equipment and other improvements which will bring the 1925 expenditures already authorized up to practically $22,000,000.

In each of the 74 years of its existence this road has striven honestly and effectively to render a superior freight and passenger service to the territory it traverses. That it has succeeded, is evidenced by the fact that people everywhere call it "The Old Reliable."

A HAPPY CHRISTMAS

Many people, no doubt, had a real happy time this year at their homes on Christmas day. It is always a season that produces, more or less, of a family spirit and causes the absent ones to long for a visit to the old home and a mingling of memories of other days.

Rev. W. S. Cox and his devoted wife were rendered especially happy and thankful this Christmas for the joyous and handsome throng of children and grandchildren who braved the inclement weather to "set their feet under Pa's table" for one more Christmas feed. As has always been the fact, they were not disappointed, for he table was loaded with good eats and every one was bubbling over with happiness.

We learn that about 20 grandchildren were present and, it goes without saying, that the place belonged to thm while they were there.

We congratulate our esteemed friend and his excellent wife on the occasion and wish for them many returns of the day with similiar pleasures.

IS ABOUT WELL AGAIN

It is with much pleasure that we can announce this week, that Mr. H. L. Bruce, who had such an intensive attack of pneumonia just before the holidays, is fairly on the way to a perfect recovery.

He is able to be up and about again and, if he is not too hard headed, and gets out in this bitter winter weather too much, he will soon be his same old jolly self.

There is not much demand for the fellow who drinks liquor except by the bootleggers.

Miss Mary Upchurch will return to New Orleans next Monday to begin her college work again in Sophia Newcomb after having spent about two weeks here with her parents Dr. and Mrs. E. E. Upchurch. Miss Upchurch is a graduate of Judson College at Marion and when she completes her course at Sophia Newcomb she will be highly educated and thoroughly ready for her life work.

Mr. Renfroe Longcrier and wife were the guests of his uncle Mr. P. G. Marcus, and family the latter part of last week. They belong to the "Newly Weds" having married just before the holidays. His wife was Miss Grace Webster of Tuscumbia prior to her marriage while Mr. Longcrier lived at Sheffield. They will make their future home at Florence.

Miss Lona Thompson was here the first part of the week visiting her many friends. She holds a responsible position with the Nash Tailoring Company in Birmingham. She is a former graduate of the Chilton Hi and has also completed a business course at Masseys College.

SHORT 24 PER CENT

According to statistics complied by F .W Gist, State Statistician, the farmers like a total of 24 per cent of making enough food and feed to do them this year.

This will require the sending of $60,000,000 out of the State to purchase these supplies.

He attributes this shortage to the planting of too much cotton by our farmers and urges them to cut down the acreage for 1925.

OPPOSES FEDERAL RAIL OWNERSHIP

Government Operation Would Mean Increased Taxation for General Public, Says Rail Head.

Opposition to Government ownership of the railroads, not because of the interests of the present owners but rather because of the burdens and disadvantages the change would impose upon the people as a whole, was expressed by C. H. Markham, president of the Illinois Central Railroad, in an address before the recent convention of the American Bankers Association.

"We have never favored Government ownership as a national policy," Mr. Markham said. "If the railroads are taken over by the Government, we must face the fact that the big step in reversing our old and settled policy will be taken. If there is no particular reason why the Government should not own and run the railroads, is there any reason why it should not take over also the banks, the stores, the factories, the farms, until all of us are Government employees and the ideal of the soviet is attained? The railroads are the first line of defense against those who would make this country a second Russia.

"The railroads have about 2,000,000 employees, approximately as many employees as there are in all the Government services—Federal, State, county and municipal—put together. If the railroads are taken over by the Government, there will be one Government employee out of every ten wage earners in the country, instead of one out of every twenty, as at present.

Doubling Taxation

"Then, too, there is the matter of taxation. The railroads, under private ownership, are among our heaviest taxpayers. Last year they paid taxes amounting to $3 for every man, woman and child in the country. In some counties, particularly in the Middle West, the railroads pay from 10 per cent to nearly 50 per cent of the taxes collected. Under Government ownership, the railroads would be no more subject to taxation than the post offices now are. In some way the Government would have to make up the difference of $3 a head for every person in the country. In many counties the taxes on the remaining property would have to be nearly doubled. The result would be an unbearable burden that might force many of our local governments to stop payments on their bonds and go into bankruptcy. The tax problem would be a great deal more vexatious than it is today.

"Then, too, the acquisition of the railroads would add more than twenty billion dollars to our national debt. If Government railroads in this country were no more successful than they are elsewhere today in the world, the interest on that twenty billions of purchase price would be the cause for additional burdens on the taxpayers left to carry it. As the tax burden developed, it would not be surprising to see other industries welcoming Government ownership for themselves. They would gain immunity from taxation in turn, and their owners probably would be protected from loss. The Constitution prevents the confiscation of private property, and Government ownership can be accomplished only by paying a fair price for the properties taken over.

Bad for Public

"I do not oppose Government ownership of the railroads on behalf of the present owners of the railroads, many of whom would obtain safety in Government bonds in return for securities which have not paid a return in years. I oppose Government ownership of the railroads because I believe that it would be bad for our people as a whole. It would open the way to Government ownership of everything, and at the same time it would certainly lead to the wrecking of our highly essential railway service, if the lessons of experience offered by other nations mean anything at all to us."

Youngsters Exhibit 290 Pigs

Fourteen banks in Lee County, Iowa, recently co-operated with the Breeders' Association in conducting a boys' and girls' club rally. The boys and girls brought in the best pigs that they were raising and exhibited them for $150 in cash prizes which the banks contributed.

Quincy, Illinois, bankers are offering pure bred boars and high grade seed corn to the value of $500 to farmers who attend the Adams County Fair. These prizes will be distributed by lot to farmers of each township, the amount to be based on the township attendance at the fair.

The Missouri Bankers Association inter-county contest for boys' and girls' clubs is the result of action taken at the annual convention, when $1,600 was provided for premiums. The premiums, not less than $25 each, are to be awarded to counties to pay the expenses of club winners to junior farmers' week at the Missouri College of Agriculture; $100 is to be used to pay the expenses of the state champion demonstration team to the meeting of the Bankers Association, when the team will present its winning demonstration.

STEPPING AHEAD OF THE BANK CROOK

Bankers Association Official Gives Rules to Foil Criminals and Avoid Loss.

By JAMES E. BAUM,
Manager Protective Department
American Bankers Association

The direct cost of all crimes in this country has now reached its highest peak. Statistics reveal startling increases in nearly every type of crime during the past ten years. The total financial loss through the operations of criminals is estimated at more than $3,500,000,000 for this year. A few of the items follow:

Embezzlement	$ 120,000,000
Credit frauds	450,000,000
Burglary, larceny, and petty thefts	850,000,000
Forgery, including worthless and bogus checks	100,000,000
Seaport robberies, piracies and customs frauds	100,000,000
Railroad thefts	25,000,000
Stock frauds	1,700,000,000
Insurance frauds	1,000,000,000
Arson	50,000,000
Miscellaneous	75,000,000

I am giving cold figures, not to startle any one unless it be toward more extreme care in handling and safe guarding funds and valuables. Right here let me quote rules to help foil criminals known as "check passers" or "scratchers"; they will help you to avoid serious loss:

1. Never write checks with a pencil. Use pen and ink or, if possible, a check protector.
2. Fill in all blank spaces.
3. Don't erase. Errors should be corrected by writing a new check and destroying those incorrectly written.
4. Never give a blank check to a stranger and never cash a stranger's check without an indorsement which you have positively verified.
5. Make checks payable to "cash" or "bearer" only when you personally present them at your bank. Otherwise use the name of the person you intend shall receive payment.
6. Never place your signature alone as an indorsement on checks you intend to deposit. Write above or below your signature the words "For deposit only."
7. Never sign blank checks. If you expect to be absent any length of time open a separate account subject to check of your employee or agent.
8. Guard your cancelled vouchers as you would a valid check, leaving none where they may be easily taken.
9. Keep your check books securely locked up and be careful how and where you sign or exhibit your signature.
10. Beware of the magic of the word "certified." Ordinary certification stamps can be duplicated almost as easily as any other rubber stamp.
11. Watch checks which apparently bear the makers' "O. K." or other form of approval. They are more easily forged than the full signature.
12. Safeguard your checks as you would your money, for they represent money.
13. Deposit slips provide space for your name, usually upon the upper lines. Those written incorrectly should be destroyed as otherwise your signature will be available for fraudulent use. You can prevent loss by first writing the detail of amounts deposited and then printing your account name.

The bankers' campaign for everybody to "pay by check" has borne fruit. It has been estimated that today more than 95 per cent. of the business of the U. S. is transacted by the use of checks or other credit instruments. That means about six and one-half billion checks will be written by bank depositors in this country during 1924 and they will total about $500,000,000,000 in amount, or one hundred times the money in circulation.

Banks War on Crooks

The average bank depositor when queried as to what his bank does to protect his deposits, will probably tell you they are kept in a great vault and that armed watchmen are employed, as well as an elaborate and efficient burglary and robbery alarm system. He may not know that the 23,000 banks comprising the American Bankers Association have constantly and conveniently available an army of highly trained specialists who wage a continuous and relentless warfare against the bank criminal. These operatives are within easy reach of any member bank. Criminals know that if they attack a member bank they are attacking one of the most powerful and effective protective organizations in existence.

Another medium by which bankers prevent many financial crimes or losses is the warnings continually broadcast from the American Bankers Association and forty-eight state bankers associations. These warnings keep the trap constantly set and carry out the Association's plan of crime prevention as contrasted with detection.

Danger Ahead

American farmers should not increase their wheat acreage for 1924. If they increase the acreage by three million acres, as is indicated by the intentions to Seed Wheat Survey of the government, and normal conditions again prevail in other wheat producing countries, next year's wheat market will be glutted and once more wheat prices will be ruinously low. The present high price of wheat is due to poor crops in other countries and in certain sections of the United States.—W. M. Jardine, Advisory Council, Agricultural Commission, American Bankers Association.

MAPLESVILLE NEWS

Saturday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Guinn was the scene of a beautiful surprise birthday party given for their mother, Mrs. M. P. Guinn.

The guests were all assembled in the dining room which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. Mrs. Quinn knew nothing of it until she walked into the dining room. In the center of the table on a mound of pink roses and green foliage was the birthday cake on which 66 candles in rosebud holders were burning. The guests were seated at the table and Mrs. J. W. Guinn assisted by her sister served a most delicious dinner. After dinner the ladies were given a handerchief to them, for Mrs. Guinn the one that did the best work to get a prize. Mrs. Hull won the prize which was a pretty box of candy. All spent a most delightful evening. Those present were: Mrs. W. E. Northup, Mrs. Hull, Mrs. W. A. Daniels, Mrs. T. W. Jefferson, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Guinn and son Billie.

A Protestant Christian organization is being organized in Clanton and is meeting with much success.

It is an organization that appeals to all high type American citizens. Its "Go to church" movement should help to build any community to a higher standard. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

WALNUT CREEK NEWS

On Christmas day a beautiful program was rendered at Walnut Creek church. It was a success from every point of view. Rev. G. B. Golden made an inspiring talk on "The Birth of Our Savior," and the congregation like the wise men of the east, opened their treasures and gave gifts. After the program, the curtain was removed and on the scene was two beautiful Christmas trees nicely decorated for the occasion and loaded with presents for every member of the Sunday School. In spite of the cold every one enjoyed the service and went home feeling good.

A MEMBER

CHANDLER—SAPP

The following marriage notice is clipped from the Douglas (Ga.) Enterprise.

Miss Chandler is a sister of Mr. H. F. Chandler, of our town and the notice will be of interest to many of our readers.

Miss Gamma Leah Chandler became the bride of Mr. Iverson Council Sapp Sunday evening at eleven o'clock at a quiet home wedding at the residence of Mr. Percy N. Smith on South Madison Ave. The ceremony which was performed by Rev. Guyton Fisher, witnessed by only a few close friends and the immediate family.

...costume was of blue ...Faille silk, combined with tan, embroidered in blue and gold, with mole skin trimmings.

She made her home here for eleven years, most of the time conducting one of the most up to date millinery stores of the city. Because of a serious illness that over came her while she was at the Atlanta markets in September, she had been with relatives at her former home in Montgomery since leaving the hospital in Atlanta. For the past two weeks she has been the guest of Mrs. Smith and while their wedding plans were revealed to only a few friends, their marriage was not a surprise.

Mr. Sapp came to Douglas in early manhood and has since been connected in a business way with Sapp's Pharmacy.

They are making their home with his brother, Mr. R. H. Sapp on Gaskin Avenue.

They have hosts of friends who wish for them the best of things in life.

THE POINT OF VIEW

When ever you come to figure up on it, the old world is a fairly decent place to live.

There are some draw backs and disappointments to keep us keyed up and make us hustle.

There are also some very disagreeable people and a large sprinkling of crooks, but they are really a help to you for every time one works you for a sucker you learn that much and are better qualified to handle the next one.

So far as the disagreeable fellow is concerned, you can let him absolutely alone and leave him to grouch out his destiny as he sees fit.

There are a great number of good people in the world and when you are down hearted and out of patience it is the finest thing in the world to listen at them talk. The sun is always shining for them and they reflect the light on the rest of us as they go along.

All in all, let's try to be on good terms with the old world, forgetting the bad and appreciating the good.

We dont know what the next one will be like.

GANDY—BAILEY

Mr. Clint F. Gandy and Miss Maude Bailey were married at 8 o'clock p. m. on Dec. 25, at the home of Rev. W. S. Cox, on Route 7, who performed the ceremony for them.

Both of these young people are well and favorably known out in their section and have many friends who wish for them every happiness.

FOR WORKING PEOPLE

The best of workers get out of sorts when the liver fails to act. They feel languid, half-sick, "blue" and discouraged and think they are getting lazy. Neglect of these symptoms might result in a sick spell, therefore the sensible course is to take a dose or two of Herbine. It is just the medicine needed to purify the system and restore the vim and ambition of health. Price 60c. Sold by

JACKSON—WHITE

Last Sunday, about 11:30, a. m. at the home of the bride, Mr. Winford Jackson and Miss Myrtle White were happily united in marriage, Rev. A. T. Davis officiating.

The groom is the son of Mr. T. J. Jackson and the bride the daughter of Mr. Wess White.

After the ceremony an elegant wedding dinner was served where all present enjoyed a most sumptious repast. The following day, at the home of the groom, another most elegant and delicious dinner was served to the happy couple and their friends.

Both of these new voyagers on the sea of matrimony are residents of Chilton county and will continue to make their home here.

They are exceptionally popular and have scores of friends who unite in wishing for them a long life together filled with happiness, health and, prosperity.

HOLIDAY GUESTS

Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Bruce had as holiday guests last week, Mr. and Mrs E. L. Jnoes, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Jones and sons, Claude, Morris, Clifford and J. D. Jr., also Miss Zuna Sullivan, all of Grady, Alabama.

They made a most pleasant party and, it goes without saying that their entertainment was all that goes to make a Christmas time the jolliest and happiest of the year.

GETTING READY FOR 1925

The merchants in Clanton have had a busy week of it so far. They are taking stock and cleaning up things for the new year business.

In the drug stores this is an especially tedious job, for they have thousands of separate and almost unnambic packages to count up. It sounds like being in a Chinese shop to hear the clerks call out some of these titles. Even castor oil has to have a handle.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK GOOD

The large bankers and great monied men say that 1925 will be the most prosperous year we have had since before the war.

They do not predict any spectacular boom times, but they claim that all lines of business will be good and that money will be plentiful to finance every needed occupation. Railroads and other large enterprises are arranging for many costly improvements.

TO MOVE SOON

The Wingard Brothers, who have been operating a first class general store for several years on the corner near the railroad, in the Headley building, will move now in a few days into the building recently vacated by Bean Bros. up near the Jones Hardware building.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, JANURAY 8, 1925 NUMBER 18

A SUGGESTIVE CASE

A long drawn out and hard fought "drive" for a Community Chest has just been completed in Montgomery All of the money asked of those good people for the charity work of 1925 was given and the "Chest" put to work.

The promoters of this "Community Chest" idea are bitterly opposed to any object of charity appearing on the streets and most especially condemn any one who gives to them a n'ckel or dime.

All right. About a week ago a poor starving and freezing derilect human being was accidently discovered in an old abondoned cabin in the suberbs. He was helpless, in talters and his extremities frozen and he had lain there seven days without food, water or warmth.

The office of the sheriff was called and two deputies came out to investigate. They mercifully removed the poor man to the jail and gave him shelter and food.

This story got in to the papers and the od of the poor raised up a good Samaritan. The poor dying wreck had then been in jail for over two days, when this big hearted man—named McCormack, we believe—read his pitiful story and got busy. He had him removed to the hospital, given a good room and the best of medical attention, gave orders for everything possible to be done for him, and he footed the bill out of his own pocket.

For more than a week these pitiful details appeared in the papers, but, strange to say, that wonderful saver of the poor, the "Community Chest," never figured at all. The hinges must be rusty or something. The most likely explanation is that there was so much red tape wound around that "chest" that they could not get it untangled in time to do anything for this poor some mother's son.

Hunger and cold can not wait for a routine of red tape unwinding. Relief has to be given promptly or grim death closes the picture.

No matter who or what a person may be, criminal, tramp, hobo, or what not, no matter what his creed or color may be, if he is starving or freezing he is human and must have help promptly or it will be everlastingly too late. Help first and investigate afterwards.

This poor unfortunate man has since died under an operation to remove his frozen legs.

NITRATE OF SODA

Mr. Jasper Dennis told us the other day that quite a good deal of nitrate of soda had already been bought and carried home by the farmers.

Like everything else, it is up some this year. The price now is ranging around $55 per ton.

However, farmers say they can hardly make a crop without it these days, so it sells right on. Wish Muscle Shoals was making 100,000 tons per year now, the price would come down about half.

LIVE AS EVER

We were indeed glad to see our old time friend, Mr. T. J. Henderson, of Mt. Creek, Tuesday. He only had time to chat us a few minutes but he is a live wire yet.

IS GRATEFUL

Clanton, Ala. cDc. 30, 1924.

Dear Editor:-

Permit me to say through the columns of your paper that the contribution to the Orphans Home on the 23 was good, and to thank each and every one who saw fit to donate, for your generosity. I believe that God will abundantly bless each of you.

I did not get the amount contributed from each community but will say that some of the Rural churches contributed very generously but I suspect that the Clanton church contributed more than any one church for which we greatly thank them.

There was 1900 pounds of produce and dry goods shipped from Clanton on the 23rd. In this shipment we had, ficur, corn, corn meal, sugar, sweet potatoes, syrup, fruit, canned tomatoes, candy, lard, and 31 pounds of dry goods. I am persuaded to believe that some of us at least if not all gave of the best we had. It seemed that there was some of the prettiest fruit that I had even seen.

I again thank you for your donation and pray God's blessings upon each and every one of you and believe that we can and will do better next time. I was about to forget. There was one or two churches that sent in a collection of money for which we were very thankful. I sent the money to Bro. Collie with instructions to spend it for the children to the very best advantage, and I believe that he did so.

Yours very truly

J. Z. MIMS

A TOURIST CAMP

Well, after all these years, it looks now like our highway project will soon be a fact.

In the meantime, it looks like it would be a very wise thing for the citizens here to erect and equip a nice, convenient and inviting Tourist Camp close in, as an invitation for these thousands who tour back and forth, every year to stop and see us.

According to the statistics prepared by the Florida people who are directly concerned in this tourist business, over 50,000 people will pass down and back over this road every year, to say nothing of the more local travelers who will pass along.

This means over 100,000 people you would have an opportunity to get custom out of if we had a good place fixed for them to camp.

To our mind it looks like a good proposition. In fact we know it is from the experience of other towns.

THAT COTTON MILL

Some few Verbena people have mentioned the cotton mill project to us this week, and were high up to see the movement started.

Verbena is splendidly located to serve the cotton farmers of the county and is easy to reach.

The Power Company will cooperate with them if they want their power. The L. & N. railroad will also lend a helping hand if they wish it.

It will be a big thing for Verbena and a bigger thing for Chilton county if they will get busy and establish a cotton mill there.

Miss Esther Johnson, of Thorsby, has returned to Piedmont College located at Demorest Georgia.

THE SMITHERMAN CASE

Last week we expressed the dissatisfaction of a large number of citizens in regard to the peculiar way in which the death of Mr. Ed Smitherman occured, and the mysterious failure of the proper officials to even make an effort towards an investigation.

Mr. Tom Littlejohn, our worthy sheriff, gave us some additional data in regard to that case, in which it appears that he did what he could in arranging for an investigation, but the facts as related by him, add another phase to this peculiar case, that renders it still more peculiar and the failure to have proper investigation more strange.

He tells us, in the first place, that the wife of Mr. Smitherman came to him with a request that he have warrants issued for certain parties. He told her that was distinctly the province of the Solicitor and advised her to take the matter up there, especially as that would relive her of the costs. He said the solicitor declined to issue the warrants on the grounds of no evidence.

The sheriff then proceeded to look in to the matter on his own responsibility and as the grand jury term of court, was near at hand, he summoned about seventeen witnesses to appear before that body and testify as to what they knew of the case.

These parties were on hand for two or three days, but never called before that body and it finally adjourned without taking any cognizance of the matter at all.

So far as we have ever heard of this is the first time on record, when a grand jury went in to adjournment, with witnesses on hand, anxious to inquire in to the very suspicious death of a human being under their jurisdiction.

The public at large is full of wonder that such a glaring miscarriage of an attempt to get justice before a court of law could happen, even in Chilton county where many wonderful legal opinions are rendered and where justice in certain cases seems to sleep.

So far as we know, none of the officials ever took this case up officially with the surgeon who waited on the dying man after he reached the Hospital. We have done so and he told us that the head of the victim was crushed for about 3 inches on one side. That the shoulder on the same side was entirely broken. That on the opposite side of his head was a serious contusion from a blow of some kind, that might have been fatal within itself. The shoulder on this side was also badly bunged up and that quite a number of bruises appeared on other parts of the body.

It is given out that this man came to his death by falling out of a door, from 8 to 14 inches high from the ground, into a yard that is said to be clean, smooth and partly sandy.

Is it reasonable for any one to believe that this man could possibly have been so terribly broken up and bruised in so many different places by a fall like that.

The blood of this dead man is calling from the grave for, at least, the courtesy of an investigation. If such cases as this go by unnoticed is there anything so cheap in Chilton county as human life?

We do not have the remotest idea, not even a suspicion, as to who done this man to death, but we do say, that it rests now as a stigma against those whose duty it is to uphold the majesty of the law and to guarantee its protection of life and property to the people.

Even at this late day this case should be looked into rigidly and with a stern detirmination to mete out justice wherever it belongs.

Such indifferent lapses as this are becoming entirely too common here and we either need service or a house cleaning.

TIMES CHANGE

When we were a boy, and even after we were grown up and butting our own nose against the world for a living, such a thing as playing marbles or baseball on Sunday was only rarely indulged in by the negroes and white riff raff, and that too, in some sequestered nook where they were not likely to be seen.

A boy or young man who boasted any respectability, or who received any recognition in society could not have been induced to go in to a game under any circumstances, social standing absolutely gone. Be-

And as for fishing on Sunday! Great Scott! Your character would have been utterly ruined and your sides, had some vigilant minion of the law chanced to spy you engaged in your piscatrial sport, it would have been the jail for you post haste.

There were certain Sunday laws in old Georgia back in those days and they meant something too. Public sentiment was behind them and their enforcemtn was sure and certain.

Now, Sunday has become strictly a day for sports and recreaton. Our Sunday papers are full of sporting events, from brutal fistic encounters on up the line. In fact, no game or sport is barred on Sunday.

For fishing and hunting Sunday is chosen above all other days. The Clubs choose Sunday for nearly all of their sporting events and the cities bid against each other to capture famous football or baseball events.

Sunday is no longer a day of rest, but is one of the most strenuous days of the week n hunting, fishing, racing and all other popular passtimes.

Times certainly change in our march of progress.

READY FOR THE FARMERS

Mr. D. Y. Johnston unloaded a car of splendid mules, broke and ready for the plow last Tuesday.

It wont be his fault if everybody dont make a good crop this year, for he is ready to supply the necessary motive power on short notice.

A SAD TRUTH

There is hardly a person who has attained maturity that can not testify to the pitiful instability of some friendships.

It is disheartening, after you have built your trust upon some friend, whom you have served faithfully, been true to, perhaps, at times, under embarrasing circumstances and tried to help him along all you could, to suddenly find your confidence misplaced, your service disregarded and your trust smashed to atoms by this friend, who you discover has placed his allegiance with your enemies and has only been playing you for what was in sight.

It is indeed a pity that humanity has to cloak such people under its common mantle, but it is sorrowfully true.

Still, it is better to go on down the road of life, still making friends and still taking chances on a Judas now and then, than it is to draw within your shell and sour on the world. Now and then you will tie on to one who is true as steel and whose word means something and whose companionship is precious beyond price.

LOOKS LIKE OLD TIMES

Credit should be given where credit is due, hence, we feel constrained to say that the gang working for Engineer Porter on the new move both there has shown and pep that any similar bunch we have observed since the war.

They have a hop and hustle that reminds one of the old days when it was go to it or get off the job. They deserve praise and we gladly extend to them our hearty commendation.

STILL QUITE SICK

We are sorry to annouce that Dr. J. P. Crumpton is still quite a sick man, though word comes from the hospital that he is now on the mend again.

After practically recovering from his first attack of flue, he was so unfotunate as to suffer a relapse. He was then transferred to the hospital where he has been putting in a hard fight for recovery. We certainly hope that he will not have any more bad luck but will be out among us all again right away.

WILLIAM J. MORRIS DEAD

On Wednesday December, 31, Mr. William J. Morris, who lived two and one half miles west of Clanton, breathed his last, and was buried the following day at the Liberty Hill cemetery, Rev. J. D. Hughes, his pastor, saying the last sad words over his grave.

The deceased was aged 55 and had been a devoted member of this church for many years and was loved and respected by all who knew him and his taking off has left a void in that community that will be hard to fill.

He leaves a family of his own, besides other near and dear relatives.

Mr. Morris had been sick for several months and had been twice to a Birmingham hospital for operation.

The first time they gave him some temporary relief, but the last trip they saw that he was beyond human skill and was doomed, so they sent him home to die.

We, together with his other many friends tender our sympathy to the bereaved in this sad hour.

Funeral Director, J. Mell Martin, was in charge of the burial arrangements.

A BIG BUSINESS DEAL

As the New Year opened up and people begun to arrange for the affairs ahead, one of the largest commercial deals ever pulled off in Clanton was put over.

The famous and extensive Clanton Mercantile store, that in its greatness as an emporium of merchandise, is a splendid monument to the ability of Mr. J. C. Jones in that line, changed hands and is now the property of Mr. D. C. Alred.

We learn that Mr. Jones is going to retire from such a streneous routine of business and take life more easily, for awhile. Though we doubt his ability to hold himself in leash for long. The Clanton cotton market without him would not seem like itself to the farmers.

Mr. Alred the new head of the mammouth department store is well known here in business circles and is a great hustler. He will give his entire time to keeping the business up to its present high standards and will endeavor to serve the public in a manner that will retain all present patrons and win many more as the days go by.

J. HANCE ALRED RETIRES

As another change ushered in by the New Year, Mr. J. Hance Alred, of the popular Alred Drug Co., has sold out his interest in that concern and, as we learn, will retire from the drug business.

His former partner, Mr. Neighbors, and head clerk, Mr. Joe Calloway, took over the half interest owned by Mr. Alred and will continue business at the same stand.

We do not know what Mr. Alred proposes to do now, but he is too energetic to rest much and we are sure he will soon start something and it will be in Clanton too.

Mr. T. J. Baker, of the Baker School community, was in Clanton last Saturday looking after business matters. He belongs to that type of sturdy citizenship that keeps the world to-gether.

Going Forward

We are grateful for the many friends we have made and for the liberal patronage we have been given during the year just closing. We wish for every one a

MERRY CHRISTMAS AND HAPPY NEW YEAR

May happiness and prosperity abide continually with you all.

We shall strive even harder than ever to be your friend and to serve you as the New Year passes by.

Obligations of loyalty don't mean anything when a dollar is at stake.

Last Sunday was indeed a beautiful day—a little cool for "petting parties" however.

With no bells to ring and siren whistles to blow, New Years night was a good time to sleep this year.

Don't dare to grumble if the weather is bad. Just remember last fall and keep your mouth shut.

Sunday, as a day of real rough and rowdy hilarity and sport, has Christmas beat a block.

There are some appointive feeders at the public crib who never function at all except on pay day.

It looks like Muscle Shoals will pass down in history as a companion piece for Tea Pot Dome.

The flapper has about passed away. She disgusted everybody else and finally herself and then quit.

If every body acted as near right as they know how, we would hardly need a heaven to go to.

The Democratic party is going to get its feet back on the ground again pretty soon and then just watch it travel.

There are just as many democrats as ever. The trouble was in the last election they failed to get any ticket in the race.

If you wish to be popular and swim in the front rank, poke fun at the Devil, deride the bible and quote Darwin.

When the people wake up and take the bits in their teeth there will be many an old red nosed politician starve to death.

God must have wanted to give us an example of how pusillanimous and contemptable human beings could be when He made the bootlicker.

We have never been a corporation baiter, but we don't like the idea of two or three men owning every thing in the world.

Evangelist Brown says he is "going to run the devil out of Birmingham." For goodness sakes, old fellow, don't head him this way.

Why don't Edison or Burbank learn how to make a synthetic coffee? The Brazilian berry is getting so high that it costs about a dime to smell of the percalator.

The boys decided to save the town New Years night, so we are all here, right side up, yet. A window or so was broken and a barrel or two emptied and that was all.

"Opportunity knocks once at the door of every man," but often he skeedadles before you can open up to him.

It would be a godsend to our country if every child 16 to 18 years old could have enough steady work to form habits of industry instead of habits of idleness.

Packing houses quote pork at from 7 to 10 cents and beef at from 3 to 5 cents. When you want some for breakfast it costs you from 20 to 30 and from 15 to 25. According to that its worth more to dress him than it is, to raise him.

If there is anything that can fill a man's system any fuller of pure hard down rottenness than politics, it must be a big dose of undiluted wood acohol—then he would not last long to be a curse to civilization.

If you want to make money, learn tobe an artistic liar, a first grade flatterer, a man devoid of principle and without conscience and then go to it. If you don't succeed its your own fault.

When you are riding down grade and the going s fine, you have more friends than you can make room for but when you hit the bottom and have to start up the next one and it requires a little pushing, you will never be embarrased by the number who don't have time to help you.

THE FEDERAL CHILD LABOR LAW

The over zealous, or more likely varicious pedagogue, who first conceived the idea of this proposed Federal Child labor law is exactly the kind of citizen who should be expatriated. This country is afflicted with too many of his kind already.

The idea of any sane person, who has lived to the years of maturity, conceiving in his brain that the fathers and mothers of this country are able to raise their children in idleness until they are all eighteen years of age, is proof beyond argument that such a person is a most superlative idiot and does not possess as much real, every day human intelligence as would lie comfortably on the point of a cambric needle.

The English language does not contain enough adjectives to express how monumentally absurd such a proposition is to the masses of sane people who still live, move and have their being in this great country that used to be ours.

Think of a man and wife who have five or six boys and girls born to them, rearing and schooling the entire bunch, by the sole labor of that father, while the mother did the cooking, washing, ironing and scrubbing for the outfit. The labor of no ordinary workking man could possibly accomplish that task.

Still a proposition of that sort is before Congress now and some of those time-serving simpoots are doing all in their power to get it by.

Such a situation would result in the utter destruction of our government. Socialism and even anarchy would follow in the footsteps of such a preposterous law as that. Here is where the democratic doctrine of states rights would have to save or we would perish.

The public discussion of such assinine bills as that in the halls of Congress causes foreign nations to deride our system of government and have a contempt for our people.

GOT BACK HOME

We are indeed glad to find that great newspaper, the Birmingham News, has got back home again.

In recent months it has been taking a political swing around the circuit and has bowed down a few times to strange gods, but it has completed its flight and got back home now, for it says, all of these suggested panaceans for the redemption of the democratic party are fake nostrums and quack remedies.

It imples that there is nothing the matter with democracy. That it is still enthroned as the friend of the people and the last word in good government and that all it has to do is to fling out again its old time banner for states rights and tariff for revenue only and that all will be well.

The News is absolutely correct. The democratic party was not defeated in the last election because it was not in it.

That grunesome spectre that was hatched out in New York was not the democratic standard bearer in fact and the real party retired n disgust.

The democratic party represtnts a principle and is not the plaything of politicians. It is a real banner to be followed not a rabble to run after the band wagon of any man or combination of men.

It is today a living and militant force. A party of, by and for the real people.

GETTING OUT AGAIN

We were pleased to see Mr. Walter Pelwell out again Tuesday.

Some days ago he had a very narrow escape from serious injury or death, when a log dray, hevily loaded with logs upon which he was riding turned over.

In the fall he was fortunate to throw himself for enough to avoid being caught under the load, but one log struckhim on the hip and came near crushing it.

He was laid up for several days and is now out on crutches, but he hopes to be himself again now soon. His many friends hope so, at least.

SOME FINE NEW YEARS SERMONS

At both the Methodist and Baptist churches last Sunday, at the 11 o'clock hour, the pastors delivered, what might be called, their New Year invocations.

Large audiences were out to hear them and they certainly were not disappointed. Both ministers were evidently in the spirit for they, even eclipsed themselves, in some respects and this is a task that is very hard for any one to do.

If you dont start the New Year right it will not be their fault.

WOMAN'S COURAGE FOILS BANDITS

Grapples With Armed Robbers Who Attempt to Hold Up Her Bank.

UNARMED, WINS LONG FIGHT

One Bandit Killed and Other Wounded When Men Come to Rescue—Story Told at National Meeting of Bankers.

When the wave of crime against banks, which has reached unprecedented proportions, was under discussion at the recent meeting of the American Bankers Association at Chicago, and defense measures were up for consideration, the bankers were told how one resolute woman defended herself against two armed desperadoes in her little Western bank. The woman was Mrs. Mary Garlinghouse, cashier of the State Bank of Vera, Oklahoma, which she conducts single-handed. Her own story, as she told it in a report to the protective authorities of the Association, follows:

"While I was posting my ledger, with my back to the door, I heard a commotion. When I turned around there were two men back of the counter, with handkerchiefs over their faces. The larger made a jump for my gun, before I realized what was happening. The robbers each had a gun pointed at me, and one said, 'Lay down or I will shoot you!' I said, 'I will not lay down and you will not shoot me.' This conversation was repeated several times. I told them to cut out their foolishness.

"A man who was in the corridor when the bandits came laid down on the floor, face down. I tried to argue with the robbers and they began to get rough, but something within me seemed to realize that they were getting confused. I kept thinking that some one would come in or see us.

"The larger man got busy with the money, while the smaller one took care of me. He jerked me to my knees and hit me over the head. This jolted my glasses and I lifted my hand, waving it in front of his face and telling him to wait a minute. I took my glasses off and put them on the table. Lifting my hand caused this man to look up and he saw we were observed from across the street. Then he saw Constable Mosby, with his gun, and said to the man who was gathering the money, 'Don, we are seen, we must make our getaway!' He then grabbed me rather roughly and said: 'Come on here! You are coming along!'

Struggles With Robber

"Here is where our struggle began All the time we fought over his gun. I did not try to take it away from him, but kept moving it from one side to the other, and of course he was determined to point it straight at me. I told him, 'I will not go and I am not afraid of you. You will not shoot me!'

"We fought to the back door of the bank. When we got there, he raised his arm to fire at Mosby. I grabbed him around the neck, and he fired before I could get his hand. I am positive that this man was never hugged so tightly, nor ever will be, as I hugged him, realizing that I must fight for my life. The man tried his level best to kill me. What the other man was doing I do not know. My man was trying to pull me out the back door to their car, which was still running, I was determined he should not.

"R. C. Lapsley, the mayor, or Ed Mosby shot the man in the arm. There was a jerk and out the door we went Things were coming my way now. I pulled the robber into the weeds, half on his back and half on his left side

"The robber finally said, 'I will give up.' I said, 'Give me your gun.' He answered, 'I will not; I know you will shoot me.' So the struggle kept on We got back on our feet. I meant to have his gun and would fight him until I got it. We fought through the back room behind the counter. He begged me not to take him, and I asked him again for his gun and he said, 'No, I know you will shoot me.' We struggled through the front door and then Constable Mosby said, 'Drop your gun or I will shoot you.' The bandit gave up and the men took charge of him.

One Bandit Killed

"I wondered about the other bandit and started to look for him and found him in the closet in the back of the bank dying. R. C. Lapsley told me afterwards that when the bandit and I lurched through the back door the larger man, with his gun in his right hand and the sack of money in his left, stepped up to the door. They both fired at once. The robber dropped his gun and the money, but they could not see what became of him.

"If all towns had as brave men as we have here bank robbing would be a thing of the past. You can understand the remarkable marksmanship that was displayed, when I tell you that in our struggle at the back of the bank the men took several shots at the robber, but were very careful not to hit me. The robber got a shot in his right arm and a glancing shot in his left.

"All during the shooting and fighting, I felt confident I would get the best of my man. I felt that the man would not shoot me, and like all Western women did not lose my nerve Bank robbers, as a rule, are cowards and if one shows that he is not afraid of them they will lose their nerve."

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON SAVING AND INVESTING

Aunt Emmy and Maud were talking about saving money

"What does a savings bank do with the money people put in it, Aunt Emmy?" inquired Maud.

"It is invested in sound mortgages, perhaps, or government and corporation securities. You see, the men who run savings banks are trained financiers. They know what securities are good and what are questionable, so they invest the bank's funds—that is, the money they receive from their depositors—in the best securities in such a way that they will be able to pay you interest on your deposits and be able to return your money to you when you want it. In order to do that they must invest in securities that pay a higher rate of interest than they give you to cover the bank expenses and set aside a surplus against emergencies."

"But, Aunty, if the banks invest our money, why can't we invest it ourselves?"

"We could if we knew as much about investments as the bank does Bankers are not likely to make the mistakes made by the ordinary person They are not deceived by impressive looking stock certificates, plausible letters from brokers or charming voices over the telephone urging them to buy this or that. Your banker is a hard-headed business man who investigates thoroughly before he invests the bank's money. For this reason many conservative persons prefer to keep their savings in a savings bank, knowing that their money is in wise hands and that even though the rate of interest they get may be moderate their money is far safer than it would be if it were invested less skillfully."

"Surely, though, it must be possible to get more than 4 per cent on your money and yet be safe," Maud said.

"It is under certain conditions," Aunt Emmy agreed. "The trouble is that so few people are frank about their money matters with men who really can be trusted for advice. They would rather take the advice of a glib stock salesman. No matter how small a sum a person is thinking of investing, advice should be sought from a trust company or bank. Women especially don't seem to realize this.

"The savings bank is always safe It is a good plan to keep putting money in the savings bank until you have a good sum. Then withdraw part and invest it in some security paying a higher rate of interest. But be sure to seek good advice before you buy In this way you can always have some cash on hand in the bank, yet gradually convert most of your savings into high grade securities."—ANNE B. AYMES.

THE BURDEN OF GOVERNMENT

The financial burden of government has become increasingly heavy in recent years. It has, at times, reached the point of oppression. The Federal tax of 1920 aggregated more than five and one-half billion dollars. This year, after strenuous efforts to reduce the war-time peak, the total still exceeds three billion dollars—a sum far greater than the entire burden of funded debt accumulated as a result of the Civil War. State and local taxes have increased at an even greater rate. Taxation has become more than a problem; it is a threat of impending disaster.

Nor is the burden of government limited to taxation. We are oppressed by a multiplicity of restrictive laws and administrative regulations It is estimated that there are over two million laws and ordinances in the records of nation, states and municipalities. One adult person out of every twenty engaged in business or industry is a government official, agent or employee.

In the face of this, record, despite the general recognition of the overwhelming burden of government, we find ourselves constantly waging a defensive battle against plans and programs which would transfer still greater duties to government, which would hamper individual initiative still further, which will—if put into practice—crush individual ambition and destroy individual opportunity.

Under these circumstances it is our right—it is our duty—to affirm and defend sound principles of political faith as we have, on other occasions, supported sound principles of economic progress. The Constitution of the United States has stood for 135 years as the bulwark of our individual and our collective liberties. The Constitution has been and is now the greatest existing restraint upon an arrogant majority. It has been and is now the greatest existing defence of the very minorities which, at this time, are being led to denounce its restrictions.

One of our greatest needs is to repel the attacks now being made upon the integrity of this charter of our freedom. We should—we must—oppose vigorously all efforts to give Congress the power to override decisions of the Supreme Court—and thereby destroy the division of governmental power which is the inherent strength of our constitutional system.—Walter W. Head, American Bankers Association.

SHOULD HELP SOME

For one time in life, it looks like Clanton is destined to find itself in the right place.

We are right on the new highway, in fact, it splits Clanton wide open, and are far enough from each end to be good middle ground where we can handle the trade both ways.

It looks like some of the thousands spent in doing this work should gravitate in to the coffers of our business men.

The work will doubtless begin within the next thirty days.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, JANURAY 15, 1925 NUMBER 19

GETTING ON THE JOB

The grading crews for the South end of the Chilton county state highway are beginning to assemble on the job this week and work will be started right away.

We learn that Mr. D. Y. Johnston, of our city, has subcontracted the section of the road extending from the northern city limits to the connection with the part already graded, just beyond Lomax.

HAVE MOVED

The Wingard Brothers have moved their general merchandise business from their old stand near the depot, to the store recently vacated by Bean Bros.

They are nicely fixed up in their new quarters and will be glad for their old friends to drop in and see them.

It looks odd, however, to see them in their new location after knowing them so long at their old stand.

A WOMAN GOVERNOR

The State of Wyoming enjoys the peculiar distinction, since January 5, of being the only state in the union that ever possessed a female governor. After January 25 Texas will share honors with Wyoming, as her feminine governor will be inaugurated on that day.

We have heard of people being under "petticoat government" in a smaller place than this many times, but this is two examples of pulling that stunt by wholesale, so to speak.

About all the governing either of these good dames will do, will be to eat at the first table at the banquets and draw a pay check now and then for salary. There will be some male person behind the throne who will pull the strings and make these female martinettes dance at the proper time.

We wish them both well and hope this term of office will be so directed for them that they can retire, at the expiration of their terms amid great salvos of praise.

NOT INTERESTING ANYMORE

Automobile wrecks with their ghastly toll of dead and wounded, have become so common that they are no longer considered important enough to grace the front page of the big dailies.

They are considered now as a matter of course and all part of the days work.

Even a ten thousand foot crash with an airplane, killing all on board, rarely ever gets more than a brief two inch space way down in a corner.

This looks like good evidence that we can get used to anything and even death—if its the other fellow— dont interest us anymore.

BASKET BALL GAME

The C. C. H. S. Basket Ball team defeated Marbury last Tuesday night by a one sided score of 30 to 16.

This was a real good game the whole itme through, the only trouble was, it was on an indoor court, Chilton being used to outdoor work, but they convinced Marbury that the days had gone when they could beat Chilton in any kind of a game.

MRS. DEASON DROPS DEAD

Last Friday afternoon the grim reaper made a most sudden and calamitous call at the peaceful and happy home of Rev. T. J. Deason, on Route 3 when he took away the fond wife and mother who m much to her home and loved on

She had just finished her evening milking and turned to go to the house, when death struck her down and she passed away almost instantly. Heart failure was given as the cause.

The deceased was Miss Nannie Virginia Billingsley before her marriage. She was 56 years of age and had been the wife of Rev. Deason for 30 years. She leaves behind in her immediate family, her husband and six children.

The remains we at Shiloh cemetery on last where a large number of sorrowing friends assembled to bid her their final farewell.

Rev. W. S. Cox and Rev. Buford Lawrence both took part in the funeral services.

The News, together with the many other friends of the family, desires to extend its sincere sympathy to the bereaved

NO PLACE FOR POLITICS

Our clever neighbor, the Union-Banner, rather flys off at a tangent in commenting on our article on the Smitherman case.

We had hoped that the ideals of this neighbor of ours were of a higher type than to undertake to inject politics in to a question of the necessity of upholding law and order. If we expect to see our county, or our country, go forward to higher and better things, a due respect for law and its proper enforcement is absolutely essential.

When it comes to a question of law enforcement, no citizen worthy of the name, will ever consider the political faith of a person at all, the only essential question is to see that fair and impartial justice is meted out. The law is not supposed to be a respecter of person, but is instituted for the protection of us all, no matter what our creed, race nor previous conditions of servitude may have been.

So long as we direct the policies of the Chilton County News, and so long as we live, you will always find us on the side of law and order, upholding those officials who strive to do their duty and condemning those who close their eyes and travel the road of least resistance, or political expediency, while crime stalks unrebuked and unpunished in the very face of the public. There is no place for any kind of politics when it comes to the legal protection of life, liberty and property in this government of the free.

As to naming those who are to blame, we make no pretensions whatever to eminence as a legal authority, but we dare say, when crime is committed and no effort is made to investigate it, that under our system of law, those who have failed to do, what seems to us, a most important duty, will recognize, perhaps, better than we do, where the blame rests. Our province is to appeal for law enforcement and the protection of the public, while we deem it the duty of the properly constituted legal officials to know what their duty is and to exercise it.

In another article our good neighbor charges that "two citizens who pay very little taxes, consumed the time of the last grand jury, consequently they did not have time to investigate the Smitherman case."

Now, to our mind, this statement carries a few broad inferences that we are greatly surprised at.

In the first place, we infer from his statement, that a person's rights before the courts of our land are measured by the amount of tax he pays. We must admit that to us, this sounds like a very candid confession that only the well to do are entitled to, or need to expect protection by the law in our county.

Perhaps, the financial and tax paying standing of a man may have too much to do with the course of litigation in our courts, but we are shocked to observe that our neighbor boldly implies by his assertion that people who do not pay much tax are to be rebuked and censured for asking the courts to investigate their troubles. The theory of our legal department is that justice must rule and bear on the rich and poor with an even hand. For a public journal to intimate that it does not approve of this system is going a long distance in a very surprising direction. Candor though is to be respected, and, we judge, that these two parties referred to are also democrats, which is also a crime here that he seems should reap its own reward and not be surprised.

In another place our neighbor vents a little of his spleen over the abolishing of the County Court by the democrats and declares that if we had not have done away with that tribunal we would not have cause to complain about the laxity of law enforcement.

We have been informed that, according to the records, we have a larger representative force doing time now for law violations than we ever had under the County Court system. Then, the present system was, for a long time handicapped by the effort of people, who were not democrats either, to impede the due execution of the law, by an appeal to the Supreme Court on the constitutionality of the law abolishing the court and, for several months, the clerk of the court was prevented from issuing warrants, and other papers, properly coming under his duty and jurisdiction. Even the, Sheriff told us once during that time, that he was powerless to enforce the law for that reason.

Then, more directly in controvention of the County Court idea in this particular case, we all remember another case, that occured during the halcyon days when the County Court was in operation, without let or hinderance, when another awful and unexplained lapse of justice took place in our county, under circumstances even more deplorable than those existing in the Smitherman case.

Some boys were seining in a creek and dragged out the body of a new born infant that had been horribly disposed of in the creek. There being no coroner, Justice J. W. F. Gulledge, a democrat, by the way, proceeded to hold an inquest as duly authorized and required by law.

After investigation a verdict was returned for murder against the supposed mother of the child, who, we understand plead guilty. A warrant for first degree murder was sworn out and delivered to the then sheriff, with instructions to place a guard over the woman until she was able to move and then transfer her to the county jail without bond.

Some days afterwards he inquired of the sheriff in regard to the case and was told that the woman had disappeared, and, strange to say, she has never been apprehended to this day.

We merely refer to this case to show that even in the days of the county court, human life was the cheapest commodity in Chilton county.

As an added item of interest we might say, that the days or wekks of a grand jury are not numbered by the court or the law, but they are specifically charged to hear and pass on all of the cases laid before them

A LITTLE JUSTICE NOW AND THEN

We notice in the papers when a young whiskey runner over near Paducah, Ky., who was speeding in his high powered car with a cargo of whiskey on board,ran in to a Ford car, turned it over and killed a l who was in the Ford.

Justice got on his track, he was arrested, indicted for murder by the grand jury, tried and found guilty and sentenced to the pententiary for life.

We had a case similar to that in our county not very long ago. The criminals were arrested in Birmingham and brought back here for a preliminary hearing. One of those "specialist" lawyers from Birmingham framed up the case and brought down a bunch of bootleggers to testify, who really could not have known a single thing about the case. He had four prisoners brought along and demanded that the two wanted on the charge should be picked out by the court—a most unheard of proceeding where prisoners had already been placed under arrest.

In other words, this lawyer seemed to dominate the entire situaton and introduced such a fund of undisputeds evidence that the culprit were discharged by the Justice because no case was made out for the state that would overcome the bootleggers alibis set up by his pals going to prove that the defendant was anywhere else n the world except at the scene of the crime when it occured.

In this particular case, however, a Higher Power took a hand and in just a few days afterwards the criminal paid the extreme penalty to justice by being shot and killed in a bootlegging run in Birmingham.

SENATOR ADAMS IMPROVING

It is a great pleasure to us to announce this week that Senator Adams, who had a stroke of paralysis a short time ago is gradually improving and we feel hopeful that he will soon be out among us again.

He has lived in this county for many years and has perhaps, as wide a list of friends as any man who ever resided here, and all of them will rejoice to learn that he is improving with a splendid show to get out again.

What the world needs is more mutual confidence, more individual cooperation, more trust in God and fewer spurts of half witted egotists who undertake to "explain" the Bible. The Bible is all right as it is. Humanity is the only thing that's wrong.

THE SMITHERMAN CASE

A Coroners Jury Investigates and Finds Verdict of Unlawful Death as Claimed by The Chilton County News

Tuesday and Wednesday of this week marked a step in a direction of law enforcement that will be heartily approved of by all good citizens

Judge J. W. E. Gulledge empaneled a coroners jury and went in to the investigation of the Smitherman case that has recently been aired some in the columns of the News. The jury proceeded in a fearless and thorough manner to go in to every angle of the case available at this late date and rendered a verdict that does away with the absurd story of accidental death by falling out of a door

Following is their verdict which calls for still further investigation by the Grand Jury.

We, the jury find that Ed Smitherman, on October 19, 1924, at Sebors Radcliff's home, did receive personal injuries, by unlawful means, by some person or persons unknown to the jury, that did cause the death of the deceased

We recommend that the Grand Jury further investigate this case

Who's going to feed the Washington [illegible] March 15

From the way the papers read, the devil is still holding his own against Evangelist Brown of Birmingham.

New York will not wield the influence in the next presidential election [illegible]

[illegible] the Democrats [illegible] lay your politics aside.

[illegible] a factor in our government. We now have a government by politics only.

With your head feeling like forty devils were nailing shingles on it at once, the writing of spicy paragraphs is simply a cinch.

We imagine that hades is plum full of Ford cars, that run in low with the mufflers open, continually. That ought to make a sinner pray.

Circumlocution is the definition of positive evasion. That is the reason so many [illegible] don't really [illegible] anything.

Government operation of [illegible] with the Norris bill last week. Government operation comes too high.

The long vacation for bird dogs and shot guns is [illegible] with us again. Oil up your gun and put your dog on a diet.

Its a sad sight to see some really likable fellow going right on to hell in an [illegible] the middle of Darwin with the Bible.

A fleet that averages daily 00 vessels stays on the 12 mile limit off New York all the time advertising the fact that they are intending to violate the law.

It looks like people would be afraid [illegible] when they hear the reading off [illegible] tell about the great quantity [illegible] oil lye cans they find at the stills.

Some of the young folks these days [illegible] at both ends" so constantly that they burn up at least five years of their life with every 12 months.

[illegible] could not see his way to signing the bill giving our rural route boys a raise. Congress failed by four votes in passing the bill over his veto.

[illegible] established a precedent of "near insanity" that has swept the country. A few clear cut laws that say what they mean and mean what they say would be a blessing in the land now.

[illegible] more loyal to our heroes who won the world war than we are, but, unfortunately, some of them developed some very flagrant tendencies [illegible] Fascism [illegible]

President Coolidge's economical policies must not please some of his cabinet. One by one they are retiring. Probably they don't see the prospect of so much loose cash flying around.

Our northern republican friends are climbing over on the States Rights platform now in a hurry. They want protection from that Federal child [illegible] by the [illegible] that's the only way to get it.

If President Coolidge can develope strength, enough to hold the next congress down, we are likely to have four years of safe and sure government. His puritanism is a great problem to the country.

The cost of our Federal highway is $30,000 per mile. Alabama is not able to pay that much for roads, when one third of that amount would give us roads equally as good and, perhaps, as lasting.

It looks like the 'possum, for some reason or other, has lost his high social position. He is rarely ever mentioned now. Wonder what great dereliction he was guilty of. Raised too many children, we guess and became [illegible]

CONTRACTS LET

The contracts for building the balance of the State highway through our county were duly let last week.

This being a part of the original survey, which was divided in half and the north end, which is already nearing completion, known as "project A," this section naturally is known as "project B."

As the city of Clanton desired to bid on the section passing through the incorporation, the Commissioners made two projects out of this section and called the part passing through Clanton, "project C."

A contracting firm, of Brewton, Alabama, being the lowest bidder on grading was awarded that contract for project B, in round numbers, for $85,000.

All of the steel and concrete bridging was awarded to Mr. C. B. Cox, of our town, for $52,440.

The putting down of the 18 foot cement paving for project B was awarded to a contracting firm of Birmingham, for $225,000 in round numbers. This frm also secured the Clanton section of the road for the sum $17,000, in round numbers.

The grading is to be completed by July 1st, and the other work to follow as rapidly as the seasons and conditions will admit of.

Grading camps will have to begin assembling pretty soon to be able to complete that part on time.

Weather conditions are very unfavorable for this kind of work now and if we have a wet spring, like we had last year, these contractors have "troubles of their own" ahead of them.

THAT PERSONAL PRONOUN

One of the marked peculiarities of the average person is that they attach too much importance to the personal pronoun I.

In attempting to edit a newspaper with an honest desire to be a servire and a benefit to the world and to your own constituency, it is almost impossible to condemn any particular evil or censure any specific miscarriage of some particular effort for the common good, or to take any definate stand for better conditions and for law enforcement, but what this personal pronoun hops up in the ego of some probably unthought of individual and he imagines that he is the object of your attack personally.

Poor egotistical creature, we would hardly take up time or consume space to criticize an individual.

We do deplore, with all of our heart, certain lapses of justice that have occured in Chilton county and we intend to do our level best, through the medium of publicity, to make such lapses less frequent in the future, but in doing this, we are fighting a shameful condition and not any particular pea nut politician or person.

Our policy has been, ever since we took charge of the Chilton County News, to condemn all kinds of personal billingsgate and mud slinging and all people, of either particular party, who are honest and have memories dating back a few years, will be compelled to admit that we have, at least been wonderfully successful in that line.

In the future as in the past we are going to adhere to that policy, but at the same time, we are going to do our level best to foster a higher non-political sentiment of cleaner and better things than has prevailed, in some respects, here in the past.

If you wish for higher moral standards, with less politics and more justice you are with us, but if not, you will probably not approve of our future policies.

UNDER A CLOUD

On Monday last the newly elected governor of Kansas was inaugurated under circumstances, perhaps, never before happening anywhere.

The retiring governor, Davis was arrested for accepting bribes just before the inaugural ceremonies came off. He attended the ceremony and, as customary made his farewell address, though a prisoner.

That certainly must have been a pitiful and suggestive sight to that large audience, a picture of shame that should teach a valuable lesson to all people.

Dr. EZELL AS A SPORTSMAN

He Has Some of the Necessary Qualifications at Least, He Can Catch Rabits

The following sporting story, clipped from the Alabama Baptist, throws further a new light on the accomplishments of our eminent pastor. We already knew he was a man of great versatility, but now our respect for him in that particular is enhanced ten fold.

Dr. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the church at Clanton has accomplished a most unusual work in his pastorate. Probably it is nothing against him, but his pastor is somewhat of a sport. At any rate on the 31st day of last March he invited the writer to preach for him on the fifth Sunday meeting and to go fishing the next day. In four hours the four men in the party caught eighty-five fish that weighed exactly fifty-five pounds. The editor caught thirty-three of the eighty-five against Pastor Ezell's twenty-seven. Thus it was that the young sport was greatly humiliated to be outclassed in the art of fishing. He forthwith issued a challenge that if he could not beat the writer fishing that he could beat him shooting birds. The challenge was renewed several times during the summer, and the other day enroute from Montgomery we stopped off at Clanton to try the matter out.

In the meantime the pastor had written a letter, stating that he had shot at one bird twelve times and finally had to run the bird down. We thought we could at least do as well, so we begun the day's hunt in great confidence, though the writer had not shot a gun before in seven years.

The day ended with eighteen birds in the bag, and a squirrel and a rabbit. It is painful to admit that the pastor did win. He got twelve of the eighteen birds, with the other six divided between the writer and Mr. Malley White, with a strong probability that Mr. White, got the major ity of the remiaing six.

There was a lot of fun in that day's hunt. One of the interetsing things was in the fact that a squirrel jumped out of a tree in ten feet of Pastor Ezell, who shot at the squirrel once and missed, and then shot the second time and missed, and then he pitched out on foot to get close enough to shoot again, but stumbling he fell heels over head in the mud, but getting up continued running until he was out of sight.

Now when he came back, instead of having the squirrel he had a live rabbit in his hand. When asked where he got the rabbit his response was that he caught it. Mr. White and the writer laughed heartily. "Well," said the young sport, "see I have the rabbit in my hands and you haven't heard me shoot." "No," was the reply," but you had some dogs along and the dogs caught it." "Well," he said, "look and see the mouth of no dog has been on this rabbit. The fact in the case is that I saw the rabbit in its bed and put my foot on it and here it is alive.

It was agreed it must have been so and further agreed that the remainder of the day be turned into a rabbit hunt and no hounds would be needed, since the pastor of the church at Clanton would answer the same purpose. The sport has issued another challenge for a fish on the 31st day of next March. The challenge has been accepted and so it will be the best two out of three.

MR. JACK HARRIS DEAD

On Friday December 19th, at six thirty, Mr. Jack Harriss breathed his last, and was buried the following day at the family cemetery near his home. Rev. McPheeters, his pastor, saying the last sad words over his body.

Mr. Harris had been an invalid for many years, was loved and respected by all who knew him. He was 92 years 5 months and 12 days old at the time of his death. His son and wife lived with him. They administered to his wants with willing and loving hands at all times. He leaves a feeble wife two daughters Mrs. Matilda Chapman of Birmingham; Mrs. Marty Teal of Pell City their family's and his son's family.

The floral offerings were beautiful given by the Baptist church which he was a member of and by the Mason brothers.

Mr. Harriss loved for his neighbors and friends to visit him, often saying that company did him more good than medicine.

Weep not loved ones, for the song says,
Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land,
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And there sometime, we'll understand.

Opera Music Made Available To Radio Audiences Through Star Broadcasting Experiment

America's most famous opera and concert stars have been placed at the disposal of the radio public through the efforts of E. R. Johnson, president and founder of the Victor Talking Machine Company, in co-operation with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

This departure from what Herbert Hoover recently termed "an endless diet of jazz" in radio programs, is the outgrowth of a movement on the part of both companies to improve the standards of radio music, and, it is believed, will have far reaching consequences. It is Mr. Johnson's opinion that the influence of good music in the home is as important to the growing child as the influence of happy environment and home life. Under tentative arrangements between the two companies the Victor artists will appear at regular intervals during the present year, giving radio recitals and concerts.

Among the stars from whom selections will be made are many whose names are household words in American homes. They are Frances Alda; Harold Bauer; Lucrezia Bori; Emilio de Gogorza; Guiseppe de Luca; Miguel Fleta; Jean Gordon; Maria Jeritza; Giovanni Martinelli; Margarete Matzenauer; John McCormack; Rosa Ponselle; Ernestine Schumann-Heink; Antonio Scotti and the Flonzaley Quartet.

Bori And McCormack Thrill Unseen Millions, Paving Way For New Era In Radio Music

John McCormack and Lucrezia Bori sang to their greatest audiences on New Year's night. Millions heard their golden voices over the radio, inaugurating the first step in an extensive plan to give radio fans an opportunity of hearing the musical notables of the world.

The voices of McCormack and Bori came as a 1924 New Year greeting to a vast multitude as the result of the desire of E. R. Johnson, president of the Victor Talking Machine Company, to improve the standard of radio programs and to stimulate a taste for better music via the ether. Their voices were transmitted simultaneously from eight broadcasting stations in the United States.

Mr. Johnson arranged the plan with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company whereby America's and Europe's best artists, represented in the Victor ranks, were to appear in person before the microphone of the radio studio, beginning with McCormack and Bori. As a result of this experiment the major musical artists will be heard this year—that is, if Mr. Johnson finds that the experiment is successful, if the air audience wants something more than a jazz diet.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, JANURAY 22, 1925 NUMBER 20

A LEGISLATIVE SURPRISE

In our Congress are many gifted and upright men, as able as any in the world, a joy to their constituents and an honor to their country. Those who collude with lawbreakers and debauchees and win first-page fame for their family scandles are a very small fraction, and a vulgar fraction at that, of the honorable body of men who guide the nation's legislative program, and this small fraction will be eliminated in due course of time.

Still, our honored congressman do sometimes spring a surprise. Just now the astonishing thing is the proposed amendment to the Constitution proposing that "Congress shall have power to limit, regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age."

Already Congress has power to conscrip boys at 18 and take them away from their parents, and force them under military overlords, and subject them to the immoralities of camp life, and train them in the debasing art of human butchery. The exercise of such power is a matter of recent history.

The new move proposes to give Congress further control over American family life. It would empower Congress to regulate the activities of both boys and girls under 18. It does not stipulate just how far below 18 Congressional authority becomes inoperative; fairly interpreted the language seems to admit that parents may have control of their children so long as they are helpless and unable to do anything, but so soon as children become able to be of aid in the family parental authority must yield to legislative enactmeut. This is probably the deadliest blow that has ever been aimed at American family life.

If our distinguished legislators wish to improve on this they might propose a Wet Nurse Amendment. It might read as follows: "Congress shall have power to provide wet nurses for all persons under laboring ages and to regulate their diet and clothing by all suitable enactments."

Much can be said in favor of such an amendment to our fundamental law, especially when it is remembered that more persons die in infancy than in any other equal period of life. Then too the old bachelors and the "unappropriated" part of the opposite sex could tell exactly how the thing ought to be done, and could flutter and fuss around like a broody old hen sitting on door knobs and hatching nothing.

And folks that want this sort of legislation are just the kind of folks that ought to have it. But self-respecting fathers and mothers will repudiate such a proposal with a small part of the scorn which it deserves.—Alabama Baptist.

GETTING ON THE JOB

The Gillis Construction Co., who have the grading contract for the south end of the State Highway through our county, are rapidly assembling their outfits now and getting ready to break dirt this week.

They are unloading a large number of mules here this week and, we learn that others are being unloaded at Cooper.

232,000 STRAWBERRY PLANTS

That live and modern farmer, Mr. J. F. Dennis, who lives just below town, and who practices what he preaches in the farming line, has an order for 232,000 Strawberry plants to be set out by various farmers in this vicinity.

Seventy-four thousand of these go to Thorsby and the balance of the order will be distributed among the farmers near Clanton.

This is a move in the right direction and means more for betterment of the community than anything that has happened here for years.

It is already a demonstrated fact that the strawberry can be successfully grown here, and it goes on to the market exactly at the time when a farmer needs some money to finance his crop. It requires little work and that comes in at a time when the farmer is in no push in his regular farm.

In other words an acre of strawberries on every farm in a radius of 5 miles of Clanton, would mean as much cash in circulation as a cotton mill.

A SERIOUS

Some one relieved J. Watt Moore of a fine 21 jewel gin watch Tuesday.

He had placed it on a shelf in his office and, sometime during the day, some light fingered gent appropriated it.

Such pilfering as this is getting much too frequent around Clanton and close watch should be kept by every one with an eye to locate the party or parties who are guilty.

Just a short time ago we learn that Mr. Joe Maddox lost his watch in a very simlar manner to Mr. Moore.

Let everyone keep this matter in mind and keep a vigilant outlook and lets break this pilfering up.

NEED SOME INDUSTRIES

As concrete evidence of the fact that we need some manufacturing industries here, we have now several vacant store buildings in the down town area, a thing that has not been true before since way before the war.

The lumber business here is about played out and most the planing mills have closed down and, unless we stir our pegs and start something Clanton is going to be pretty dull during the long summer days wait for the farmers to make another crop.

There are several small industries that could operate here most successfully and there is plenty of idle capital in Clanton to start some of them, and it is a great pity that a movement can not develope here to hold up a summer business.

A SHAME

Now and then cases develope in the courts that are actually too dirty and filthy for even public mention.

This is a shame on civilization. But a more shameful thing is to find people who will try to explain away the facts and offer excuses for the guilty ones.

Some cleaning up is needed in Chilton county.

SKILLFUL MOONSHINING

Some Moonshining History of Chilton County

This is not a fairy tale, written as a space filler, but is actual historical facts that demonstrate the perseverance and wonderful ingenuity that certain famous moonshiners of days long since past and gone, displayed in arranging to brew the sparkling corn juice that Mr. Volstead so strenuously condemns.

In a wild and thinly settled section of the county, once upon a time, an expert and noted manufacturer of the exhilerating fluid, whom the officers were pressing pretty close in the swampy haunts where he concealed his plant, decided that he would, once for all, arrange to keep them guessing for the balance of time.

He owned some land in this wilderness, so he built him a home for himself and family and opened up a road that terminated at his home.

After completing his residence he moved in and settled down, ostensibly to farm, but in reality to build him a distilery that would defy the discovery of all the officers who might come.

So he went to work and dug a cellar under his house, 8 feet deep and nearly 20 feet square. Only a small door in the rear opened into this subterranean apartment and all of the vast amount of dirt and rock he had to remove he carried out through this one little door and then, entirely away from the premesis.

After completing this job he began over at one side of this apartment and sunk another cellar 8 feet deep and about 16 feet square. The immense amount of dirt excavated from this second apartment had to be drawn up in to first one and carried out through that same little door and likewise disposed of.

Upon the completion of this second venture, he repeated his engineering tactics and, going over to the opposite wall from the first one, he sank a third apartment about 14 feet square and 8 feet below the second one. He transfered his dirt frim this one to the second and then to the first and again removed it through the same little door and away from observation above ground.

Next he dug a well in one corner of this third compartment to supply water for his plant, removing the dirt in same tedious and laborious manner.

The well completed, he proceeded to fit up this plant and get ready for business and it is said that it was a gem in its way and capable of doing business tip top.

But alas! About the time he was ready to make his first run, he had trouble with a female relative of his, who was on to the whole arrangement and, to be revenged on him, she communicated the whole thing to the officers and they came and closed him down and his dream was over. He said he wa s18 months in completing this ingenious arrangement and never did cash in a penny.

Another case comes to our mind that displays even more inventive genius and less complications and hard work than this one, and, besides, it was a most successful venture, was never captured nor quit until the owner voluntarily closed it down. It was often looked for by the law sleuths and, it is said, they have stood in a few feet of it while it was in full blast, but were never able to form even a guess as to where it was.

This manufacturer had some land that wsa intersected by a creek and right near to where the public road crossed the creek, he decided to put him a water mill and grind corn for the public.

The banks of this creek are some ten or twelve feet high at this point so he put in what is known as a tumbling dam. The water rises to the top and then overflows a dam of this kind and you are not troubled with sluice gates and so on.

Near the mill house and entirely concealed as part of the dam, this gentleman closed in a little apartment and made it water tight. His mode of ingress and egress to this apartment was through a small door, nicely fitted in to the dam, below the normal water line and entirely concealed when the pond was full and flowing over the dam.

When he wished to "do business" a water gate at the mill was opened and the pond lowered until he could enter the door in the dam, then the gate was closed, the pond quickly filled again, and he proceeded to make his "run" while the waters of the creek flowed completely over his plant and all it contained.

Part of the old dam is still visible, they say, but it has been many long years since the pouring torrents that rushed and roared over that plant, have concealed anything more vicious than a mocasin snake or a 25 pound blue cat.

A BRAVE MAN

President Coolidge is indeed a brave man to take the stand on prohibition law enforcement that he does, though his position is emminently sensible.

He is not in favor of putting extreme penalties on "hip pocket" fellows, nor the fellow who takes an occasional nip. He says the policy of the government should be to stop smuggling, illicit manufacturing and bootlegging, but these minor offenders should not be rigerously sought after nor wantously punished.

The prohibition fanatics will give him the devil now, but he is man enough to say what he believes is right.

Coffee has doubled in price since July. If every family will cut their coffee bill half in two, the price will be back to where it started before next July.

MUSCLE SHOALS SITUATION

The Senate, after fussing over the disposition of Muscle Shoals for several months, finally began to ballot on various bills to settle the question.

Quit a number of plans were presented, ranging all the way from government operation, to direct leasing out for power purposes, but none of them could get the necessary support.

Finally a much amended Underwood bill passed, so the matter now has to going to joint conference with the lower house and be made to meet with their approval.

This bill calls for the production of at least 40,000 tons of nitrate per year, and if it can not be leased out with that provision in force as part of the contract, then the government is to form a corporation and have it operated any way.

If the conference can only agree to this proposition, it will, no doubt, become a law, as Persident Coolidge is believed to be friendly to the measure and will sign it, without hesitation if it reaches his desk.

The prospect looks favorable for an early settlement now of this much discussed project and, just so they force the making of that nitrate, as provided for, we feel like it will meet the hearty endorsement of all persons who are at all interested in the agricultural progress of the future.

HE FORGOT AND PAID

One of those bad, rainy, cold nights last week, some fellow borrowed him a place to sleep in the court house.

Next morning the janitor arrived too early for him, we suppose, at any rate, he frightened the janitor almost to death with a floor mop and, as the janitor ran for the sheriff, the party left so hurridly that he forgot a pretty good overcoat and left it lying on the floor.

He paid for his nights lodging, so to speak and we guess the janitor is satisfied.

WORK TO STOP UNTIL MARCH

Mr. Robert Popwell told us Monday that all county road work had been called off, on account of the bad weather, until March, except such repair work as is necessary to keep the roads passable.

We think this is a most wise step. It rains so much that regular road work can not be done to any advantage.

Soon as spring opens the roads will be put in good shape and properly fixed so they will stand up in future.

The next week the merchant came tearing down the street to the newspaper offce, "Well," said the editor, "I knew you wanted the obituary. read by the people so I took it out and nailed it up on your bill board."—Andalusia Star.

JAMES W. WHITE DIES

Last Monday morning at the home of his son, Mr. D. D. White, of West End, Mr. Jas. W. White passed over the great divide.

The deceased was 79 years of age and had been in failing health for five or six months. His son removed from his home at Castleberry Ala some months ago and he spent the last days here at the home of his son and family.

Mr. White was a member of the Methodist church for many years and also a Mason since the days of his young manhood.

The remains were carried back to his old home at Castleberry on No 1 Monday after funeral services had been held at the home by pastor Wilkerson and Ezell of the Methodist and Baptist churches respectively.

He was buried at Castleberry Tuesday with Masonic honors by the lodge he has belonged to so long.

The many friends of Mr. White and family here extend their sympathy to them in this bereavement.

POSTPONED

The play at Mt. Pleasant for January 24th, is called off till a later date on account of Smallpox in community. No definite time is set. Will be announced later.

STILL IMPROVING

Dr. J. P. Crumpton, who has been sick since just before Christmas, is still slowly on the mend and will be able to leave the hospital in a day or so, if the weather gets favorable and he does not suffer a relapse.

The many friends of the Doctor will be indeed glad to see his jolly face down on the streets again.

A LUCIOUS GIFT

Tuesday morning we were most agreeably surprised when we found at the Express office a box of extra fine oranges, right fresh from the "Land of Flowers" sent to our address.

Upon investigation we discovered that this lucious rememberance came from our young friend and fellow-townsman, Mr. Joe Ben Downs.

Upon inquiry we learned that Joe Ben and his wife were on a visit down there to her father and family, Mr. J. Wiley Foshee, who moved from here some two or three years ago.

They are at Lakeland, and while we have been slopping around in the slush and half freezing, they have been baking in the beautiful sunshine and enjoying the flowers of spring right on.

Joe Ben and his lady went by auto and will probably remain for a month or more. We certainly thank him for the fine oranges, but every time we eat one we will envy him some of that delightful weather he is enjoying.

ATTENDS CHEVROLET CONVENTION

Mr. Polk expects to receive shipment of the New CHEVROLET within few days. Announcement of their arrival will be announced in this paper. The New CHEVROLET is new from radiator to rear axle, and Mr. Polk claims there is absolutely other car on the market within its class that will any where near equal it in looks, performance, durability and for economical transportation.

Watch for the announcement of the arrival of the New CHEVROLET.

It is said that certain down town business streets in Clanton are to be paved this summer.

If such is really the case, it will be a decided improvement and a great protection from dust.

We have not been able to obtain any particulars, but from the Age-Herald we note that seventh street and second avenue are the ones they have in contemplation.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE NOT A POLITICIAN

Simon pure democrats all over the country are going to sit up and take [illegible] at doctrines enunciated by President Coolidge.

Our own party in recent years has not boasted of a leader who more honestly and pointedly preached the real fundamental doctrine of democracy than did the president, a few days ago, when he came out, flat footed, for the maintainance [illegible] for the absolute sovereignty of the states. He did not quibble about it but just plainly stated his belief in State rights, as written in the constitution of our government.

He went further and told of the palpable danger of a mingling of interest and of the evils that had heretofore, and were now, flagrantly present in [illegible] the Federal and State governments were attempting to function together. He said in every single instance where a difference [illegible] two that the Federal government always took control and, that to all intents and proposes, the supposed partnership really meant nothing, more nor less, than Federal control.

We feel like exclaiming with those old fellows of Bible times, "Behold, a Daniel has come to judgement." Our hat is off to President Coolidge, and if he lives up to these ideals, he is a better democrat today than 75 per cent of the people who call themselves by that name.

You can take it from us, that if he lives up to the principles he is setting forth now during his term, the democratic party will have to clean house, from cellar to garret, repent, in sack cloth and ashes and go back to the fundamental faith of Jefferson in heart and [illegible] before the next election will be [illegible] than the one [illegible] passed.

CARD OF THANKS

Will you allow us space in your paper to express our sincere thanks to those of our good friends and neighbors who has so kindly remembered us in their sympathy to each of you who brought us these things that were so highly appreciated. we would say that words fail us to express to you our appreciation of such friends, our hearts overflow with gratitude and thankfulness that we are permitted to live among such friends, and it is our sincere prayer that when the time comes that your gray locks must lean hevily on the staff of time, that you too, will be blessed with kind friends to remember you and cause your hearts to rejoice and when the time comes to cross over the cold still waters of death, may we again strike hands on the great beyond, and ever bask in the sunshine of Gods Eternal Love, where our gray heads will no longer need a staff to lean upon, but there, the Silver Locks can ever recline upon the Bosom of the spotless Son of God.

May his richest blessings ever be with you all is our earnest prayer.

A shake up in the Federal law enforcement department at Washington has dumped the head boss, Roy A. Haynes, out of a job. He and the president could not agree. Silent Cal seems to have the knack of talking to the point when he does open up.

CRAZY AS BATS

There have been several times in the history of our country when rank idiocy or insanity or both seemed to get the advantage in Congress and we have been afflicted with legislation that was a shame and a curse to civilization.

Right now a Federal Child Labor Law has been put up to the various states to vote in as a 20th amendment [illegible] our Federal constitution that [illegible] up all the other ridiculous farces [illegible] in other days like a dollar [illegible] ers a dime.

It is hardly believable that any person could have escaped the asylum this long who had no more sense, or originality, than did the person who originated this monstrous travesty of good government.

This amendment gives Congress the right to prohibit the working of any person under 18 years of age at any kind of employment in the United States. Parental control is utterly outlawed and even the various states have no jurisdiction at all in the matter. Can you conceive of a more pernicious piece of legislation than that?

Even the mandates of God are entirely ignored and the customs and usages of all ages and ocuntries are set aside with a glaring disregard that is utterly staggering in its very impudence and absurdity.

Two thirds of the states must adopt this blatant attempt to demoralize all civilization, before it can become operative and it is inconceivable to believe that it will ever disgrace our great Magna Charter, but the combined forces of religious and political fanaticism that is working to free government established here by the life blood of our forefathers, will do its utmost to put over this shameful amendment, and thus drive the opening wedge that would make of our great land of liberty a stigma and disgrace even when compared to Soviet Russia.

It is imperative that free American citizens awake right now and smite this hideous monster of anarchy and imperalism such a deadly blow that even its taint and trail will be forever banished from this land of the free and home of the brave.

Alabama will be called upon to act on this matter along with the other states and we trust that every real patriotic citizen of our good state will bear this fact in mind and do his full duty, when the time comes in crushing this soviet monster.

A REVOLUTION IS COMING

The limit of profiteering in the United States has about been reached, and a dangerous sentiment of resistance is taking shape all over the land.

Both political parties have signally failed to invent any kind of legislation that would produce a normal condition in the marketing of goods. Profiteering is openly going on and speculation, pure and simple, is pulling the cost of living utterly out of the reach of the ordinary farmer and laborer.

A sky high tariff is preventing us from obtaining any relief from abroad and the fact is, that the people of this great so called land of liberty are at the mercy of a greedy monopolistic hierarchy that are boldly robbing the public to fill their own coffers with piles of wealth that should be circulating among the people as legitimate pay for a living.

The cost of living is now 62 per cent higher than in 1913, while the earning power of the farmer and the laborer has only advanced 26 per cent

There is no earthly excuse for such conditions except the greed that inspires a hard of money lords, who buy political parties and have legislation made to order.

Histofy tells us of the bread riots that almost swamped England at one time, and conditons of a like character are at work in our country now and the natural reaction is taking place in the minds and hearts of large masses of our citizens.

A revolution of some kind is in the air. It is brewing as certainly as the days go by. It may not go on until it drenches our country in blood, but it will reach that stage unless relief is given along lines of justice and fairness. People will not starve and see their families fade away before their eyes, knowing as they do, that they are making the crops and doing the labor that justly and righteously paid for, will support them in comfort.

The profiteer is going to be held up in his unholy career, either by fair and impartian legislation or by the sword, the torch and the rifle. That time is coming and each day the torrent rises and the approaching revolution comes on with an increasing rapi[illegible]

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, JANURAY 29, 1925 NUMBER 21

MR. TRAVERSE HEADLEY IS DEAD

Truly "In the midst of life we are in death.'

Last Thursday morning Mr. Traverse Headley, who resided in West End but who was an extensive landed proprietor out west of town, got on the wagon with his grandson and went out to one of his farms to get some wood.

They gathered up a load and Mr. Headley told the young man to bring it on in, saying that he would stay out and hunt squirrels until his return.

So far as is known the young man, when he left with the wood, is the last person who ever saw the old gentleman alive.

When the young man returned for a second load he could not find his grandpa at all. As the evening passed off with no sign of Mr. Headley, the family and friends became uneasy and a search was begun. The entire neighborhood turned out and the search continued all night long and until about 8 o'clock Friday morning, when they discovered the lost man, seated at the root of a tree, with his gun leaning against another tree at his left hand, but life was extinct and the doctors expressed the belief that he had been dead since about noon the previous day.

Apparently he had passed away instantly, without a struggle, and seemed more like a man taking his rest than otherwise.

The deceased was nearing the 70 mile post on life's road and had always been an active, hard working man and had amassed quite a large fortune by his industry and prudence. He had been married twice, having two daughters by his first marriage who are both dead. One daughter blessed his second union, who is Mrs. Sallie Headley of West End. He leaves five grandchildren, by his two oldest daughters, and five by his daughter now living. His second wife also survives him. He also leaves two brothers, Messers Ira and Albert Headley, the former living in the county and the latter in Clanton. He also has a sister living.

Mr. Headley was buried at Liberty church Saturday, where a very large crowd assembled to pay their last respects. Rev. Albert Foshee, a life long friend of his, officiated.

Undertaker Martin was in charge of the burial arrangements.

As a personal friend of the deceased, we extend our sympathy to the bereaved.

MAYOR GRAGG SICK

It was a great shock to the many friends of Mayor Gragg to learn last Saturday that he had been stricken with a head trouble so serious that a quick operation was necessary.

Dr. Drake, of Birmingham, was summoned and he and Dr. Arthur Johnson proceeded to perform an operation that gave relief.

The Mayor seems to be convalescing nicely now and if no complication sets up, he expects to be out again right away.

It is the sincere hope of his many friends that no untoward relapse will occur for there is hardly a man in Clanton who is missed so much as Dr. Gragg, our worthy mayor.

BIG OYSTER SUPPER

The ladies of Circle 3, of the Baptist church will give a big oyster feed at that church tomorrow, (Friday) night. You are cordially invited to attend.

HAVING A HARD FIGHT

Dr. J. P. Crumpton, who has been sick since before Christmas, is still forced to keep his bed at the hospital.

Several times he has seemed to get on the up grade for a few days, but each time he slipped back and has to begin over again. We earnestly hope that he will hurry up now for his annual rabbit hunt is due on Feb. 22 and must be fit for that.

SOUTH CLANTON WINS

We extend our congratulations to the residents and business men of South Clanton, over the fact that they finally succeeded in inducing those in control to altar the highway survey through their town and to adopt the old route of the highway, upon which most of the residencees and most of the business houses front.

This will not injure the highway at all and will be a very great source of satisfaction and accommodation to those good people. We rejoice with them.

HIGHWAY WORK BOOMING

The various contractors who are to build the last section of the State highway through our county, are certainly getting on the job.

Various camps are already located every few miles along the route and dirt has been broken by them all and work is being pushed to the limit every day when the weather will permit.

By next year this time the tourists should be able to pass through our county, ninety to nothing, on a paved roadway.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Mr. C. C. Vinson who was operated on for appendicitis a few days ago, is getting along nicely.

Mr. R. N. Roebuck was operated on for appendicitis last week is doing nicely.

Mr. Horace Headley who has been very sick in the hospital is rapidly improving.

Dr. Gragg was operated on last Friday morning and is improving nicely. He will soon be out again.

Dr. J. P. Crumpton, improving.

Miss Mayme Cleckler was operated on for appendicitis Friday night is doing nicely.

Mrs. Charley Lee Bailey went home last Sunday after being operated on two weeks ago.

Mrs. "Doctor" Robinson who was in Hospital several days has returned home.

Mrs. Robert Jones who was operated on went home last week.

A SILLY ARGUMENT

Many of the idle sentimentalists, who are advocating the passage of the 20th amendment to the Federal Constitution, giving Congress the right to invade every home in the United States and to assume full parental control of each family, are arguing that the amendment should be passed because it would not really mean anything, because Congress never would take advantage of its provisions in making laws.

If that is the case, why pass it at all. We certainly do not need any more "dead letters" in our Federal constitution, but they know, and so do we and all the rest of the thinking people of this country, that Congress never allows any opportunity to go by where they can possibly get their fingers in the pie.

That Child Labor Law is so manifestly, ruinious and pernicious that we feel like the proper authorities should arrest and try for lunacy, any person who is so mentally unbalanced that he, or she, would advocate such a sedicious wicked and treasonable amendment as that.

COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER

Dr. T. J. Marcus has been appointed temporary County Health Officer to cope with the smallpox situation that has developed in several sections of the county.

In consequence of this service, Dr. Marcus will not be able to serve his regular practice at present, so if you need a physician, call some one else as this county work requires all of his time and attention.

He will be in his office every Saturday, where he will vacinate all parties who desire it, free of all charges.

He is quarantining all cases he finds through the county and vaccinating all who have been exposed. He is first visiting the rural schools where the malady is said to have broken out, or where surrounding infection makes the danger great.

The Doctor tells us that in the northwestern part of the county the disease is quite prevalent and, in some cases, is also qute severe.

SMALLPOX PREVALENT

The physicians and also the sheriff tells us that smallpox is quite prevalent in certain sections of our county now.

In most cases that have developed so far it is said to be a mild form and no deaths have resulted so far as we have heard.

School vacination is going on in most of schools of the county, especially in the infested districts.

Smallpox is raging in many localities over the state now, Birmingham especially being hard hit, though very few fatalities are reported.

An ordinary overcoat pocket will easily accommodate your weeks wages in rations these days.

WONT WORK

No kind of an organization that has for its object the upbuilding of a town or community can ever hope to amount to anything at all in that line when it is founded by a class and held sacred and secret to a few boon associates, who hope to get something started for the sole benefit of "me and my wife, my son John and his wife."

In the very nature of things, no public progress can be fostered nor succeed as a selfish enterprise nor as the offspring of a personal sentiment either politicbl or social. All such movements are absurd in their formation and absolutely abortive and actually detrimental in the outcome.

Harmony and cooperation are two elements that are positively essential for public betterment and the broadest kind of publicity is also very neccessary.

All people rightly and naturally are suspicious when secret conclaves go in to session and a spirit of abhorence and distrust rises up in the public mind when a few choice spirits begin to hide behind locked doors ostensibly for the purpose of "building up the town."

MR. MOSE BATES DIES

Last Saturday night, about 10 o'clock, Mr. Mose Bates, who has been in bad health for several months, passed away.

Mr. Bates was 79 years of age and had spent practically all of his life in Chilton county. He had been a consistent member of Providence church for over forty years and was a man who was always to be found on the side of peace and harmony in every walk of life. A true friend, a good neighbor and a sympathizing helper of those in distress.

The remains were carried back to his home church at Providence for interment Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Bates was the father of Mr. T. M. Bates, of our town, and had several other relatives scattered over this section.

To the bereaved family and friends, who will so sadly miss the friendship and good counsil of this aged man, we extend our sympathy in this sad hour.

A HOT CHASE

Last Sunday Deputy Culp and Chief of Police Retherford got tipped off that a Ford car was coming loaded with negroes and whiskey.

They got on the job and directly the suspected vehicle came dashing by and the officers gave chase. The race lasted for about two miles when the officers finally overhauled them right in the heart of the city.

Upon investigation no liquor was found and the passengers all seemed to be sober, one of them claiming to be a preacher who was speeding to meet a lodge appointment at Thorsby.

No arrests were made.

LITTLE GIRL IS BURIED

On Monday at 11 a. m., the sweet little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Woodyard of Birmingham, was laid to rest in the city cemetery here. Dr. Ezell, pastor of the Baptist church saying the last sad and sacred words that consigned this sweet little girl from that smitten family circle to the grave.

Her father and mother were formerly citizens of Clanton, the father being the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Woodyard ,who reside here now. Jesse moved to Birmingham about three years ago and has been a successful contractor since in that hustling metropolis.

This little girl was only about three years of age and was their youngest child. She was stricken with pneumonia about two weeks ago, but was thought to have conquored that dread malady, when she was suddenly attacked by other complications and passed away.

The remains were brought down on No. 9 Monday morning. The family have many friends here who grieve with these bereaved young parents

Undertaker Martin was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

LEG BROKEN

Little "Bill" Scroggins, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Scroggins, of West End, had the misfortune Monday to get a fall while out at play, and fractured one of the bones in her leg.

She is doing all right and will be out again pretty soon, in the mean time she sits in the bed, gives orders and cuts out all the fancy pictures she can get hold of.

YOU MUST DETOUR

We learn that the road leading north out seventh street, will be cut at the creek, where the highway bridge is being constructed and that all people wishing to reach the territory beyond the creek will have to go out the Lock 12 road and take the left hand by Friendship church, and come to their own road by that detour.

DOING OUR PART

The Chilton County News is always glad to give publicity to any church or school news, or make any and all announcements for these institutions, free of charge if the proper officers, or their agents will bring or send them to the office.

This is as fair as we can offer and as we neither have time to "pump" you for this information, nor can read your mind thereto, we feel like our offer is all that any reasonable person could expect.

Roots, branch water and sugar are the only articles of food we know of that have not gone up in to the millionaire class.

FOR RENT

Will build to suit tenant on sixth street south of Upchurch Drug Store, 3 one-story brick 20 feet front, 40 feet deep, 14 feet ceiling, or will build 3 two-story buildings of same dimensions.

CALERA TO THE FRONT

From all reports our neighbor town of Calera has about "struck ile," so to speak.

It is given out that a very strong corporation has taken over large lime and cement properties up there and are going to spend something like $3,000,000 in plants and other improvements right away.

Our congratulations go out to those people and we certainly wish old Father Luck would hand Clanton a present like that.

The real estate man will be in his element at Calera now for awhile.

Owing to the damage done by the flood waters, work on Cherokee Bluff dam has been indefinitely shut down. If the Power Company was to land Muscle Shoals they would not need to complete the other one in several years.

GOOD DEAL OF SICKNESS

Following the spell of bad weather we had after the holidays, a good deal of grippe, flue and pneumonia has developed all over the country.

The local hospital is full now and has been crowded for some time, while our doctors all look sleepy and faded from the hard service they are called on to perform now.

With a little open weather and sunshine these conditions would quickly improve and we are hoping daily to see such a change.

HOW ABOUT YOUR POLL TAX

With the passing of next Saturday your opportunity to straighten out our poll tax situation will be passed at this time

It seems like it is a very difficult matter in our county to keep your poll tax record in shape. A great number of people came n with their registration papers and all their tax receipts and still complain that their names fail to appear on the qualified list.

Now, we do not know how nor why this should happen, but we do know that a great number of people have shown us their papers whose names do not appear as qualified voters.

When a person has finished his career as a tax payer and has all of his receipts to prove it, his name should never disappear from the qualified list unless he is convicted of crime or dies. He is a qualified voter for life when he is heeled up that way.

Another old gentleman 79 years of age, was in our office recently and claimed that his name had been persistently left off the list, although he was past 45 in 1901 and has never owed any poll tax under the present system.

We hope that the proper officials and the voters will try to cooperate and get all of these discrepencies corrected.

Put every man and woman in the county, who is entitled to vote on the list and let them stay there until legally removed. It causes so much irritation and friction to challenge a person who has his credentials in his pocket, that we hope especial care will be exercised in making an accurate qualified list.

Home invading laws and a viciously rotten social system have destroyed parental authority. The crus ty old batchelor and the soured old maid together with a few married people who have avoided offspring are the ones who blame parents for the lax morals of the young folks.

Mr. J. H. Owens, of beat 15, was in town last Saturday.

It would require a full 50 day session of the Alabama legislature working time and half time, repealing absurd, harmful and impossible laws, to get us back in the neighborhood of safe and sane good government.

Every law that is passed that, in any manner shape or form undertakes to invade the sacred precincts of the home, is just another step in the direction that led Rome to fall in to decay and ruin from her pedestal of "Misstress of the World."

Don't get it in to your noggin that you are getting something for nothing every time the Federal government puts up a dollar for you to cover and get two. They get the one they put up out of your other pocket when you ain't looking.

WELL, WHY NOT

Out in Colorada they are starting a campaign to try to have the prohibition laws so changed that the person who buys liquor will be equally as guilty as the person from whom he buys.

This sounds reasonable and at sounds like they really mean prohibition when they undertake to put whiskey out of business.

Do you suppose there would be any bootleggers or any liquor made at all if there was not a market for it. Stop the buying and the balance of the matter will take care of itself.

Of course, the party who buys is just as guilty as the party who sells. We have laughed in our sleeve many a time when listening to impassioned orators pleading for prohibition for the man who made or sold but not a word against the fellow who bought and drank.

The trouble has always been that so many ranting political prohibitionists were really hard boiled topers and they were always careful not to handicap their part of the game.

If liquor is as great an evil as it is alleged to be, why not hit it on every possible angle. People kill rattlesnakes and rabid dogs out of hand, then why not be equally game when fighting a danger that is said to be ten times more deadly.

We doubt if there is a law making body in the United States that will ever have the nerve to pass a law making the liquor buyer and seller both equally guilty and punishable.

GROSS MISTAKE

Some years ago, when ring rule was beginning to develope as the guiding hand in all political parties in Alabama, the ring leaders in that branch of the body politic realizing that the fewer the voters the less effort it would require to line them up, put over a law that made the paying of poll tax optional with the voter.

They knew their game, for thousands of voters eliminated themselves by failing to pay their poll tax, and it was a much more simple thing to properly place and handle the rest.

This law has never had a single leg to stand on that displayed anything else than a sinister, cut and dried program to more easily control the electroate of the state.

It has done more injury to the political integrity of Alabama than any one thing we know of.

We are shamelessly taxed on every conceivable excuse, to raise funds for the bosses to splurge on, but here was a direct school tax, set apart directly for educational purposes and not permitted to be squandered in any other direction and they made it optional.

The leaders in the political arena of Alabama shoot more bull and throw more conniptious fits about "education" than any people we ever heard of, and pile on taxes and put on "drives" to educate our children still, they brazenly abolished a perfectly fair and just law that was written and passed especially for the schools, for the simple reason that they wished to handle the votes with less trouble in putting over the things that would let such jobs for their friends and cash their own pockets.

Alabama sinks deeper and deeper in her own shame and falls further and ufrther behind the great march of educational advancement just so long as she keeps this law on the statute books.

There can not possibly be written a more fair and just tax in to our laws than a poll tax.

We have become a government by politics and not by statesmanship. A government of expediency and not a government of, by and for the people.

ORGANIZATION

The spirit—propelling force and inspiriation of all organizations—must not be lost sight of if they are function harmoniously. Many organizations are cold, indifferent and heartless from all outward appearances. They have that icy-cold atmosphere predominating in the old-time bankers' offices. But underneath this thick coat of business decorum there is that spirit of fairness and helpfulness which is fast removing all traces of selfishness.

Corporations and organizations are fast awakening to the fact that blood money extorted from human bodies by long hours and small remuneration does not help the community, but does retard the growth and development of both individual and nation.

The trade unions, more than an... other one agency, have brought about this change. When you see corporations building houses, raising wages and making things better in general for their employes, don't think for a moment they are doing it of their own free will. They are just an... an indigent way, whether they admit it or not. The American standard... is above all other standards of liv... that the shorter ho... ditions.

Public Warehouse Likely in Clanton

Reported That Downtown Business Property May Be Developed for This Much Needed Facility

When you come to think of it, Clanton has no down town public warehouse for storage purposes.

At this season of the year there is a great demand for a place to store fertilizer and other bulky commodities and a public warehouse could do a land office business.

It has been rumored that a down town property owner was thinking of putting up a building on this kind and quite a number of other business men here would be glad to see it as an established fact.

Clanton offers several very suitable sites for just such an enterprise, and with a little effort put forth by citizens of Clanton, it is believed that some one with ample means could be induced to establish this much needed utility.

Edwards Jury Disagrees After 72-Hour Deliberation

The jury in the case of Dr. Edwards in Birmingham, charged with shooting his wife to death some time ago, Tuesday afternoon failed to agree on a verdict after a deliberation of 72 hours, and Judge J. C. B. Gwin declared a mistrial. The jury stood eleven for acquittal and one for guilty.

Solicitor Perry made a hard fight for conviction, but the evidence was all circumstantial, and the solicitor evidently failed to produce sufficient testimony to convince the jury of his guilt.

This case has attracted much attention and every movement of the trial has been watched closely by people in all parts of the state.

It s probable that Dr. Edwards will be allowed bail, pending a date to be set for another trial.

Old Citizen of County Buried at Pleasant Grove

William R. Dawson, one of Chilton county's older citizens, died on January 28. He was buried at Pleasant Grove cemetery. Mr. Dawson was a noble citizen, and affiliated with Pleasant Grove church in his early manhood, and lived a straightforward Christian life.

The family have the sympathy of a large circle of friends.

Opelika Secures Branch of Pepperell Mills Co.

Opelika, Ala., Feb. 4.—(Special).—Much interest has been aroused over the state by the announcement that the Pepperell Manufacturing Co. will move a unit of their cotton mills from Bideford, Maine, to Opelika, Ala. This is a part of a movement of cotton mills south which has been going on for several years. A prominent textile manufacturer recently stated before a public meeting that the cotton mill industry in the New England states was doomed. He said that they could not compete with the southern mills and that the people in these northern states must turn to some other industry.

Opelika gave the Pepperell people $50,000 as a bonus and contributed $10.000 towards the purchase of a site. For a small city this was considered by some as pretty high but Opelika people will get it back in increased payrolls, increased real estate values and advertising which is incalculable. The products of the Pepperell Mfg Co. are known in the world over and wherever they are sold the name of Opelika will be stamped on them. The company has asked for a 300 acre site which indicates big development for the future.

Muscle Shoals Agreement Is Near

Joint Committee Hopes to Reach Agreement in a Few Days—Fertilizers Clause Will Be Made Stronger

Washington, Feb. 4—To assure cheap fertilizer, conferees considering the Underwood Muscle Shoals bill are reported to have virtually agreed to liberalize the rental terms of the measure. As the measure now stands the lessees would be required to pay an annual rental of 4 per cent of the $50,000,000, cost of dam No. 2.

Spokesmen for the conferees declared that it would hardly seem "fair" to assume that a lessee would pay down $2,000,000 the first year for a lease when he may not be able to produce a pound of fertilizer the first year because of the lack of buildings and machinery.

The present plan of the conferees is to change this clause to allow the operator to pay smaller rentals during the early years of the lease with requirements for increases during the latter stages, that would return to the government ultimately the same amount that would be had under the present terms of the bill

The conferees still adhere to the plan to report the bill some time this week.

Senator George of Georgia, appeared before the conference to support his amendment inserted in the Underwood bill providing for the distribution of all power not needed for the production of fertilizer.

E. B. Reid, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau Federation appeared to give the bureau's opinion on the manufacture of fertilizers for the farmers. He pointed out the great demand for fertilizer on American farms and advocated a lease that would guarantee a large production at a low price.

Good Record Clanton High

The gradings and examinations recently completed at the high school are more than likely to establish a record for good work in the state, according to a statement given out Wednesday by Prof. Stevens, the principal.

According to Mr. Stevens the several departments have made unusually high perentages in all the work assigned, and he believes that in all his work as a teacher and principal, he has never seen as high a standard of efficiency among pupils of any school.

This is a very flattering statement, not only insofar as the pupils are concerned, but is also highly creditable to the various teachers who have directed the work in the high school.

Such work as the above will soon elevate the Clanton high to a high rating among the schools of the state, and does the parents of our fair city a very great compliment.

Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Graham, of Montgomry, are in Clanton this week. Dr. Graham is here in interest of the health department of Alabama in Chilton county. Dr. Graham formerly lived at Thorsby, and has rendered very valuable services to his state in health work. His friends are giving him a hearty welcome.

Farmers Study Fertilizer

Auburn, Feb. 2.—To make a practical study of fertilizers on their particular farms, farmers in twelve black belt counties will assemble in county-wide meetings, beginning Friday, February 6, according to W. O. Winston, district demonstration agent. The twelve meetings will be held in the several counties as listed. Included in the list are the following: Autauga, at Prattville, February 17; Elmore county, at Wetumpka, February 18.

The county demonstration agent in each county is calling the meeting and Frank E. Boyd, extension agronomist of Auburn, will oe the principal speaker. Mr. Boyd will explain the results of twelve years of fertilzer experimental work conducted by the Alabama experiment station here and in cooperation with farmers on the different soil divisions in every section of the state. He will advise them as to what fertilizers to use and, as far as he can, the amount to apply per acre.

By following the results and recommendations of the Alabama experiment station last year thousands of farmers harvested much larger yields of cotton last fall, and indications now are that a much larger number will buy separate ingredients and mix their fertilizers at home this year.

MESSAGE OF AVERAGE PARSON IS LIKE TAIL OF "HALEY'S" COMET, SAYS DR. NORRIS

Chicago, Ill.—The message of the average Christan minister today, according to Rev. J. Frank Norris pastor of the First Baptist Church, Fort Worth Texas, is "like the tail of Haley's comet, of which it is said that 10,000,000 cubic miles would not make a thimble full of real substances.

Rev. Norris, whose church has a membership of more than 8,000 and the Sunday school an equal number pronounced his indictment against a "certain percentage of the ministers today"in an address before member ofthe Baptist Bible Union of America at the Moody Institute here.

His charges contained 10 counts, including lack of conviction and moral courage, commercialism, laziness, ignorance of the Bible, unprogressive ness and ultra-conservatism. "The mass of the people still believe in the Bible and will continue to believe in it so long as hearts are broken and graves are dug," he asserted. He added, however, that the average minister is giving today a "little psychology and sociology," which he likened to the tail of "Haley's comet."

Seeking pulpits through "letters of recommendation," "pulls" by "the appointment of bishops," and by "the standing with some board," he declared, preachers in America who are seeking jobs are morenumerous than two-by-four politicians at the pie-counter of the republican party after the recent election

"There is not one minister in a thousand," he charged, "who can commence at Genesis and go through the entire 66 books and give from memory in consecutive order the principal events, persons and places of the whole Bible.

The average minister, he said, is a slave to machinery, "tied by inside organizations—ladies aid societies, official boards, choirs—and on the outside by some ecclesiastical authority which has a rope around his neck." Rev. Norris declared that "the four greatest preachers the earth ever knew all suffered martydom because of their radical and extreme views—John the Baptist, St. Peter, Paul the Apostle, and John the Beloved."

Several Arrested for Failing to Dip Cattle

The sheriff and two of his deputies went out yesterday to serve some warrants on people who are charged with having violated the cattle dipping law.

This is a law that has never come into the good graces of people in different sections, and much contention and strife has been engendered, but it is the law and the quicker all cattle are dipped the quicker the farmer will have been relieved from the penalty for non-performance.

Mr. W. B. Bazemore of Birmingham, was in Clanton, Tuesday with our successful farmer friend, J. D. Blankenship, his brother-in-law, Mr. Bazemore formerly lived in Coosa county, but is looking toward tilling the soil in this county.

L. & N. Has Freight Wreck

Engineer and Fireman Hurt When Their Train Hits Caboose of Another Train Near Speigner Wed.

Two freight trains on this division of the L. and N had a collison near Spegner Wednesday morning, which narrowly missed taking the lives of the engineer and the fireman of the second train.

From information reaching Clanton it seems that the front freight had stopped on a curve north of Speigner to repair a hot box, and the second train, which was running at a rapid speed was not flagged in time to prevent its bucking the back end of the first train.

Engineer T. C. Courtheimer of Albany, and his negro fireman jumped from their engine before it hit the caboose of the forward train and both were painfully injured

After the crash, several car of freight were consumed by flames, which originated from the engine.

People of the community rallied to give first aid to those who might be injured, and convicts from the prison at Speigner also rendered good service.

Traffic was resumed in the late afternoon on the Clanton section of the L. and N.

UNIVERSITY EXTENSION SERVICE AN AID TO EDUCATION IN STATE OF ALABAMA

It probably is not generally known what this service is, nor what it means to and does for the educational advancement of this state.

It is unfortunately true that relatively only a few students, and even teachers, are financiallly able to go to the universities and places of higher education and take a complete course.

This plan has now been hit upon for carrying this class of education to them: These groups are organized in a community and are open to any one who wishes to take a course in higher education. These courses are made up of such branches as may suit the particular group and regular qualified unversity teachers, like Dr Thomas, for instance, meet with these groups at stated periods and teach them the work identically as carried on at the university.

It gives all of its students a chance to grade up in their technical education and be able to derive the same benefits as accrue to the regular university student.

The State Normal schools are also putting on a similar service in their line.

Our county superintendent, Prof Howard L. Foshee, says that Dr. Thomas has quite a large group here who are taking on this higher course of training and that he meets with them every two weeks, and that they are making most excellent progress.

This is a most fortunate arrangement for those who crave a higher place in the educational system, and wish to qualify for higher grades as teachers.

A STATEMENT TO PEOPLE OF CHILTON

We feel like it would not be fair to our readers to go to press with this issue without making a statement to them, not in the nature of an apology for the appearance of the paper, for we are in the habit of doing things as we think best, and leaving the results for others to judge.

In buying out the News on short notice, we have have placed ourselves in a community with which we were not acquainted, and an office that neither of us were familiar with. And on top of this some of our machinery needs a little overhauling, and several little hindrances which naturally all tend to distort the readibility of the News. All we ask is to give us a little time to get ourselves familiar with what we have to work wtih and do a little straightening around, and the News will stack up with the leading weeklies of Alabama.

The business men of Clanton have given us a hearty welcome, although we have not had an opportunity as yet to sit down and have a good chat with each one, we are beginning to feel at home with Clantonites, and it will not be long before we will all feel like we have been here working together for a long time.

Be patient and keep your eye on the Chilton County News We are going to make the News readable, and if you won't take it, you will worry his neighbors for theirs.

GOOD BYE

Mr. A. Ayres, [illegible] Rockford Chronicle, and Mr. J. W. Ayres, of Anniston, having bought out the plant of the Chilton County News, they will, in future, issue the paper.

It will be published on Thursday of each week as heretofore. All subscribers who have paid in advance will get their paper right on and all [illegible] due and [illegible] to them.

My [illegible] with the paper ended February 1st. All accounts due prev- [illegible] to me and [illegible] settlement.

During the three and one-hait years of my editorial management of the paper I have had the pleasure of seeing the democratic party in Chilton [illegible] strength, as [illegible] out 500, to [illegible] number. It will always [illegible] me to remember this fact. I have also seen the plane upon which political fights had always been conducted here, rise from the depths of a bitter and vituperative [illegible] to a higher and cleaner [illegible] decency and self-respect. [illegible] ching this doctrine in the [illegible] the News, and have [illegible] red to that policy ever [illegible] e I have some right to claim [illegible] part of the credit for that [illegible]

I have [illegible] made a few enemies, which is [illegible] nalties one pays for being [illegible] and trying to do the [illegible] I have no apology [illegible] make and can only regret the fact that we could not agree.

With best wishes to you all I bid you good bye

W. B. CORLEY.

WE ARE WITH YOU

With this issue the undersigned have assumed management of the Chilton County [illegible] purchased the property [illegible] the Chilton County Publishing Company.

In making this change in ownership Mr. W. G. Corley, who has laboréd so faithfully with the paper, severs his connection wi[illegible] It is with regret that we are [illegible] situated to retain Mr. Corleys' services, for we believe he is a fair, [illegible]est, upright gentleman, thoroughly experienced and drilled in his line of work, with the good will of the community. Whatever he may decide to do, we wish him well, and bespeak for him the same good-fellowship that has been extended him here.

In coming to this city to make our home, we believe we have chosen well. The newspaper property we have bought is up-to-date, and with a little additions and a little polishing up, we see no reason why the Chilton County News will not stand with the best weeklies of the state.

Surely we could not have selected a better property, nor a better county, and we feel [illegible]e we are in the best state in the union. The policies of the paper surely have already been set to the highest pitch, equal justice to everyone, straightforwardness in its dealings with all mankind, ever keeping in mind that God is out leader, and remembering that every business act that is not set upon the plane of the golden rule, is one rung out of the ladder that leads to success in one's chosen profession

We will not be able, possibly for several years to revolutionize the habits of Clinton or Chilton county people. We will not be able to changes the religious beliefs of many; nay, more than these, we don't propose nor do we expect to revolutionize the politics of dear old Chilton, and, in the vernacular of the street, "it can't be did in jest a little while."

We do hope, in all seriousness, to live among the people of this county, to be one of a great throng, working to the best interest of the people whom we will be privileged to serve, and to build up a business that we hope will be profitable to us in a business way, but much more do we wish, that after we have served our time among you, that by our coming here, somebody somewhere may have caught a vision of something better, something holier, than the emoluments of this world. In fact, we would be sadly disappointed, should we live among you, with all the success that pertains to this world, and then find printed on the pages of the Great Book above that our work had been in vain.

The senior member of this firm, Mr. A. Ayres, is no stranger in Alabama newspaperdom. He has been interested in the publicaton of several weeklies in the state, and is at present owner and publisher of the Rockford Chronicle in Coosa county. He has in years gone by edited papers in Georgia. He will make his home in Rockford, but will be with the News a great deal of his time.

The junior member of the firm, J. W. Ayres, will be in active charge of the News. Having been reared, almost, in newspaper offices, he has served many years in the composing rooms of north Alabama newspapers, and formerly edited newspapers in Georgia several years ago. For the past few years, up until the last few months, he was connected with the Tri-Cities Daily at Sheffield, and for the previous five years was with the Anniston Star.

With this, we are here to serve you, to do our best for the people of Chilton county, and with your cooperation we feel sure that we are here for a long stay with you, and to make ourselves one of the composite life of this community. Come to see us, tell us your news, and make yourselves at home with the Chilton County News.

A. AYRES.
J. W. AYRES.

WE CAN DO THE SAME

Printed elsewhere in this issue is a story under an Opelika date line, setting forth the fact that a unit of the Peperell Manufacturing Company, of Maine, would be established in Opelika, and the reason for their so doing. The following footnote signed by the Opelika Chamber of Commerce gives a very good reason why all our southern towns should be awake to the different opportunities that are at their door. It says:

"To the Editor:

"This is sent you to be printed in your paper in order that other cities may get more active in securing the mills which are coming south. The Carolinas are pretty well filled and Alabama has a big opportunity."

The spirit of the Chamber of Commerce of our sister city on the eastern side of the state is to be commended, and shows that this particular opportunity is at our door. Somebody will get the mills. Why not Clanton?

This is just one of many industrial enterprises any town might get by looking around, taking stock, and finding them. Will Clanton take the tip from our sister city?

With her modern church edifices, with its magnificent temple of justice, with her beautiful hospital and its immaculate cleanliness, with her sturdy farmers and her accomodating business men, Clanton only needs a few industrial enterprises to make her one of the outstanding cities of Alabama.

With a week's observation in a new community, we have really found only one feature to mar our likeness for Clanton. That is our grammar school building. Give the children a good place to start their training for life-work. It is the best business investment you can make.

Come to Clanton, the cleanest town in Alabama. The reason she's no b'gger, we haven't done our part. Now is a good time to make a belated New Year resolution, put a little pep into the home town, and let's go over the top.

Wonder if they are feeding this high priced wheat to the stock, we notice the stock market and wheat keep right along together. Now is a good time for all sinners to reap the wild oats they have been sowing for, lo, these many years.

It is distressingly painful to have so many homicides which those in power are unable to f dieifsntuicnvigb, b are unable to find sufficient evidence to convict.

By their fruits ye shall know them, applies to everything with life. What will you harvest be? or, have you planted yet?

Poll tax payments were rather brisk in Chilton Saturday, the last day on which same could be paid. As a result, several hundred [illegible] added to the school fund, and quite a few names added to the voting list.

Things have gone so far, we have just got to get this off our mind:
Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
Who can tell me where you are;
Stocks and wheat have gone so high,
I can't see you in the sky.

The path of life is strewn with many pitfalls, but with all the highway construction work being done, hadn't you rather go it than to make the many aggravating detours which you find on every hand.

With everything else rising, the southern farmer has only one consolation—if that is the proper word—his cotton is holding its own, but its own isn't much.

[illegible] Boost your town, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Jail Delivey Stopped by Sheriff Littlejohn Tuesday

Prisoners in Clanton Jail Prepared to Get Away

Negro Makes Escape Wednesday Night Through Hole Intended to Be Used by White Men. Had Not Been Apprehended Thursday Morning

Euell Garner, negro, of Verbena, who was being held in the Clanton jail on a charge of trespassing, made his getaway from the county jail some time Wednesday night by going through a hole in the wall made by three white men Monday night. The hole had been repaired but the cement had not set-up enough to prevent the negro making a hole in same very easily.

It seems that this negro was very talkative Tuesday and Wednesday in giving out the plans of the attempted escape of three white men Tuesday, and led the sheriff to believe that he was a negro who could be trusted. He was in jail on a charge of sleeping in a pile of cotton seed at Verbena after being ordered not to do so.

From reports on the street he furnished a lot of the irons found in the jail for the others to make their escape.

After the wall of the jail had been repaired, this negro removed bricks from the cement which had not had time to set-up and harden and used the same rope ladder that the white men had made. He had not been caught at the time of going to press.

What would have proven to be a sensational jail delivery was nipped in the bud Tuesday by Sheriff T. J. Littlejohn, when he discovered a plot whereby three prisoners were ready to delivery themselves through the roof of the jail.

Three well-dressed white men who gave their names as Gene Rhea, Robert Wilson and Jack O'Brien had planned to escape from the roof Tuesday night through an opening they had made in the ceiling of the jail, the rope ladder having been made from ticking from some new mattresses in their cells.

Tuesday morning being fair the sheriff decided it would be a good time to give the bedding in the jail an airing. On replacing it in the afternoon quite a bit of the bed clothing was missing, which aroused the suspicions of the sheriff and search was made for same. It was found that a hole had been made through the ceiling and a hole punched through the roof. Inside the attic the heavy mattress ticking had been cut into strips and a long rope made ready for the delivery under cover of darkness. The men were locked in their cells and a further investigation made Wednesday morning.

With his deputies, Sheriff Littlejohn made a thorough search of the attic of the jail and found some iron bars and other pieces of iron which had been used in the work of the attempted getaway.

In a further search of clothing a saw was found in the waistband of a pair of trousers worn by one of the men. A very keen sharp knife was found which authorities believed might have been used should they have come in contact with officers in their attempted escape.

Efforts are being made to have the men removed possibly to Montgomery for safe keeping, as the authorities are convinced that they have three desperate characters in their charge.

These men were charged with the The reported attempt to break theft of a new Buick Six car from Lester Parnell of Stanton, this county, about three weeks ago. They were caught in a restaurant in Hattiesburg, Miss., after they had parked the stolen car in front of the building. Deputies Culp and Foshee went to Mississippi and brought them back to Clanton, where they were given a preliminary hearing before Judge J. W. B. Gulledge Saturday and bound over to the grand jury on a charge of grand larceny.

jail created much interest among the citizens of Clanton, and much speculation has been going the rounds as to what might have happened had the prisoners attacked the sheriff or his deputies unawares in the jail.

Other prisoners of the jail were not to participate in the jail delivery, it is said.

The three men are well dressed and seem to be very intelligent. They give their addresses at various places, and one of them is reported to have said he had ten wives.

Allred Drug Company Receiving Coat of Paint

The Allred Drug Co. is being treated to a new coat of paint, both inside and outside. When this job is finished, this drug store will be up-to-date in looks as well as in service. Mr. Neighbors says he hopes none of his customers will get "stuck-up" while this job is going on.

MR. BRUCE OUT AGAIN

Mr. S. E. Bruce, who has been confined to his home on account of sickness, for a long while, is able to be out among his friends again.

250,000 STRAWBERRY PLANTS FOR CHILTO

One of the most promising signs for the future that we see right now is the movement for diversification that seems to be taking hold of the farmers in this section.

For nstance, Mr. Jasper Dennis, who is, by the way, a real progressive farmer, tells us that he has to date for this year, ordered 250,000 strawberry plants that have been put out in the immediate surrounding territory of Clanton and will be in first class shape for making a full crop in the early spring of 1926.

This is a crop that is not expensive to make, and it comes in and gets out of the way of the regular farm crops. In other words, it goes in to the market exactly at the right time to bring the farmer in a cash fund to operate on during the regular dull months while his staple crops are in the making.

Early truck planting is also interesting a good many of our agricultural neighbors this year and the outlook is bright for plenty of early vegetables in the market.

Besides this, more interest is being manifested in the fruit situaton than has been common with our people. Fruit trees are being nicely pruned and properly sprayed in many orchards and the promise is fine for a plenteous supply of better fruit than we have had n the past.

All of these signs denote progress and thrift and are most pleasant to see.

COTTON PRICE HAS TURNED UPWARD

In order to give our country readers an idea of what the coton market is doing, we are planning to give them the weekly review of the coton situation as reported from New Orleans at each weke-end. This resume will give them some idea of the trend in the market in which they are mostly interested.

New Orleans, Feb. 8—While not exactly active, cotton market developed more business during the past week and prices have ruled firmer, March contracts on Wednesday reaching 24.53 and the July option crossed the 25-cent line on that day to 25.02. At those levels prices were approximately 90 points higher than at the close of the preceding week. While the last days of the period under review developed some reactionary sentiment which cut down the gain of the earlier part of the week, the close on Saturday nevertheless showed a net gain compared with the close of the preceding Saturday of 57 points.

The dominating factors during the earlier days of the week were th urgent demand for spots in all the southern markets, and the improved tone of the dry goods markets. The large exports also proved a stimulating factor. There appeared to be not only a good demand for the actual for shipment abroad, but from the domestic spinners, particularly New England mills, as well. According to all reports buyers found more or less difficulty in securing all the cotton they needed of desirable grades and were compelled to pay about the highest bass of the season.

The exports for the week totalled 274,399 bales, according to Secretary Hester's figures, and the exports for the season to date have reached 5,520,272 bales, an increase over the preceding season of 1,629,616 bales. There appears to be every prospect that exports will continue liberal for some time to come and many traders are looking for the total exports for the season to reach at least 7,600 bales.

The moderate reaction of the last part of the week was due largely to hedge selling and liquidation for over the week-nd, helped probably by expectations of rain for Texas, where more moisture is said to be needed. There was a fair rally in the short Saturday session on reports of heavy buying of cotton cloths by the automobile companies.

MASTIN SETS NEW MAMMOTH INCUBATOR

F. E. Mastin, one of the most progressive business men and farmers of Chilton county, also a chicken fancier of ability, is adding to his hatchery and egg business some of the most up-to-date machinery on the market for that line of work.

The latest addition to his hatchery was the installation of a 2,400 Wishbone incubator. This magnificent incubator was set Tuesday evening. In addition Mr. Mastin has a 1,200 and an 800-hundred egg capacty incubator.

This is a business that has a great future, and with a progressive man of Mr. Mastin's ability at its head, will mean much for Chilton county. In addition to the sale of baby chicks and eggs, Mr. Mastin does a lot of custom hatching for the people of this section. Mr. Mastin says old Dorcas will have to look to her laurels of the past in this community. It is people with the energy and progress of Mr. Mastin that builds up a community, and the people congratulate his efforts along this line.

Disciples of Isaac Walton Make Catch

Disciples of Isaac Walton made the initial catch of the season Monday afternoon out at Lock Twelve. Those composing the party were Eric Hart, J. H. Allred and Mrs. Allred and T. H. Neighbors. It is not known exactly known just how much of the finny tribe was pulled from the stream, the gentlemen of the party showing a hesitancy in talknig of the catch and Mrs. Allred was not available for an iuterview, which no doubt would have been of some enlightenment, but we did not care to press this story so far as to make it uncomfortable for these unimpeachable business men.

Suffice it to say, the above party landed back in Clanton in time to order meat for breakfast.

NEW MARKET TO OPEN IN CLANTON

Broadhead and Nivens is the firm name of a new grocery and meat market to be opened some time next week in one of the new Wade buildings on Second avenue. The members of the new firm are J. D. Broadhead and J. A. Nivens.

The fixtures in this new establishment are most modern, having its own refrigerating show cases and the refrigerator is large and ample for a city the size of Clanton.

Mr. Broadhead is a man well experienced in this line of work, and the motto of the new firm will be service of the first magnitude.

Mr. Nivens will not be ac ively connected with the firm, the business being entrely in the hands of Mr. Broadhead.

Markers for Ala. H'ways

Montgomery, Feb. 4.—With a view aiding tourist travel and reducing to a minimum the danger from crossings, curves and ferries, the Alabama highway commission has begun the work of marking the principal highways, of the state and placing danger signals near points on the roads where accidents might occur.

More than seven thousand markers and signs will be necessary to complete the trunk roads in the state, according to W. S. Keller, state highway engineer, who says that it will be probably a year before the work contemplated can be completed.

The markers will consist of a pole painted in yellow with the number of the route stenciled in black against the yelow background and will be placed [illegible] corners in cities where the highway turns. In the event that two of the [illegible] merge in cities for a short distance, both route numbers will be posted.

The color scheme for the markers was selected by the department upon the recommendation of the American Automobile association and after study of experiments conducted by the federal government and the highway departments of other states.

Yellow has been found to be the color which stands out most prominently along highways, Mr. Keller says.

To Rebuild Court House at Rockford Immediately

At a meeting of the commission court held Tuesday at Rockford, it was decided to proceed at once to build the courthouse which was destroyed by fire last week.

Inspection by engineers of the walls of the courthouse left standing, indicated that the walls would do to rebuild on in most all parts of the building. With the old walls being used it is now thought the building can be rebuilt with thirty-five or forty thousand dollars.

Montgomery, Feb. 4.—Edward A. O'Neal, president of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, returned Wednesday from a meeting of the executive council of the national [illegible] held in Chicago. The council elected Frank Evans of Salt Lake City, national secretary in place of J. W. Cloverdale, who has taken on other activities in cooperative organizing.

Mr. O'Neal said of the new secretary that he had demonstrated his ability in his home state, Utah, and had coordinated all the farm organizations there. This line of work is what is required in the secretary of the National Farm Bureau. Mr. O'Neal said and by close coordination the farmers of all states will obtain the benefits which accrue from organization.

President O'Neal on his way home stopped at Columbus, Ohio, to deliver the principal address at the annual meeting of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation. He paid high tribute on his return to the Alabama headquarters, to the enthusiasm and efficiency of the Ohio organization. He saw the same problems in that state that existed in Alabama, the principal one being convincing those farmers who [illegible] that one large organization the solution of their problems than several local organizations working to the same end

Tricks of Trade During Winter Orchard Pruning

Growers of fruit trees who do their own pruning will find it both interesting and profitable to apply some of the "tricks of the trade" during this winter's pruning. One of the most interesting of these is to put living ties in the tree. They are of principal value when applied to young vigorous trees. If a tree of this type is found to have a scaffold limb which is not firmly knit to the trunk of the tree it can be tied there by twining together two twigs from 6 to 18 inches above the crotch and one of which has its origin from the weak limb and the other from the more solid part of the tree. These should be wrapped around each other as tightly as is possible without breaking the wood and the ends should not be cut off until after several years' growth and the twigs have firmly grafted together. Such treatment will form a living tie which will have a greater strength than any artificial one that could be put in.

Balanced Grain Rations Favored for Dairy Cows

The following balanced grain rations to feed dairy cows cost approximately the same. They are recommended for supplementing corn silage and alfalfa hay, and should be fed at the rate of seven pounds for each pound of butterfat produced.

The first ration is 600 pounds cornmeal and 400 pounds bran. The second consists of 500 pounds corn and cob meal, 400 pounds ground oats, and 100 pounds cottonseed meal. The first ration, with corn at $1 per bushel—allowing 12 cents per hundredweight for grinding and bran at $1.25 per hundredweight—costs $1.65 per hundredweight. The second ration—allowing the same price for corn and with ground oats at $1.85 per cwt. and cottonseed meal at $2.45 per cwt.—totals $1.68 per cwt.

Feeding Baby Chicks

Baby chicks must not be fed under 48 hours from the time they are hatched, declared A. G. Philips, of Purdue university. The yolk of the egg which the chick takes into its body before it is hatched, is provided by nature to furnish food during this length of time. If additional food is given diarrhea and other digestive troubles are likely to result.

Should Get Acquainted With Various Machines

During the winter months is a good time to get acquainted with the farm machinery and equipment. The more we know about our machines, the more efficiently they will be handled, and the less trouble will be encountered, and the more pleasure we can obtain out of farm life.

Start with the tractor and automobile; they are similar in a good many respects. Get the instruction book and study the motor; note how it operates, how the carburetor works, how the gas is ignited, how the mechanism is lubricated, why some parts need more and a better grade of oil than others. Study the troubles of the motor, and the causes. After the motor and its accessories are thoroughly understood, go to the transmission, then the wheels. On the automobile, find out all you can about tire repairing.

Other machines can be studied in the same way, the lighting system, the water pump, the spraying machine, and the farm implements. They can not only be studied with the idea of using them more efficiently, but so that repairs and adjustments may be made without outside assistance.

ENSEMBLE SUITS MAINTAIN A STELLAR ROLE IN STYLES

THE curtain has gone up on the first act of spring's style drama and there is no gainsaying the success of the ensemble suit, or costume suit. When it made its entry on fashion's stage a new star strode into the limelight and spring discloses that it is maintaining its prestige. The costume suit is one of the things that promises a happy ending to the story of spring dresses.

The ensemble, or costume suit, may be of the two-piece or three-piece variety, but it usually consists of two pieces—a one-piece frock and a coat to match, as in the handsome model pictured here. Each piece is complete in itself and they may go their separate ways but they belong to one another and look their best when worn together. The suit pictured is made of tweed, in the color called rose-wood, and beautifully braided in an intricate banding pattern which is cleverly manipulated to indicate the pockets in the coat. The coat has kimono sleeves and is lined with russet crepe, and there are invisible pleats below the back, to give it sufficient fullness for a comfortable stride. This, actually, it maintains the long, slender lines that women adore. It is provided with self ... and a single fastening at the front, almost on a line with the pockets. Distinction is written in every detail of this model which will compel attention and admiration.

A ... suits reveal a combination of plain cloths and printed silks, and they contribute a youthful note to the mode, hard to achieve in the costume suit, heretofore. But in the collections made ready for spring, we may find any degree of gayety or any degree of dignity that we may be looking for.

LOOKING TO THE FUTURE

Nothing is worth anything that is not worth putting some effort into. Many towns and cities of the south are running all over themselves to get new industries and the early bird gets the worm is as true as fate. All around us we find progressive communities landing one enterprise after another by just a little organized effort on the part of its citizens.

At the present time many progressive towns have centered their efforts on securing some of the cotton factories that are emigrating from the north and east, and a surprisingly large number are coming to this state. Opelika is the most recent city to land an enterprise of this character. They are most desirable for the reason that it adds a larger payroll to be spent with the business men, but it also gives a larger addition to the population than most any other one plant that might come to a town.

It is is not the largest, always, that pays the best. A few small enterprises that use just a few well-paid mechanics will mount high in the established trade of a community.

Chilton is ideally situated in the heart of a great cotton area, hence a cotton mill would be worth more to the business life of the town and county than any other, and it is in the province of our citizens to land one of these, and with a little haste, have it ready for operation by the time the next cotton season rolls around.

An oil mill is another business that might be included. There are innumerable enterprises that could be landed with just a little initiative on the part of our business men.

THE RABBIT HUNT

Chilton county is to pull off the biggest rabbit hunt in his-to-ree on Feb. 23. Woe be unto the mollie-cottontail that misses the clutches of some watering-mouthed Chilton countian.

This is an event that impresses itself upon every son of man wherever disbursed hereabouts, and you can just bet your bottom dollar that when the hunters line-up for that chase, the old boys of Chilton with their long-eared hounds are going to make merry.

"Hambone" and "Uncle Eben" will never see the day when they can enjoy anything as much as Chilton county folks will enjoy on that day.

See the notice elsewhere and be at the cross-roads ready for the first chase. But, leave your "gat" at home, and bring "Old Lead" and "Driver."

THE DIPPING VAT

Tick eradication is nearly over. It is one of the most unpleasant jobs every put over on the people. It is distasteful, and works a burden when dipping day comes around. Possibly there has never been a law passed that has proved as unpopular to the average man, but it is a law and will be until all the cattle are dipped, and the sooner we get through with it the quicker we can sleep with a clear conscience that we will not have to fool with it again. It is not a matter of choice, and though it may be provoking, and to the way a lot of good people look at it, insulting, but the best way is to bite your lip, rope up old Bossie, take her to the vat, push her in, hold your nose and tell her to sink or swim. If you do this you sape your county a lot of expense, your officers a lot of unpleasant duty and prolong the time that you will be bothered with this matter. It is not a question of whether we believe in dipping or not. It has long past that stage. It is a law, and as we have said before, the quicker you comply with it, the quicker you relieve your mind and the county will be rid of the vat forever.

The Calera Boom

By W. B. CORLEY

The other day, in company with a friend, I made a visit to Calera by auto.

About four miles beyond Jemison you strike the finished federal highway completed with its concrete and asphalt surface open to travel. As you cross in to Shelby county you pass off of the cement surface and strike the asphalt. I don't know what my opinion would be a few years hence, but at present I believe the cement road is going to prove more satisfactory and serviceable than the asphalt.

Calera, you know, is tenderly nursing a boom right now and they are preparng for it on all sides. A street crew was busy paving the streets and many other evidences of improvement were noticeable.

So far as transportation is concerned, Calera is most fortunately located.

Two of the greatest railroad systems of the south cross there and a loop line by way of Anniston and several other important towns, leaves out from there to Birmingham.

They have 18 passenger trains daily, so you see, if you have the price, you can get away from there without much trouble or delay.

The federal highway also passes centrally through the business section north and south, and a state road is now being graded there that crosses this federal road right down in town going east and west. So far as transportation is concerned they certainly have a cinch.

No actual work has been done yet in the development of the of the great lime, cement and by-product plant that is scheduled to locate there right away, but it is generally understood that actual work will begin on this vast industry in the early spring.

Mr. A. B. Baxley, a former Clantonian is located there and is assocated with a Mr. Wheatley in the real estate business. They have got in on the ground floor and seem to be already doing a flourishing business. Their office is near the depot and hotel and is known as the Calera Realty Co.

Keep your eye on Calera for the situation looks good up there now for a big boom.

In Spring Plow, Disk and Harrow Until Soil Is in Good Condition.

[illegible] a writer in an exchange, to be one of the most profitable and reliable vegetables than can be grown, as it is a crop that very seldom fails.

For early potatoes an ideal place should be selected, such as an old garden spot that has been improved for several years, or a place where clover has been plowed under for sev[illegible] years in succession. The clover can the land to be rich and [illegible] nature, plant sandy just enough to be in a good state of fertilizat[illegible] nure the patch broadcast with stable manure. In doing this n[illegible]t so much is needed in the row at planting time. Break the ground good and deep, then in the spring replow, disk and harrow until the soil is in a good pulverized condition. Lay off the rows 3 or 3½ feet wide, making the rows good and deep. If possible cut your pieces of potatoes so as to have two eyes on each piece and use the whole potato in doing so, as the larger the piece the better the germination and start the young plant will have.

Plant Quite Early.

Plant earlier than any of the rest of your neighbors, say in March, [illegible]ling the potatoes after dropping, with manure and then deep with soil. Even if the ground does freeze on top the potatoes are getting a start. As soon as the freezing weather has [illegible]take a drag and run it across the patch, then give a harrowing which will again loosen up the soil. Plant at this time, we know it is too cold for the young potatoes to come up, but the pieces will sprout and take and young potatoes will begin to on even by the time the plant re[illegible] the top of the ground. Try a small patch planted at this time and see the results, then compare with your neighbors and see if you don't have earlier and better potatoes.

Strawing Late Potatoes.

In strawing late potatoes pre[illegible] your ground in the same manner you would if going to plant with the straw, having it in a good condition for planting. Lay it off in rows about 2½ feet wide and drop the potatoes about 10 or 12 inches apart, [illegible]ering them with an inch or so of [illegible] Now bring on your straw and scatter it over the entire field of potatoes to a depth of 3 feet, as after a rain or two the straw will settle down. After the planting is all done, nothing more is required until digging time.

In digging, a manure fork is used the straw being lifted off and your potatoes are found lying on top of the soil. Planting in this way saves a great deal of time and extra work and they will stand more of a drought than those planted in the soil. The straw, when once it becomes wet, holds the moisture, thus causing the small potatoes to continue growing while, if in the soil, [illegible] moisture, as it soon becomes dry and hard.

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, FEBRUARY 19, 1925 NO. 21

Boy Scouts at Verbena

A Troup Will Be Organized at Early Date. Prof. Is Selected as Leader

Boys of scout age in Verbena, the thriving little city south of Clanton, have banded themselves into a scout club, and have written to scout executive W. L. Sprouse at Montgomery for information as to how to proceed with their organization and any other matter that would be of interest to promote advancement of the boy movement in Verbena.

It is understood that these boys have selected Prof. C. H. Sutton, principal of Verbena school, as their leader. This is indeed a good selection and a troup of Boy Scouts will no doubt be a reality in that community shortly.

They have the assurance from scout headquarters that they will be assisted in organizing and set to work in the proper way.

This movement by the boys should be encouraged by the people of Verbena and if whole hearted support is given, the boy life of that community will be elevated to a higher plane and its good effects will be felt in Chilton county in years to come.

The Chilton County News wishes to congratulate these enterprising boys and if we can be of any assistance don't hesitate to call on us.

FIDDLERS TO HOLD FORTH AT VERBENA FRIDAY, FEB. 27

Dear Fiddler:

I know that you too have been wondering when Verbena would have its annual Fiddlin' Bee, for I have been wondering the same thing for some time past. You see, the weather and other things have kind of worked on us, and we have been waiting for it to clear up a mite before we announced the date. The ground hog has now made his prediction that the weather will be good from now on, and we intend to start something.

February 27—Friday—8:00 p.m. at the school auditorium—that's it. Remember the date now, and set it aside as our day to have annual big side as our day to have our annual big time.

Most of those who have been here before and some new ones will take part. By-the-way, some embryo fiddlers are developing hereabouts and thereabouts, and if you know any of them, get them interested.

We contemplate the biggest, best, convention Verbena has ever had, and you well know we have had some good ones. All the suggestons you can make will be appreciated by the committee in charge.

The contest is open to all fiddlers, with or without accompaniment, orchestras, banjoe players, or players on other string instruments. There will be a variety of good and and interesting prizes.

Write the Fiddlin' Committee, Verbena, Alabama and tell them all the good fiddlin' news you know. First, tell them you'll be there.

Fiddlingly yours,
Fiddlers' Convention Com.

BAPTIST MEN AND WOMEN TO CONTEST

Membership Drive Creating Much Interest This Week in Clanton

The men's class of the Clanton Baptist Church have challenged the women of Mrs. Hester's class to a membership showing and will have their chance Sunday week.

It was at first agreed that the men should make their drive last Sunday, but the incessant rain all morning Sunday caused them to plead with the women to have another showing which was granted them Sunday, March 1.

The ladies class will hold their contest next Sunday morning and they are putting full time to give the men the battle of their lives to surpass the number that will be in attendance at the morning study period of the ladies next Sunday.

And while the ladies are working the men are not by any means idle, and it has been rumored(this on the q. t.) that they have appointed men to be at a convenient place to count the women as they pass to their class room. Mr. J. Watt Moore, of the men's class just smiles when anything is said about this plan, and says it is news to him. Anyway, there will be a lot of watching going on, and the ladies are going to have to fill their room if they expect to get a larger number than the men.

"Just watch us" is the motto of the men, and the women are doing that very thing.

Somebody's going to get a beating, but we don't propose to say who it is, for we don't care to get run out of town before we get acquainted so we might know the best road to take.

Judge Withholds Decision in School Election Case

Question of Who Is to Fill the Unexpired Term of Mr. L. A. Calloway on School Board Creates Much Speculation. Judge Holds Probate Judge Erred in Making Out Ballots in Last Election

The special term of court called by Judge Smoot of Wetumpka, to hear the case brought by Mr. Wm. R. Baker against Mr. C. C. Conway relative to a seat on the Chilton county board of education, was called to order Monday morning.

This case has created much interest and grew out of a complication that resulted last fall when Probate Judge L. H. Reynolds failed to make out the wording of the ballot to distinguish which of two candidates was elected to fill two different positions on the board. The complications were brought about as follows:

Mr. L. A. Calloway resigned his position as a member of the school board October 31, and Mr. C. C. Conway was appointed by the board to fill the unexpired term.

A few days before the election on November 4, last year, the republicans put out Mr Wm. R. Baker to fill Mr. Calloway's unexpired term, but the ballot failed to state this. He was opposed by Mr. Howard R. Oden. Mr. Baker received a good majority of the votes cast. At the same time Mr. J. M. Smith was running on the republican ticket against Mr. J. C. Patillo to fill a full six year term. In this case Mr. Smith received a majority of the votes cast.

The main question to be decided by the court, according to his own opinion expressed from the bench, was whether Mr. Baker or Mr. Smith either have been legally elected, as the probate judge had failed to so word the ballot so it could be understood which was to fill which term.

Another question also was whether Mr. Conway's term expired with the election of November 4 or whether under his appointment by the school board he would hold over until the end of the term in 1927.

This case is very interesting to the people of Chilton county for the reason that if Judge Smoot holds that neither Mr. Baker nor Mr. Smith were legally elected on account of improper preparation of the ballots, two vacancies would likely occur on the county board.

Reynolds and Reynolds were counsel for Mr. Baker, while L. F. Gerald and J. B. Atkinson represented Mr. Conway.

SCHOOL ITEMS OF INTEREST OVER STATE

From many ccounties of Alabama there comes the echo of public resentment as reduced school terms are announced, according to H. G. Dowling, Secretary of the state teachers association. It is probable that more than a dozen counties will offer 90 days or less schooling to rural white children during the 1924-25 term; and a large part of the state is well under a six-months term. Only six ccounties-Jefferson, Montgomery Mobile, Bullock, Sumter, and Dallas-can afford anything like a standard 180-day period of open schools.

School funds have increased in some counties; but nowhere have funds kept pace with the rise in number of students and teachers or with the prices of building and equipment materials. In some counties, there was an actual reduction in school money available this year-due to a lowering of property values in certain districts and to the general failure of the public to pay up their poll tax.

School Building.

In all parts of Alabama there is a most creditable program of school building progress. Building embodying modern principles of architecture, lighting, and heating may now be found in every county; and the demand for such structures is on the increase. This is a healthful sign and carries with it a demand, on the part of the public, that adequate school terms and trained teachers be supplied along with the buildings.

Cost of transporation of children in rural schools by motor- driven vehicles averages about $32.00 a year according to the U. S. Bureau of education.—Alabama School Journal

STATE AID ROADS ARE CONTROLLED BY ALA. HIGHWAY COMMISSION

The following news story of a ruling by the attorney general may be of interest to many of our readers:

The state highway commission has authority to maintain a ferry as a detour for the convenience of the public where a bridge is under construction according to an opinion furnished by Attorney-Genèral Harwell G. Davis to W. S. Keller, state highway engineer.

The highway department is constructing a bridge over the Chattahoochee river at Eufaula, the pries and other material of the old bridge ge belonging to the city of Eufaula, which had become unsafe for travel, being in constructing the new bridge.

The attorney-general was asked whether the highway commission is authorized to maintain a ferry across the river to serve the public which was served by the old bridge and to be served by the new bridge when constructed.

"The word 'read' as used in the provision empowering the state highway commission to make detour roads should be construed in this particular connection as a generic term including bridges and any other part of the highway" Attorney-General Davis stated. "It is my opinion, therefore that the state highway commission of Alabama may maintain, if in its opinion it is practiccal and necessary, a temporary open way for public passage along a highway which is under construction during its construction, and that such right to [illegible] would include detours over streams as detours over land."

DEATH OF MRS MARY ALDRIDG

On Wednesday morning, February 4, at 12:30 o"clock the Lord, in His omnipotent providence saw fit to call the beloved deceased from a momentary life of toil and sorrow to an eternal home of rest and joy.

Mrs. Aldridge was the wfe of Mr. R. A. Aldridge, and the oldest child of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Culp. She was fifty four years old at her death. CHILTON CO. COMMISSIONERS HOLD REGULAR MONTHLY SESSIONS THIS WEEK; HEALTH OFFICER QUESTION DEFERRED

The commissioners of Chilton county have been in session all this week, transacting the business of the county. Many routine matters were disposed of and several matters of interest to the general public taken under advisement.

Among the business before the commissioners was a plan for an all-time health officer, but on account of one of the commissioners not being present, this matter was carried over until another meeting.

Comissioner Mims was unable to be present at this session.

Crop Rotation Big Benefit in Garden

Good Way to Avoid Perpetuating Diseases.

The same crops should not occupy the same space in the garden from year to year. There are several reasons for this. One of the chief ones is to avoid perpetuating disease which may have afflicted some of the vegetables the germs of which may carry over in the soil. As members of the cabbage tribe and the bean and pea family suffer from different ailments, their positions should be switched in order that any such pests may be discontinued.

A good plan is to reverse last year's plan and then change it back again next year, thus furnishing a rotation of crops. If this is not done, at least the arrangement should be changed by moving the sections devoted to one vegetable this year to some other position in the garden removed a few feet at least next year.

A good rule would be to plant the root crops next year where the leaf crops such as lettuce and spinach have grown this year or to give the root crops the space next year where the legumes, a term applied to members of the pea and bean family, have been this year. It will not be a difficult matter to study out this arrangement with a little practice.

Planting the taller growing crops such as corn and tomatoes on one side of the garden one year and then moving them over to the other side the following season will be a convenient method of securing rotation. If rotation cannot be conveniently arranged because of the small size of the plot, the best way is to make up for the deficiency by careful fertilizing and occasional liming of the soil to sweeten it up.

The hot sands of the desert "hath no terrors" for men like G. C. Harris, J. Chilton county should be proud of men of the type of these three, and to the credit of Mr. G. Protein Mixture for Young Pigs

Supply Must Not Only Be Ample in Amount, but Also of Right Quality.

Pigs grow rapidly and require an abundant supply of protein in their rations to supply building materials for this rapid growth. This protein must not only be ample in amount, but must be of the right quality, advises A. L. DuRant, assistant animal husbandman, at Clemson college, who states that many of our protein feeds such as wheat middlings, linseed meal, soy-bean meal, peanut feed or germ oil meal, along with corn, do not make an efficient ration for young pigs not on pasture. These proteins are from plant sources and do not make a well-balanced ration with our grains. Good pasture would improve these rations.

Mammoth Clover Gives Biggest Yield of Seed

Mammoth clover usually gives a little larger yield of seed than red or June clover. There is usually very little difference in the price secured per bushel for Medium and Mammoth clover seed.

The first crop of Mammoth clover harvested for seed. However, it is advisable, in early June, to clip or pasture the field in order that the amount of vegetative growth may be held in check. This practice usually increases seed production.

Mammoth clover is approximately two weeks later than June clover, so that the clipping made in early will not be large enough for hay. If the growth produced is short, it is not advisable to clip or pasture.—C. R. Megee, Associate Professor of Farm Crops, Purdue University.

Timely Suggestions on Poultry Given by Iowa

The following suggestions are offered by the poultry department of the Iowa State college extension service, at Ames, Iowa.

See that the mash hoppers are well supplied and feeding properly.

See that the birds are supplied with a sufficient amount of clean water.

Feed milk in some form to all birds.

Cull out doubtful hens continually.

Look out for symptoms of disease.

Feed some form of green food when the hens are confined.

For the chickens' sake, don't overcrowd the house.

Don't worry too much over other people's flocks; apply that thought to improve your own.

Pretty Things that are made at Home

THE most important item in dress accessories for the coming spring is sure to be neckwear, collar and cuff sets for wear with the plain, simple day frocks and coat dresses which fashion continues to sponsor. Printed and striped silks and crepe de chine, plain and striped linens, light weight flannel, kasha and other cloths, and many plain crepes appear in the displays of spring utility dresses and all of them look to collar and cuff sets for appropriate finishing.

For utility and sports dresses, plain or striped linens in natural and other colors are employed for making round collars and slightly flaring cuffs. Except for stitched bands or rows of little buttons this tailored neckwear is unadorned. But plain linen finished with narrow shiny edging makes a set that will serve for

All Atwater Kent Sets Tested by New Device

A device for measuring the efficiency of the complete receiving set with an accuracy heretofore unattainable has been developed in the laboratories of the Atwater Kent Manufacturing company in Philadelphia and after having been in use for a number of months has been pronounced thoughly satisfactory.

Every set manufactured in the plant now subjected to a test with the new device. Its use supplants the former method of testing solely by ear with which each set's precision and with dependent for its efficiency on the skill of the tester.

The new tests are made with a meter which register the filament of current, the B battery voltage and the output from the set equivalent of its signal strenth. The least variation from what is consideded the standard and the set is rejected and sent back for correction of its defects.

Tests On Two Wave Lengths

Thirty men are employed as testers each one works at a stand equipped with a standard set with which the newly completed receivers are compared—and two oscillators. These oscillators, one with a high, the other with a low wave length, correspond to broadcasting stations. For testing purposes, however, the oscillators are considered superior to actual broadcast since they never vary and are not affected by the atmospheric conditions. Defects which might not appear in receiving actual broadcasts are easily detected when tuning in the oscillators.

In testing, the set is first examined carefully for loose wires, stray bits of solder, etc. When the tester has made certain there are no visible defects, both rheostats are turned toward the maximum position, a tube is inserted and the switch turned on. If the tube lights properly the remaining tubes are inserted and the set is strictly in accordance with a program laid out by the Atwater Kent engineering staff.

The accuracy of the set is measured on both the high and low wave lenght oscillators. There are various tests for output, efficiency etc.

Must Equal Standard Set.

The output meter must show that the set is at least equal to the standard. There is a careful check with each one of the dials. If the meter shows variations, testers are instructed to reject the set without question. Meter readings of the rheostats, also are compared with the standard set, and where the comparison is even slightly unfavorable rejection follows.

After the various tests by meter readings, the tester on the head phones, puts the set through various paces, and listens for the presence orf audio frequency defcts of ewith of audio frequency detects. Scratching for example may indicate metallic matter between the plates or that plates are coming in contact with each other.

So carefully are the examinations made that the standard set is checked several times every hour and the tubes for the standard and test set are interchangeed twice daily. If the two sets of tubes show as much as 10 per cent variation the matter is reported to the foreman.

In the few months the new tester has been used it has been found to have an enormously important advantage in addition to the obvious one or reducing the possibility of imperfect sets being placed inadvertently on the market. It has raised the efficiency of the plant as a whole by making workmen more careful than ever before because they know that a defect of any kind, no matter how slight, is almost certain to be detected. A careful record is kept of the part played in every man in the manfacture of each set, and every defect is checked up against the workers responsible.

The economy of the new tester from a manufacturing standpoint has been proved beyond question. Obviously, doing a job over that should have been done right the first time is waste motion; by raising plant efficiencey, by making the workers realize that if they slip they are virtually certain to be caught, the amount of work which now must be done over has been reducced to a minimum.

RECENT FLOODS DUE TO FOREST FIRES

Monntgomery, Ala.,— The recent floods to a large extent was due to the forest fires that prevailed last fall forest fires that prevailed last fall over the entire south, says a statement issued by the Alabama Commission of Forestry. The fires destroyed the forest floor and the water from the excessive rains found nothing to obstruct its rapid run off into the streams.

The forest floor comprises the pine straw, leaves decaying twigs, dead grass and other forest litter on the ground. This material becomes matted and decays from the lower layers upward. It is not only the source of most soil fertility but is also acts like a sponge in absorbing water falling upon the surface. It keeps the ground from becoming hardened and enables the latter to absorb the excess water after the forest floor has become saturated. Thus millons of tons of water are held back and absorbed by the humus and soil from which it soaks slowly into the springs and streams.

When fires run through the woods the forest floor is consumed. The bare rocks and sand are exposed and the heavier siols are hardened by the fire and later kept in this condition. by the sun and wind When heavy rains occur there is no deep layer of leaves and humus to absorb the water and the latter swiftly rushes into the streams causing heavy floods.

The entire process can be illustrated experimentally by placing one or more layers of blotting paper on a small board. Raise one end and pour water upon the incline. The thicker the layers of bloting paper, the more water will be absorbed without running off the board and the more slowly it will soak out of the lower eend. By stripping away the blotting paper and againg pouring water upon the board, and exact imitation of a flood will be seen. With nothing to retard it the water plunges down the enclcine in full volume.

BAPTISTS COLLECT $58,500,000 IN CASH

Final Report on 75 Million Campaign Is Issued by General Headquarters.

NEW PROGRAM PROJECTED

Men of Churches Will Assist In Enlisting Membership More Fully—Conferences Planned In States.

Total cash collections on the Baptist 75 Million Campaign, which closed finally in December, amounted to $58,576,819, it is reported by the general headquarters. This money came from the following states: Alabama, $3,717,464.62; Arkansas, $3,319,672.62; District of Columbia, $373,747.96; Florida, $1,009,416.89; Georgia, $5,282,523.24; Illinois, $677,575.81; Kentucky, $6,414,759.87; Louisiana, $1,681,438.52; Maryland, $739,440.82; Mississippi, $3,076,036.90; Missouri, $3,428,561.24, New Mexico, $708,134.80;

DR. J. T. HENDERSON,
Secretary Laymen's Movement

North Carolina, $5,171,649.83; Oklahoma, $1,461,823.83, South Carolina, $4,752,390.22; Tennessee $3,968,011.13; Texas, $3,720,161.50; Virginia, $6,737,778.30; Home Board specials, $15,340; Foreign Board specials, $86,108; total contributed by foreign churches directly to Campaign $350,000.

Contributions for the five years represent nearly four times as much as was given in the preceding five years to missions, education and benevolences, the offerings for the previous five years being $15,164,345.00.

Campaign Gains Set Forth

Other gains of the Campaign period include the organization of 1,990 new churches; baptism of 950,943 converts; organization of 2,913 Sunday schools with a gain of 445,781 pupils; an increase of $52,847,368.00 in the value of local church property and contributions to local church objects, in addition to Campaign funds of $104,673,560.00.

In the special departments of work fostered by the Campaign the following typical results are noted: 265,000 persons baptized by state mission workers; 225,000 converts baptized by representatives of the Home Mission Board; entrance into 8 new countries and the doubling of forces on the foreign fields by the Foreign Mission Board; putting nearly as much money into the denominational schools as had been invested there in all the years before the Campaign was launched; increasing the number of Baptist hospitals in the South from 12 to 24 and giving $1,000,000 in free medical and surgical service to the deserving poor; raising the number of Baptist orphanages from 17 to 19 and caring for 4,000 homeless boys and girls and aiding more than 1,000 aged, worn-out preachers and their dependent ones.

New Program Projected

With the 75 Million Campaign finished, Southern Baptists have now entered upon the 1925 Program which embraces the support of state, home and foreign missions, Christian education, hospitals, orphanages and ministerial relief, on the basis of yearly rather than a five-year's subscription. It is hoped to raise this year a minimum of $15,000,000 among Southern Baptists for these causes or the equivalent of the goal for a single year in the former movement.

It is pointed out that only 37½ per cent of the members of Baptist churches of the South had a definite share in the support of the 75 Million Campaign. It is the ideal of the 1925 Program to enlist every member of every church in giving at his regular church services, to every cause, according to his ability, through his church treasury.

With the hope of more fully enlisting the Baptist men of the South in definite Christian service, Dr. J. T. Henderson of Knoxville, secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Southern Baptist Convention, is promoting a series of men's conferences in the majority of the Southern states during March. In this way it is hoped to bring before the men the needs of all religious enterprises fostered by Southern Baptists and, having informed them, then enlist them in adequate support of all these causes.

DOWELL EXONERATED

When the board of trustees of Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Auburn voter enanimously to exonerate Hon Spright Dowell of charges perferred against him by certain alumni in this state, it rendered a singular service to the state.

It is indeed regretable that anyone should start, or be a party of a movement with so little foundation in fact as, formed against so noble an Institution as Alabama Polytechnic Institute and its present head.

We are not so well informed as to the workings of Auburn, but from all information at hand and from all that could be learned from the evidence submitted by the protesting alumni, they should feel highly honored at being allowed an audience with the board of trustees.

We don't presume to know what has been behind the agitation of this relatively small number for Joiner students at Auburn, but we are convinced, as are most of the people of Alabama, that this agitatoh has hurt Auburn as well as other educational institutions, and puts a feeling among the student body that cannot but act to make it doubly hard on the teachers and instructors of our noble Polytechnic Institute.

We don't question the motive of some few of the gentlemen who gave evidence in the hearing, but we cannot but doubt the sincerity of those who concocted the scheme, and who have presented the evidence that was adduced at the hearing, when they say they were doing it for the welfare of education in the state and more especially of their alma mata.

Auburn has been hurt. Mr. Dowell, a most competent education and executive, has been done a very grave injustice, and our educational institutions have been lowered in the estimation of the young men who expect to use them in the future. Mr. Dowell may not be a Woodrow Wilson when it comes to the question of an executive head of an instuition of the standing of Auburn, but the people of Alabama will be hard to convience of his incapacity in his present position Moreover, the state has selected a competent board of trustees who are conversant with educational matters in gereral, and people in Alabama are still willing to trust them in the matter under discussion.

We congratulate the trustees on their decision to uphold Mr. Dowell and can only console those who are determined to pursue their agitation with the following quotation.

"Oh, wad some power, the giftie gi[e] us,
To see ourselves as ithers see us."

And it rained

And it rained some more.

The folks who thought it would not rain anymore last summer and fall are worrying now for fear it won't stop in time to plant the spring crop.

It's a-goin' to rain some mo,'
It's a-goin' to rain some mo,'
You can tell
From the way it fell,
[illegible]

When you see the farmer going down the street in a long stride headed from a hardware store to a seed store, you may conclude that Old Beck is on the verge of a busy season between the tracechains.

It seems that a few alumni have constituted themselves at the censors of our Polytechnic institute at Auburn. It might be well for the trustees to inform those that if their services were needed they would be sent for. We magine they feel now like the old fellow whom a huge joke was pulled who said: "Vat a "shackans" vat I vas."

A salesman was boasting of his salesman ship ability to a friend of his, pointing to the fact that he had sold a large bill of goods to a merchant who was indeed hard to get an order from. The friend contended with the pasenton that it was a good piece of work, but contended that he had beat the other fellows feat when a widow came into his store to buy a suit of clothes to bury her husband in by selling her a suit with two pair of pants.

Houses go up in Clanton almost overnight. Watch us grow.

State highway work is being retarded on accqunt of recent rains.

VILLAGES FOUND UNATTRACTIVE IN STUDY BY GOVERNMENT OF THE UNITED STATES

Nearly 20,000,000 people in the United States, or about one-fifth of the population, live in villages, and 30,000,000 farming people use these villages for purposes of business, education, religion, health, and social well being. Yet these centers of rural population are usually unattractive and often very ugly. Villages in other countries are generally much superior to those in the United States in design, in the character of their streets and public buildings, and in their approaches and recreation spots. A start, however, has been made toward beautifying the American village.

Some examples of leadership in this respect are recorded by the Department of Agriculture, which has been studying the problem of village planning from the standpoint of its importance to the rural community and particularly to the farmer.

It is more as a buying than as a selling place that the farmer makes use of the village. In marketng his principal products he generally deals with some large distributing center. But he purchases his household supplies in the village. He goes there for amusement and for social purposes generally. His children often go to school there. An attractive village, says the department, is an important influence in stabilizing farm life and in counteracting the attractions which cities have for the young people of the farms. As the farmer's chief point of contact with outside interests, the village can make a big contribution to the happiness of farm life, even if it be considered from no other standpoint that the fact that it is the place where the farmer spends a large part of his income.

Where villages are being made more beautiful, the impetus has come in nearly every case from local initiative. Villages that have well-planned streets, attractive recreation spots and pleasing approaches are nearly always indebted for these advantages to the energy and public spirit of some small group of citizens. Under such inspirations dump heaps have been turned into garden spots, unsightly shacks and dilapidated stores have been torn down and replaced by smart, substantial business buildings, and extensive programs of landscape gardening and tree planting have been undertaken. Villarges that have embarked on this path are finding that beauty pays. It improves local business. It enhances real estate values, and has a powerful influence in raising individual standards of efficiency and enterprise.

One good example of a village that was not well planned originally but that now has been transformed into an exteremely pleasing place, is Weston, Mass. Weston formerly had a large swamp area in its center. This has been drained, graded, seeded to grass, and planted to pine, fir and chestnut trees. A new town hall and a fire staton have been built opposite the entrance to the common. Public buildings are now centrally grouped. Old, unsightly structures have been torn down. The improvements were planned by a landscape architect. It took 25 years to put the plan through but everyone in Weston now believe that the enterprise was worth the time and money it cost.

A village that was started with a good plan and has realized it is Patterson, California. This village had a colony of irrigated farms, occupying 18,000, were planned in 1910 Roads leading to the village itself h[a]ve eight streets radiating from a civic center where the public buildings are located. In the last four years the residents of the village have built a public library, a community club house a concrete swimming pool, and a grammar school, and have provided an automobile camp park.

A town dump at Lewisburg, Pa., has become a scenic asset, through the activities of women, who formed a civic club, launched civic improvement propaganda, and accumulated funds for an improvement program. Formerly the first impression a visitor got on arriving and the last one he took away with him on leaving was one of squalor, because the town dump lay across the main approach to the village. Today the land where the dump stood is the property of the civic club. Old shacks have been removed from it and refuse cleared away. It has been leveled and planted to grass, flowers and trees. It is spanned by gravel walks ands urrounded by ornamental lighting standards. Now the visitor enters the village through a green and smiling park.

Many other examples of effective village planning have been noted by the department's investigators. Yet the idea that village planning is as necessary as city planning has taken root in comparatively few places. It has not the pressure behind it that brings results in crowded congestion makes radical changes compulsory. The Government points out, however, that village planning often means real savings to the community; that it is never too early nor pense is almost never prohibitive and is seldom a serious handicap.

Chevrolet Production Still Shows Big Increase

With a scheduled production of [illegible] 30,000 cars for March, the Chevrolet Motor company is gaining increased momentum is the building of the new Chevrolet and the working force is being added to in each of the 12 manufacturing and assembly plants throughout the country.

W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, estimates that within the next month and a half the actual factory working force will have been augmented approximately 40 per cent.

"Whereas the sale of the new Chevrolet is pushing us to our capacity to fill orders, we are not expanding our working force any more quickly than we can absorb them," explains Mr. Knudsen. "When going into production with a new model made from new tools, it is important that the entire job be co-ordinated carefully so as to give the high grade result expected by the buying public now as never before.

"Only, however expansion of production in our Chevrolet factory centers is not so difficult as might be supposed, because lists of our former experienced workers who may have been out of employment during a short period are kept on hand and these men are recalled to their old positions as they are needed. In this automotive workers are trained, leaving the training of a minimum number necessary."

Seed Corn Week Mar. 2-7

Meetings in March and April to Plan Grades to Be Adopted

March 2 to 7 has been designated as "Seed Corn Test Week" in Alabama and numerous community events are being planned in the state to impress upon corn farmers the necessity of careful seed selection to insure a normal 1925 crop. A country-wide observance is also to be launched during the week, the center of which is to the National Seed Corn Show in Chicago under the auspices of the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

Prizes totaling $2,350 are offered to the corn farmers of the state for entries to the show, according to a word reaching here from Chicago. In addition to the five-dollar prize to be awarded to the farmer in this county showing the best ear of corn, a thousand dollars in gold is offered to the farmer in Alabama or the United States who exhibits the nation's champion ear. Another prize of a thousand dollars to the agricultural agent, farm bureau, agricultural or community organization of the county displaying the largest number of entries is announced.

The show is open to the entire United States. Any person boy or girl, man or woman may enter an ear of corn. Parcel post entries will be received any time up to the night of March 7, and each ear must have the name, address, county and state of its owner on a paper which should be wrapped around the ear with the writing on the outside. No ear will be awarded a prize until tested for vitality and disease resistance, the judges to be appointed by the American Society of Agronomy. CLANTON B. Y. P. U SOCIAL DELIGHTED AFFAIR

The social of the Clanton B. Y. P. U. held last Friday evening was one of the most delightful social events of this organization of young people of the Baptist church.

The chruch was beautifully decorated with crepe paper and flowers, which added charm to most pleasant affair.

Various games were played throughout the evenning, after which refreshments were served to those present.

To Misses Sarah Cox Jetty Pop-Well, Pearl Harris, Ruby Armstrong and Mrs. Donald Merchant and Mrs. Latham Ellis is due a great part of the success of this affair as they worked untiringly in planning the evening program.

The B. Y. P. U. is one of the active organizations of Clanton, and with its present officers its influence is being felt in the church life of this community.

BAILEY TO DIE FRIDAY MORNING

Unless Governor Brandon Grants Last Minute Stay of Execution

Montgomery, Ala.—Clarence Bailey, whose scheduled execution for murder of James Culpepper, a fellow-convict, has been deferred by reprieve until Feb. 27, has a mental deficiency that classifies him as a "middle grade moron" and his mental age is 11 years 2 months in the opinion of three neuro-psychiatric experts composing the board convened by order of the director of the U. S. veterans bureau to conduct an examinaton into the mental and nervous state of the condemned man.

"Although Bailey's responsibility is limited," the report of these experts says, "the limitation is not sufficient to render him incapable of judging of the nature and quality of his acts." Other experts had concluded that Bailey was capable of knowing right from wrong, but was unable to choose between them.

The report just rendered does not state whether Bailey is mentally capable of choosing between acts, but simply concludes that he is a mental defective in whom the congenial lack of moral sense is far more pronounced than in an average mental defective.

The opinions are contained in an detailed report submitted by Gov. Brandon Thursday evening by three experts: B. McConell, clinical director, U. S. V. Hospital No. 84, New Orleans La., and Harry Rubin Clinical director.

Dr. Palmer is an interesting speaker, and he gave many statistics to show the need in Alabama for a campaign to teach christianity to its citizens.

The services were under the auspices of the churches of Clanton, and is part of the campaign put on by the christian people of Alabama to teach everybody in some way with the word of God.

ANNUAL RABBIT HUNT DRAWS BIG CROWD

About 300 people attended the annual rabbit hunt last Monday, and the best hunt in the history of the organization was held.

Early in the morning the crowd began to gather and hounds were seen on every hand. When the chase started the fun began, and some old hunters say that at times when about 30 hounds were lined up after one rabbit it reminded them of old fox hunting days.

Dr. Crumpton, who has been sick for some time and who is president of the hunters, was able to go out to the hunt.

Another hunt was held in the Refuge community Monday and a good time was had by a crowd of fifty people.

SARTAIN AND RIEHL GUILTY OF BRIBERY VERDICT OF JURY

ATLANTA, Feb.—Following conviction of A. E. Sartain and Lawrence Riehl on charges of conspiracy to accept and receive bribes and acpuittal of L. J. Flecher on the same charge in United States court here Friday morning after attorneys for Sartain and Riehl had announced that they would sek a new trial, A. E. Sartain was sentenced by Judge Ervin to serve one year and six months in the Atlanta penitentiary.

They were found guilty here Friday by a jury in the United States district court of having conspired to solicit and accept bribes from prisoners at the instuition in return of soft berths. L. J. Fletcher, formerly deputy warden at the prison, was found not guilty.

Attorneys for the convicted men announced they would immediately ask for a new trial.

World Court Urged by Raymond Fosdick

Chicago.—The United States senate is urged to ratify the world court protocol in resolutions adopted here by more than 2,500 members of the Sunday Evening club, "if possible at the present session of congress, but if not at this session, at the sepcial sesssion to convene March 4."

Action on the resolutions followed an address by Raymon B. Fosdick, New York, formerly under-secretary general of the League of Nations, who had been challenged by Mrs. F. B. Langworthy, president of the Women's City club to point out," any issue this country would submit for arbitration to the world court that it would not submit to The Hague tribunal.

If there is no such question, she asked the speaker in advance, " what possible argument is there for our entering the new court except that this would be a step in the direction of the League of Nations."

"Mr. Hughes was not friendly toward the League of Nations," Mr. Fosdick stated, "and if the English language means anything the reservations which he drew up with the consent of Preesideut Harding mean that the world court is to be entirely saved from any taint from the League of Nations, even though such taint be but the figment of a dream.

"The United States has worked for the international court of justice for a generation under such champions as Choate, of New York, Elihu Root and President McKinley. Our hopes were blasted at The Hague in 1889 by Germany, who had military aspirations and again in 1907. Choate was unable to establish a court such as was desired by America. In 1914 is was too late but in 1921 Elihu Root succeeded in securing the acceptance of a method of electing judges which we had advocated 20 years before and this international court has been functioning for three years during which time it has adjudicated 12 cases any one of which might have led to war."

Having led 46 nations into the court, he said it would a "monstrous piece of impertinence" to ask them to unscramble all they have done." It is this court or nothing else," he declared. "It is the greatest moral cause put before the American people since the days of slavery; it is the only instrument we have for adjusting modern life to a new environment. The world court is the substitution of authority of law for the authority of force. It is the one thing that will save us from war and I believe that another war means the ruin of civilization as we know it."

Among delegates on the platform with Mr. Fosdick were Mrs. Langworthy, Dean Thomas Holgate, Mrs. James W. Morrison, Henry P. Chandler, William B. Hale and Jane Addams.

HAY WILL HAVE STANDARD GRADE

Week Set Aside for Careful Seed Selection in State of Alabama

Buyers, shippers and growers of hay will meet in conferences over the state during the months of March and April for discussion as to the grading of alfalfa, Johnson grass and various kinds of wild hays, according to an announcement here by N. H. Brown chief of the bureau of markets of the state department of agriculture and industries. Shortly after these hearings are concluded the United States department of agriculture will recomend standard grades for these kinds of hay, Mr. Brown says, and these will be accepted as standards in Alabama as well as n other sections of the union.

Schools for training inspectors of hay grading will be held during the summer at Auburn, Alabama, Washington, D. C. and Kansas City, Mo., as well as other points in the west which will be announced at a later date. Persons desiring to attend these schools should write to W. A. Wheeler, in charge of the hay, feed and seed division of the bureau of agricultural economics is was stated.

The need for a standard grading on hay has been a long felt need in Alabama, Mr. Brown says, and the program outlined by the United States authorities promises to alleviate the situation. Under the present regulations buyers can classify hay at a lower grade than did the shipper, therefore, resulting in confusion as to prices. Intermediaries brought into the controversy often are called upon to determine the grade, it was stated, and in many cases the farmer loses through the arbitration.

Standardization of the grading work will allow growers to ask for inspection and have the grade certified. This grading will then be accepted in all parts of the United States without further inspection.

"Sambo" Caught After Entering Palace Market

Setting a trap for a sneak thief proved the undoing of "Sambo" a well known negro character about town, Monday evening when he entered the Palace meat market just after Mr. G. W. Marcus left for the day.

For quite a while Mr. Marcus has been aware of the fact that a sneak thief was taking things from his store, but no clue could be found as to how or when he was getting in. A small amount of change was taken from the cash register and [illegible] from his [illegible] stock.

Monday Mr. Marcus found that one of the back windows in his store was unfastened and that all one had to do was to lift the sash and crawl through. Late Monday Mr. Marcus planted Mr. Emmet Thomas and Mr. Eearl Marcus in his store and left at his usual time, about 7 o'clock. No sooner had he left that the sash was lifted and in slipped "Sambo". Just after he got into the store he got scared and started out. The two planted men made a dive for him. Sambo proved his alertness by leading them a merry chase out through West End where he was caught and placed in the lockup by Sheriff Littlejohn.

KNITTED OUTERWEAR COMBINES FLANNEL IN ENSEMBLE SUITS

BEHOLD, knitted and flannel ensemble costumes presented as a special feature in the style program for spring, 1925! From the moment of their appearance on the stage of fashion, success has attended these smart modes, which so charmingly combine flannel with knitted effects. Even now, and the vogue is only at the threshold of its career, an appreciative style-loving audience is clamoring for more and more of these handsome combination outfits.

The swagger outfit in the picture foretells a future of intriguing sports wear wherein flannel, as combined with things knitted, is to play a leading part. This stylish sports model tops an almond-colored flannel skirt with a modish jacket knitted of white mohair. That there may be no doubt of the relationship existing between skirt and knitted coatee, the identical flannel of the former is used in a clever trimming way throughout the costume design. The kid belt adds a note of pleasing up-to-dateness.

Sometimes the order is reversed and it is the skirt which is knitted, its companion coat being of flannel or suede, for suede is quite a smart item in sportswear at this moment. Of course, the suede coat is detailed with knitted cuffs, neck finishing, hip band and other incidental trimming.

This alliance of knitted with flannel or with suede is rich in promise for the future. A galaxy of beautiful new shades in popular spring flannels finds its counterpart in yarns and zephyrs which answer color to color, or, if not a perfect match, then an exquisite blend or effective contrast. White with flower hues is a favorite combination. The knitted slipon or coat of narcissus yellow, perwenche blue, orchid or rose with flannel skirt and trappings all of pure white flannel is one of the forthcoming delights of the approaching season.

The knitted ensemble with woolen fabric, carried out in all-white, is very sure to make appeal to discriminating taste. White clipped wool provides most elegant fur-like collar and cuffs for a white knitted coat in an allover pattern.

Prominent Citizens Is Impressed With Chilton

Editor Chilton County News:

As you are putting out an interesting county paper, I would like to say a few things concerning Clanton and Chilton county in general. I came to Chilton county little more than a year ago. I didn't know it was as good a farming country as it is, as I find it one of the best sections of this state, with as good set of farmers as can be found anywhere. Mr. [illegible] family lived with me here [illegible] but I went to Lanett and got Mr. Knowles and wife to come and make their home with me. Mr. Knowles is a grandson of the writer and will help me look after the farm this year and Mrs. Knowles will take care of the home.

We are located south of the Gray settlement, east of Messrs. Calvert and Mr. Chandler.

I expect to buy in the near future close by and make my permanent home here, so if some one has a nice place I would be glad to consider it.

Clanton has grown wonderfully for the last three years. When she gets busy and secures a cotton mill there will be an addition of 1,500 or 2,000 inhabitants at once, so let us pull for a cotton mill as a starter. Just see what cotton mills have done for Sylacauga and Alexander City. Clanton has the same advantages these towns had —on good railroad and in the cotton belt. Such enterprises will wake up any community, and Clanton would double in population in a very short time.

Thanking you for your kindness, I am, respectively,

G. T. WILBANKS.

Do you buy tons or plant-food?

It isn't a question of how many pounds you are using to the acre, but how much plant food.

If you have been a user of High Analysis goods in the past, then you know what it means to your crop and your pocketbook. If you have not used High Analysis Fertilizers heretofore, then fall in line and make your crops show a bigger profit.

For 1925, buy units of plant food instead of tons of fertilizer.

HATS WITH TALL CROWNS GLORY IN THEIR HEIGHT

YOU never can tell just what Lady America will do with a French style, she may acclaim it and carry it to extremes, she may make a wry face and swallow it, she is most likely to modify it, but she has been known to ignore it. For this spring Parisian milliners have sent over the high crown in several varieties, among them the rodeo crown, borrowed from our cowboy hat (thus paying America a compliment) the pierrette crown, the beehive crown and the telescope crown.

Many of these aspiring crowns glory in their height and call particular attention to it by means of bows or tufts of ribbon ends, or bunches of flowers perched right on top, proclaiming their good points as from the housetops. Americans have chosen to accept the high crown, with some modifications and now the crown's the thing mounted on sundry kinds of small brims.

In the group of four early spring models shown here, the high crown has been made welcome and treated with consideration by American designers. At the top a turban of faille silk has a crown in four sections and sloping toward the back. Narrow straw braid put on in a floral pattern decorates the coronet, the flower motifs centered with beads. There are many lovely colors in which hats of this type are made and it is suited to youthful wearers with its amusing crown topped by a bow of ribbon.

In the hats at the left and right the high crown achieves dignity. One of them made of satin and straw cloth in black, with an intricate ribbon trim on the top crown, is well suited to matronly wearers. The other, of green taffeta, has narrow brown braid for adornment of the beehive crown and upturned front brim. Corded taffeta covers the wide crown. A hat covered with black cellophane braid and faced with silk finishes the group. It has a monture of shiny, black foliage and flowers at the back.

COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP OFFERED TO STUDENT FOR BEST ESSAY ON ROADS

Sixth Annual Competition Open to High Schools Is Announced by Highway Education Board — University of Alabama Is Cooperating in This Contest

Washington, D. C.—An offer of four years at college with all expenses paid is contained in the announement made here today by the Highway Education Board of the sixth annual good roads essay contest, in which all high school students are eligible to participate.

In line wth administration policies tending toward economy, students are being requested to write essays on the subject "Economies Resulting from Highway Improvement," having in the two preceding years written papers on subjects dealing with highways and religion and highways and home life.

The contest in the various states usually is sponsored by one of the leading universities of the state department of education. In Alabama the co-operating agency is the extension division of the University of Alabama at, University, which will aid in the announcement of the contest, and at its termination will name competent judges to determine the best essay from that state. The best three essays from each high school are to be sent there for review.

The principal prize is a four years university scholarship, offered by H. S. Firestone, of Akron, Ohio, a member of the Highway Education Board, of which the U. S. Commissioner of Education, Dr. J. J. Tigert, is chairman. This scholarship, which in the past five years has been by three young women and two young men, provides that the successful contestant may attend any college or university in the United States, with tuition room board, books and special fees paid by the donor. It is said to be the largest single education award offered in this country, and its estimated value to the winning student approximately $1,000 annually, or at least $4,000 for four years.

Many state awards are offered by the co-operating organizations including tuition scholarship, cash prizes, loving cups and medals.

By educational authorities this annual competition among high school students, started in 1920, is declared to have been the first essay consest to assume national proportions. It annually attracts approximately a quarter of a million contestants, the number who submit essay depending upon the nature of the subject. Entire high schools often participate as part of their school duties. Essays are received from every state in the Union, while many of the best come from outlying territories and possessions, such as Alaska, Hawaii, the Philipines, Porto Rico and the Canal Zone.

The award in 1924 went to John Liska, a Wisconsin high school student whose subject was "The Relation of Improved Highways to Home life." The first winner, Miss Katharine Butterfield of Weiser, Idaho, was graduated last year from Northwestern University, near Chicago. Other successful students were Miss Garland Johnson, Bridgeport, West Virginia, 1921; Karl G. Pearson, District of Columbia and Lindsborg, Kansas, 1922, and Miss Dorothy Roberts, Harlan, Kentucky, 1923. With the exception of Liska, all of these students are in college, and he will enter when he has completed his high school course.

Rules of the contest do not limit participation to high school seniors, but provide that any student attending high school may submit an essay. No other conditions except those governing the preparation of the paper itself, are provided. Essays must not exceed 700 words in length and must be handed school principals or teachers not later than May 1, 1925. Selection of the best essay is by a process of elimination.

Complete information will be forwarded each person who inquires of the Highway Education Board, Willard Building, Washington, D. C.

The best essay of previous years have been collected in pamphlet form and are available for distribution. These booklets may be found in the most libraries, or had upon request to the Board.

FOREST EIRE LOSS HEAVY IN ALABAMA

Montgomery, Ala.—A total number of 17,593 forest fires occurred in Alabama during the year 1924, according to compilations just completed by the State Commission of Forestry. The area burned over comprised 7,461, 520 acres.

Lightning caused 132 fires, railroads 1,399, campfires 158, smokers 2,504, brush burning 2,588, incendiaries 3,848, lumbering1856 and miscellaneous causes were responsible for 1,729 while 3,379 fires were of unknown origin. Fires covering less than 1-4 acre numbered 1,122, those between 1-4 and 10 acres in extent numbered 6,060 and 10,411 fires were over ten acres in area. The total area over comprised 5,513,205 acres of timbered land and 1,948,313 acres of open forest land.

The past year was remarkable in many respects. During the late winter and early spring, when by far the greater amount of burning usually occurs, the total area burned was comparatively small. During the summer and fall, however, the long and severe drought caused such a high hazard that thousands of fires occurred. A general carefulness on the part of the public saved the forests of Alabama much damage until comparatively late in the fall. By this time the State was covered by blanket smoke drifting in from the outside and augmented by that derived from land clearing operations within the State. By November 12th the dryness had become so acute that fires sprang up on every hand. The peak of the season was reached November 21 and it is probable that on that date there were more fires burning in the State than at any other time within the memory of the oldest inhabitants. Rains finally greatly reduced the hazard on December 8. It is probable that 80 per ccent of the damage caused in the State occurred during the four weks preceding this date.

During the period of exceptionally high hazard, approximately 1,000,000 acres were under patrol by State Forest Rangers. Of this area less than four per cent was burned over. In the unorganized territory, however some of which was later included in new districts, the percentage of area burned over was approximately thirty-nine per cent. The total for the entire timberland area of the State, including both organized territory, was about thirty-four per cent, the phenomenal fall drought causing total to be nearly as great as in 1923 when thirty-six per cent burned over, due chiefly to winter and spring fires.

Fall fires cause much more damage than spring fires, however, and accordingly are more dreaded by land owners. One human life is known to have been lost in the fall fires of last year. The total financial loss to people of the State through the fires of 1924 amounted to $4,249,668.00. This loss comprises $1,68,364 damage to merchantable timber, $4,943,336.00 injury to young growth, $345,213,00 damage to range and pasture and $867,755.00damage to buildings, fences and other miscellaneous property. The year 1924 has shown what forest fires can do the State and the enormous finanical losses that they can inflict. Most landowners have become throughly alive to the situation and thinking people generally are undertaking protection of the woodlands.

TUNNELS are always objectionable and frequently cause delays in running schedules. Yet, because of various reasons—extra expense, right of way, and greater physical obstacles—tunnels have been constructed by all great trunk lines.

In line with its policy of constantly striving for improvement to its service by bettering its road conditions, the Louisville & Nashville Railroad is at present engaged in the gigantic undertaking, involving the expenditure of $760,000.00 in constructing "hills" to eliminate bridges and ultimately to remove a tunnel at Muldraugh's Hill, just south of Louisville.

For nearly a year the work of filling in two great gorges totaling 1,400 feet in width and 90 feet in depth, has been going on. The work will not be completed for another twelve months, but when the track is laid over this hill it will cut off a considerable amount of time, and will materially facilitate operations and improve the service to the public.

When you are impressed with statements that the railroads are earning huge dividends, ask for authoritative information on operating costs, and investment in necessary improvements.

NEWS FROM FOREST SERVICE COVERNING DIFFERENT SUBJECT INTERESTING TO READ

Squirrels Refuse to Eater Bark -Eating Contest

Flagstaff, Ariz.—The damage suffered by trees from bark-hungry rodents is a pressing question with those engaged in the study of the forests, and therefore the interest of members of the Southwestern Forest Experiment Station here has been for some time focussed on the experiments in this region conducted by Dr. Walter P. Taylor of the Biological Survey. Porcupines are the worst enemies of trees in this respect; the Albert squirrel prevalent in the Southwest appears to be the least, but has so far proved discouragingly elusive.

According to a recent bullentin of the Southwestern Station, Dr. Taylor finds that the squirrels do practically no damage to trees under four inches in diameter. What they are responsible for on the larger trees it has as yet been impossible to determine, for no practicable method has been devised to maintain squirrels in captivity in and about trees of greater size.

To assist Dr. Taylor in his study of porcupine and his appetite, District Forester Frank C. W. Pooler is sending out throughout the Southwestern District of the Forest Service questionnaires on which all forest officers are requested to record their personal experiences with "poky."

His home life, his food habits, his favorite haunts, his summer and winter habits, his friends and enemies—all these intimate details of "poky's" existence are requested, with particular attention to the damage he does to forest trees. Such information regarding this most echinate and exclusive denizen of the forest will be of considerable assistance in checking up Dr. Taylor's own observations.

What Causes Eccentic Tree Growth?

Amherst, Mass.—Arboreal eccentricities, like human ones are not always inexplanable, according to the Northeastern Forest Experiment Station. This research organization of the United States Forest Service has lately been measuring a number of red and white spurce trees to discover if possible just what it is that causes a tree to put more growth on one side than on the others, and consequently to produce an irregularly shaped trunk.

The two main theories are (1) that the wood is put on the side having the most leaf area, or "crown," and (2) that where compression is exerted on the wood fibres this stimulus causes a tree to put more growth on that point. Compression is usually experienced by the tree on the under side of leaning trunks, or the under side of branches. The compression theory is therefore rather difficult to distinguish from a third, "gravitational" theory, whch also claims that the growth to the under side rather than to the side having most crown.

The measurements by the Northeastern Station support the "mechanical" and gravitational" theories, with out attempting to distinguish between them. Without exception, the trees measure were eccentric toward the side under the lean rather than toward the side bearing the most green branches. The trees selected for measurement made this distinction very clear. Measurements of perpendicular stems having irregular crowns showed also that growth had been regular, like the stem, and had not followed the irregularity of the crown.

Scotch Pine Doing Well in Idaho in 10-Year Test

Missoula, Mont.,—Observations of six alien trees species planted by the Priest River Forest Experiment Station ten years ago, indicate that Scotch pine out- thrives its fellows in this new environment and of them all is probably the most likely to do well there.

The other species were European larch, Norway spruce, Norway pine Austrain pine, and eastern white pine. European larch showed no advantage over native western larch. Norway pine gave evidences of inability to withstand the heave, wet snows of northern Idaho. Eastern white pine also showed inferiority to native pine in withstanding snow breakage, but is not entirely disqualified and may in later tests do well. Austrian pine, after five lean years struggled up to a place near the head of the list, with a record for the last five years of annual improvement in growth thrift. Norway spruce also made a good showing, in spite of some drawbacks. But forest experimentation is no overnight affair. The foresters at the Priest River Station say that the trees must continue to grow in their alien surroundings for some 50 years more, and raise up a crop of seedlings, before it can be said with any certainty that any of them will or will not succeed in any vast reforestation project in this region.

New Orleans to Remain Headquarters of Federal Forest Station

New Orleans, La.,—This city is to remain the headquarters of the Forest Service's Southern Forest Experiment station, according to a recent decision of the Secretary of Agriculture. In view or the recently increased facilities of a Station, a number of other locations have been under consideration as possibly being more centrally located with regard to the forest areas to be covered, or in other ways better adapted to the work of the Station. It was at length decided, however, that the system of maintaining local field stations in different parts of the Southern pine region, with central headquarters in New Orleans offered the most workable arrangement for the activites of the Station as a whole.

The Southern Forest Experiment Station, one of the nine similar stations maintained by the Forest Service under the Department of Agriculture, covers with forest research and expermentation in the growth of timber and the management of timber land, the entire pine region of the South, from South Carolina to Texas Because of the rapidity and easy with which timber can be grown in the South, and the size of the area to be covered, the work of this Station is regarded as being of great importancce was recongnized by Congress last year by a substantial additional appropriaton for carrying on this work.

Public Service Commission Gives Interesting Facts on Freight Rate Revision

The entire freight-rate structure of the south is now undergoing a complete and fundamental reorganization. The work was actually begun several years ago, but since close of the world war it has gathered impetus under the concurrent supervisory action of the different state commissions of this section and the Interstate Commerce Commission. In the course of time, everfy single freight rate will be revised in accordance with modern princciples. The magnitude of this task readily becomes apparent when it is understood that there are now about fourteen thousand articles of commerce that must be classified and rated.

There are important and compelling reasons underlying this work of reorganizing our rate grructure. It our ratestructure. It is also fraught with many complications and carries with it great responsibilities. In order that the general public may understand the situation as fas as possible the Commission has decided to issue this statement.

The south began its development strictly as an agricultural section. It produced raw materials—principally cotton—which it sold to other sections of the country and to the world, and then in turn bought of those sections or in the foreign markets practically all of the manufactured articles necessary to the comfort and convenience of its inhabitants. This createad a sort of economic dependence and developed a commerccial system that was distinctive and peculiar. Merchandising became the chief commerical activity. This led to the building of a comparatively few trading centers where the cotton and such other farm products as were offered for sale were bought directly from the farmers and planters and shipped to the markets of the world and where, in turn, merchandise in the form largely of manufactured articles was brought in and stored and subsequently sold to the public as it was needed.

This cocmmercial system sprang up before the advent of railroads, in this section. The trading centers were naturally located along the navigable waterways. When railroads were finally constructed they found an important commerce already moving on the waterways. In order to participate in this commerce and obtain a reasonable share of it, which was necessary to the success of a railroad builders was to connect the railroad of more than one hundred different trading centers. The first

The first railroad of more than one hundred miles in length built in one south extended from Charleston on the South Atlantic coast to Hamburg, South Carolina, opposite Augusta, Georgia on the Savannah river. This road was projected by the city of Charleston for the purpose of diverting the Augusta traffic, which was being transported by boats on the Savannah river and steamships on the Atlantic ocean, through the port of Charleston. Then followed the construction of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad between Louisville and Nashville and the Memphis & Charleston railroad(now the Memphis division of the Southern railway) between Memphis and Chattanooga.

Finding the commerce between these different trading centers already moving by water fixed rates transportation, the railroads were forced by this competition to lower their rates and thus meet the rates of the boat lines. This they did, but did not extend low rates to interior points located away from the navigable streams. To these interior points what was called a normal basis of rates was established and applied except where they could be reduced by applying the rates to the depressed water points plus the local rates beyond. This was the beginning of what beccame widely known as the basing-point system of freight rates In the ourse of time a few other trading centers not located directly on navigable waterways were accorded basing-point rates.

This system of freight rates very strikingly resembled the topography of the ecountry itself in that it was full of hills, mountains and valleys.

As long as the South remained a purely agricultural section with its commercial activity revolving around this single enterprise such a system of rates served the public need fairly well; but when the south began to emerge from this state of economic dependence and to develop industrially, and the interior communities began to reach out for business, complaints at once arose. The discriminations and preferences (and no informed person disputed for a monment their existence) that had honeycombed the rate structure in the past acted as a very effective artificcial barrier against the rightful aspirations of these interior communities. The general complaint of these interior communities (there being such communities located in many parts of the United States, but with the chief source of trouble in the and intertrouble in the south and the intermountain territory of the west) gathered momentum as time went on until it made itself felt in the halls of Congress to such an extent that that body responded by enacting what is commonly known as the long-and-short haul law, which was specifically designed to remedy this very situation. It was in 1910 when this first long-and-short haul law was passed. It was amended in 1920 by the addition of more rigid requirments. The purpose was to force, as far as the law could do it, such revision of our rate structure as would remove all the unjust discriminations and undue preferences that had previously existed.

This law has had effect (although it is thought by some to be a very tardy effect) of forcing a revision of the interstate rate structure. The act of 1920 went further, however, and provided that state rates must be kept in reasonable harmony with interstate rates, and this has necessitated concurrent action between the different state commissions and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

EULOGIZES NEW A. F. OF L. HEAD

The following by John S. Chadwick in Birmingham News under head of "What's doing in Church World" gives a good insight into the life of the new head of the American Federation of Labor. It says:

In the Congergationalist of last week is an interesting article concerning the new head of the American Federation of Labor, this article carrying both an interview with President William W Green and an estimate of the man, his character and his service to organize labor. The writer and interview is Edward H. Cotton, one of the editors of the Christian Register, author, lecturer and interviewer of many famous men and women. The new leaded of organized labor is 52 years of age, a native of Ohio since 1900, prominent both in ranks of labor and in politics, floor leader of the Ohio senate under former Gov. Cox; author of the Ohio workmen's compensation law, a teetotaler, a Baptist. But this written, I quote the following from the article mentioned: "Here is a man who does not know the taste of liquor, whose personal life, under the closest scrutiny, so it is said, will not reveal the slightest blemish, who is a church member in full and regular standing, who has ideals and the will and capacity to realize them. He ought to be assured of the support of the churches. He asked for it in the interview, saying: "We look to church folks to understand what we are trying to do. Already the Federal Council of the Churches and the Catholic Welfare council have guaranteed their cooperation. There is nothing we hope for more than good feeling, and close cooperation betwen labor and the churches."

In order to make the refrig cars available on equal terms to neat packeers and other food distributors, the ecommission says the information of a single similar to the Pullman Co take over ownership and operation.

TRAFFIC AND GOOD STREETS

The question of streets is one that every city is facing at all times, and it is one of the problems that confront every city administration for the simple reason that it is the one thing which every citizen of a community is interested.

Good streets, or a lack of them, is one of the criterions by which a town is judged to a great extent. But the greatest thing to be considered is the convenience of its own traffic.

It doesn't matter so much if a stranger drives through any town or village in Chilton County and is unfavorably impressed with our streets Of course we ought to have enough civic pride to want to impress every one that our community is the ideal one and that its citizens are jealous of its welfareness. But the main problem is the traffic uses of our own citizens.

No one can estimate the cost of wear and tear of the cars and trucks used by the business men in the daily traffic on the streets . Then there is the family cars and the ones the people use in going to their work. The repair bills are a costly matter and the important part of the matter is somebody has got to pay the bills. The merchant can't pay these bills Just for the convenience of the people. He has got to make a living and there is only one way to do it, and that is charge this as a part of his expense of doing business. This brings it down to the ultimate consumer, who in a final analysis, has to foot the bill.

The Alexander City Outlook hits the nail on the head when it comees square out and places the matter in the concret light. The only thing is whether the people want to remedy those things or let matters stand in the same condition as before.

The Outlook says:

Alexander City is growing as fast or faster than any city in East Alabama. With this increased growth comes the problem of traffic on our city streets. In the past few years the traffice has become so heavy that it is impossible for the city to maintain the streets in good condition due to the character of the soil.

"In the near future one of two things must be done; either pave the streets or topsoil them with gravel or cand clay. The latter method is expensive and will only prove temporary relief. Paving the streets is expensive but is a valuable permanent improvement., the cost of which will be borne by the property owners and their property, in turn, will be that much more valuable.

"When it was decided to pave the streets of the downtown section a few years ago, the idea was advanced by many that it was too expensive, would it be possible for us to do without them? Has the cost of paving the downtown section proved too great for us? Since it has been done not a word of complaint has been heard. The same will be true with the proposition of paving our streets, a few may kick at first, (some always do on every propositon) but in the end every one will be better satisfied.

"Let"s stop the waste of putting money in the same old mudholes year after year. The property owners will have to pay the cost in either case. the paving will eventually have to be done. Why wait longer?"

WOOD VS. CONCRETE

The following editorial from the Montgomery Journal is truly and always appropriate in most any locality in Alabama or any other state. It is with reference to building and repairing of wooden bridges and the cost of same.

No one questions but that the concrete bridge is an economy compared with the old wooden structure with costly repair bills year after year and its replacement sooner or later.

Concrete is the modern material and the cheapest to use, and the sooner it is used in every place needed, just that much quicker will the city, county or state be using economy on our highways and the taxpayer's burden be some what lessened.

The Journal says:

We are wondering how many times an old wooden bridge has to be repaired during its natural life, and about how much these repairs would amount to in dollars and cents..

It is high time that we dispensed with such antiquated methods of construction, and build permanently, and in so doing safe guard human life and public funds. A bridge is of small moment to the average person, traveling life's journey. He reaches that point where he is in need of a good bridge to cross in safety, some stream that would otherwise be impassable with the old wooden bridge, however it is here today and gone tomorrow, and so is the taxpayers money.

It is true, concrete bridges cost a little more, but the difference in cost as compared to the use and constant service, without additional repairs, make of the concrete bridge the cheaper in the long run by far. We cannot refrain from expressing our approval of our officials in calling a halt to the waste of money, in repairing these antiquated bridges. In future let's have concrete bridges and be through spending the people's money uselessly.

SHORT BERRY BOXES BEING USED IN ALA.

Washington, —Use of short breey boxes in the section around Cullman, Alabama has recently been brought to the attention of officials of the United States Department of Agriculture

"There are thre legal sizes for berry boxes used in interstate shipments; namely, 1-2 pint, pint and quart," the department says. "The United States Standard Container Act requires that berry boxes must be of these standard capacities and forbids the sipment of short size in interstate commerce.

Many growers think that if they use short baskets the manufacturer and not the grower or shipper is responsible. This is not the case, unless the grower or shipper can producee a guaranty signed by the manufacturer or dealer.

"Growers shoul require the person from whom they obtain baskets to guarantee that the containers are of proper capacity. The New Weight Ameendment to the Food and Dr a Act also holds the shipper responsible for marking the correct weght or volume on the crate holding the berry boxes, and growers should assure themselves that the boxes are of such ccapacity that the markings on the crate is correct."

NEWS FROM FOREST SERVICE COVERNING DIFFERENT SUBJECT INTERESTING TO READ

The following is a report as published by one of the Birmingham papers of the meeting held by a group of preachers and laymen of Methodist Episcopal church south, protesting against unification of the church with Methodist Episcopal church.

By Rev. J. A. GANN

Pastor Methodist Church of Millport

Opposition of the unfication of the Northern and Southern Methodist Church was held to be considerably strengthened among the Methodists of the North Alabama Conference Friday, after a resolution pledging "cooperation and support of the organization of the forces throughout our church, with Bishop Warren Chandler as chairman under the name, An Association to Preserve the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," by defeating the pending plan of unification," was adopted Thursday night at mass meeting of several hundred members at the Tutwiler hotel.

More than a dozen leaders of the North Alabama Conference were their objection to unification and were heartily applauded when they declared that the measure "was already defeated" so far as the North Alabama Conference is concerned. Every available seat was taken in the assembly and many stood throughout the meeting, which was presided over by Dr. W. E. Moore. Dr. Hawkins, presiding elder of the Hunstville district, led the assembly in prayer.

After listening to prominent speakers, for two hours, the assembly adopted resolutions pledging full cooperation with and support to Rev. M. E. Church, South, the Southern Christian Advocate, and a resolution by which the body went on record as confirmed its former action.

The meeting was attended by more than 1,200 members and delegates of the Southern Methodist Church in the bounds of the North Alabama Conference. The "organization to preserve the M. E. Church, South,as a definite religious denomination, as a working force in God's kingdom," sponsored the meeting. Speakers of the evening were presiding elders, pastors, church officials, educators, judges, lawyers, business men and others, among them, being Bishop W. B. B. Comer, of Birmingham; Rev. H. M. Stevenson, presiding elder of the Jasper district; Rev. W. W. Scott, presiding elder of the Gadsden district Dr. W. G. Henry, of Emory University; Former Lieut. Gov. N. L. Miller of Birmingham; C. W. Sarver, Judge E. A. Blanton, and other prominent ministers and laymen had part on the program.

The plan of unification now confronting Northern and South n Methodist was taken upon itself

Rev. Stevenson in discussing this part of the plan said:

"Even the friends of unification speak of the plan as a federation or operation, but none can child don't know its name! Neither do we! But there is one thing that they know, and there is one thing we all, know, that is that the Southern Methodist Church will certainly be Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Mr. Miller declared that the plan is unbusinesslke and stated that since all the valuable property of the M. E. Church, South is vested in boards of Trustees of the church, that it would be foolish to think of a non-existing thing holding titles to property. He said that the danger of the plan lay in its many uncertainties."

The question of "overlapping territory" was discussed by several speakers.

Mr. Comer said that if the Northern church desired a real unity that would prevent overlapping the church should practice that doctrine having all their conference in the South join the M. E. Church, South.

Mr. Miller had also said that uniting in the plan would guarantee the Northern Methodist conference at Birmingham or of the South to join the M. E. Church, South.

Special notice is given to the consideration of the negro question.

Dr. Henry, who is a graduate of two or more Northen church, like the Northern people, who had gone farther than their factional bitterness than has the South.

He stated that it was not a matter of prejudice, but a matter of history that the Northern people refused to recognize the ability of Southern people. He expressed the sentiment of the North as recognizing "All virtue to be north of the Ohio river." He said, "Now since we are nothing, let us rise up and show them that they don't need us."

The speaker also quoted Boooker T. Washington and other negro leaders as authority for the argument that the negroes chose to be in one church and have the white people stay in another church. Dr. Henry then said: "Now if the negro doesn't want to go to church with me, I am sure I don't want to go to church with him."

Dr. Scott said, "They say we are prejudiced when we mention the negro question. They have pitched this tune. They have taken into the back alley 364,000 Southern negroes.

He then mention two regular negro bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, (North) and read from the proposed "plan" where it provides that all bishops of the two churches shall on adoption of the plan be bishops of the whole church without further action.

"If you can vote for the plan now pending without voting for two negroes to be bishops with full legal [illegible] in your church, then I am [illegible]" Dr. Scott said

He showed that the plan from the beginning has never been unanimously satisfactory, even from the commission which adopted it at the beginning.

Dr. Scott was loudly applauded.

Dr. Henry said that the Roman [illegible] a real argument [illegible] and cited the Episcopalian Church as example. He said that since the days of John the Baptist [illegible] there have been but [illegible] denominations, but upon a "multiplication" of denominations. He mentioned the three leading Protestant churches, showing that they are denominations with several branches of divisions

Prominent officials from almost every district of the North Alabama Conference expressed the belief that to the annual conference who are opposed to unification. They believe the plan is sure to be defeatpd. Several leading churches of the Birmingham and Bessemer districts have elected delegates to the coming district conferences who are opposed to the plan.

Letters and telegramis were read from leading churchmen from over the connection stating that the sentiment against unificaton is strong generally.

C.H. Ohme, conference lay leader, said that from present conservative estimation at least 90 per cent of the [illegible] Conference opposed the plan.

Judge R. L. Blanton, of Jasper; Judge Hammett, of Talladega, and prominent laymen from nearly every town and city of north Alabama stated that they opposed the plan and that their respective congregations were in most cases almost or totall unanimous against the plan.

There are approximately 7,500 clerical [illegible] and 2,500 lay delegates [illegible] to the various annual conferences of South Methodism in the plan is adopted it will require 75 per cent or all the members of the several annual conferences.

The annual conferences of South Methodism will vote upon the plan during 1925.

Coolidge Inaugurated at Simple Ceremony

Washington, March 4.—Calvin Coolidge assumed the duties of the presidency today for four more years, and Charles G. Dawes swept into the vice presidency.

In brief inaugural ceremony., never deviated from the decorus program laid down by him long in advance, Mr. Coolidge reenewed his oath of office on his grandmother's Bible, and in a short inaugural address restated his policies of governmental offices.

Diving his attention almost equally between affairs at home and problems abroad, and between things accomplished and achievements hoped for, Mr. Coolidge spoke with assurance as to the future, declaring that because of action already taken, an era of prosperity lay ahead and a firmer courage and higher hope inspired the heart of all humanity."

"We have been,, and propose to be more and more American," he declared. If we have any heritage, it has been that. If we have any destiny, we have found it in that direction."

Prefacing this discussion of America's relation to the world with the declaration that "our country repre- [illegible] ward all the earth." Mr. Coolidge set forth ways and means of manifesting that spirit while at the same time maintaining "such a military force as befits wth the dignity and security of a great people."

He [illegible] of American adherence to the Permanent court of International Justice; declared that America must continue to "old"; favored continuation of the policy of participation in world conference "whenever conditions are such that there is a even promise that practical and favorable results might be secured;" spoke [illegible] of aid to mitigate human suffering and assist in the rehabilitation of distressed na- [illegible] with the movement to clarify international law wand to bring about the outlawing of agressive war.

MRS. OTIS LEVY DIED IN SYLACAUGA MONDAY

Many friends in Clanton, of Mrs. Otis Levy, and Miss Mable Thomas will regret to learn of Mrs. Levy's death which occurred in her home at Sylacauga on Monday morning, 7:30 o'clock.

Mr. Curry Thomas and his sister, Mrs. W. F. Spigener hastened to their sister's bedside on the night preceding her death. Other Clanton relatives and friends followed on Monday evening.

The funeral services were held on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock and the remains were placed in the Sylacauga cemetery.

Mrs. Levy's death is peculiarly sad. She leaves a husband and three step-daughters, besides many friends and relatives, whose grief seems inconsolable. These girls were recently bereft of their grand-mother's loving care. The devotion of Mrs. Levy was remarkable.

Universal sympathy is extended to the Levy and Thomas families in their bereavement.

BAPTIST MEN OF CLANTON MAKE RECORD

With a splash of rain and mud, the Baptist men of Clanton went over the top in their membership drive for the men's class of the Baptist Sunday school Sunday, when they registered 72 present at the morning lesson.

The women's class of this church challenged the men to a membership drive some time ago and as a consequence Sunday, February 15 was the date set for the men to make their drive, the women to have their count Feb. 22.

With rain falling continously and continually Sunday, February 15, the men., seeing their finish, straightway went to the ladies, with this alibi:.

"We appeal to your fairness, which we know, out of goodness of your hearts, you can not turn us away, that looking out on this gloomy, rainy day., men can not be expected to come out to Sunday school. Therefore we appeal to you to give us the chance which we so "richly" deserve, of ing our drive on March 1, the next Sunday after you have your count."

The good women acquired in the appeal, but they could tell't'ere long that they had fallen into a trap, which was no comparison to the one set by the spider for the innocent little fly.

They stayed by their promise in February 22 and made a fine record.

The men came back the next Sunday March 1, and found a class of 72 men of Clanton," which was an inspiration to the church, the pastor and the children who Sunday after Sunday make up the attendance.

OLD CITIZEN OF THORSBY DIED WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

Mr. Wash Johnson aged 62, a highly respected citizen of Thorsby, died at that place Wednesday. He had been sick for some time.

The remains will be laid to rest in the Thorsby cemetary today. J. Mell Martin, undertaker of Clanton, will be in charge.

PREACHING SERVICES AT CHURCH OF CH. ST

Rev. W. C. Graves of Birmingham, will preach at the church of Christ in Clanton, next Sunday at 11 o'clock a. m.

Mr. Graves is a good preacher, and the public has a cordial inviation to hear him.

Highway Settled on Seventh Steeet

After being held in status quo for a long while the state highway commission has finally decided on the route of the state highway through the town of Clanton.

At a meeting of the board last week the commission, after hearing both sides finally selected Seventh street as the route through Clanton.

The highway route through Chilton county has been settled for quite a while with exception of the part as stated above.

Sixth and Seventh streets running north and south through Clanton were each bidding for the highway to come their respective street. Quite a bit of interest was manifested by property owners on either street and some lively tilts between them have been the outcome at Montgomery at different times. An effort to get a re-opening of the matters was made Monday, but the request was turned down by commission.

Among those going to Montgomery Monday, most of whom went in connection with the highway question were: Messrs. Lee Smith, Fayette Powell, R. C. McDavid G. C. Walker W. I. Mullins, W. W. Fox, Marion Gore, Judge Reynolds and Dr. Hayes Mesames Napoleon Johnson, Hosea Downs and Robert Williams, were with the delegation.

The contractors on the other part of the highway have been busy for the past several months, and are in good shape with the grading, bridge and cluvert work, between Jemison and Wessington is progressing rapidly.

Things Worth While Being Done by Mrs. Curry

We were indeed suprised and gratified Tuesday morning when we went to the home of Mrs. Clara B. Curry to interview her in connection with news of Clanton for the Chilton County News.

She would have us take a look at the little tots of her kindergarten class, who were assembling for their daily study in the room of her home specially provided for this purpose.

In there we found around fifteen bright faced little boys and girls all interested in the work in which they were engaged. Each child had provided his or her own chair and a convenient blackboard arrangement had been placed on one side of the room.

Mrs. Curry then told us of her work with these little fellows and of the program rendered in the presence of the mothers last Friday in commemorating Henry Wadsworth Longfellow birthday. In their recital the little pupils gave readings from the poems of Longfellow. A very creditable readings of "The Village Blacksmith," one of the gems of Longfellow's work, was had by one of the smallest of the class.

Time forbade us staying long with this class, but we were very much impressed with this necessary work, and the thought came to us of how few men and women are equipped, and after being equipped, are willing to devote the time necessary for the training this good woman is doing for the little children. We commend her.

ARBOD DAY AND HOW IT ORIGINATED

Montgomery.—Mar. 3.—The observance of Arbor Day is in accordance with a very old custom originating Europe in the 5th century, according to the Alabama Commission of Forestry. From an old chronicle it appears that the people of a little Swiss village decided to have an oak grove in the public square. A day was set, and the entire community—men, women, and children—went to the woods, carefully took up oak saplings and brought them to the village square where they were as carefully planted. Each boy and girl participated in the labor received a wheaten roll as a reward, and in the evening the grown-up people had a feast and a frolic. For years afterwards the anniversity of this tree planting was observed with appropriate ceremonies by the villagers.

In the United States, Arbor was first observed in Nebraska in April, 1872, when over a million trees were planted. Kansas and Tennessee followed the lead of Nebraska in 1875, and the next year Minnesota fell into line. Other states followed rapidly. In most states the legislature has designated by law a particular date as Arbor day. In other instances, however, as in the case of Alabama, the day is set by the Governor's proclamation each year. This year Governor Wm. W. Brandon has issued a proclamation setting aside Friday, March 6.

The planting of trees on Arbor Day schools, patriotic socities, civic organizations and individuals can provide a direct economic recourse where windbreaks, timber and fuel for neighborhood use are needed. Apart from there are many valuable uses of trees for shade and ornamental purposes Yearly planting, accompanied by appropriate exercises, serve to keep the the people continually remined of the value and necessity of trees and forests, and they have such a far-reaching effect on the public spirit that all communites, reap decided benefits from the observance of Arbor Day.

Concuh county, created February 13 1818, derived its name from the Indians. Evergreen is the county seat. The county has a population, approximately 25,000 and a land area of 543,360 acres.

MONTGOMERY, —The fifth annual report of the state fire marshal's department, filed Saturday, shows there was a decrease in property destruction of $1,407,827.37 by fire in Alabama from Oct 1, 1923 to Sept 30, 1924.

There were only a few more fires than for the previous year, the exact number above the preceding year being just 24. The number for the year 3,719.

Total values at risk show a decrease the figures this year being $23,389,310 .07 as against $27,223,501.47 for the preceding year.

Of the fires reported, 1,533 were caused by sparks on roofs," which continues to hold the lead in fire causes by several times over any other cause. Hot ashes and coals caused 290 fires, defective chimneys and flues 278, defective wiring 187 and unknown causes, 873.

Smokers had only 14 fires chalked up against them, but backfiring automobiles came up with a total of 21, oil stoves explosions had 21, and electric irons 18. Instantaneous heaters caused 11, overheated stvoes 29, lightning 17 and blazes communicated from one to another reached 290. Overheated furnances caused 12 and spontanecus combuston, 40.

Incendiarism is charged with 53 and suspicious 6, but even these did not reach the total of suspicious fires, according to the fire marshal, as local fire officials are usually averse to reporting their suspisous to the officials. Sparks falling from passing locomotives caused 10 fires.

Silk Promises to Be Season's Mode

Dealers Are Showing Interest in New Varieties of Favored Fabric

In this year's southern fashions are designs without number that indicate a certain conventionality in dress that has lately been lacking, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. They represent much art originality and charm, much that is strikingly stylish. Some of the style is a matter of line and composition, some is a matter of color. Most important of all is material.

This season's fabrics are in themselves an interesting subject. It is quite certain that this is to be a silk season. The largest dealers spend more time and genius in new varieties, patterns and weaves of silk than they have shown in years before. Many kinds of silk goods have never before been presented.

The latest type of silk is something far in advance artistically of last season's offerings. Ferronniere (iron-work) silks are the conspicuous novelty, in pattern and weave as well as in name. They are the creation of Edgar Brandt, a Frenchman, who has adapted to the printing of silk the designs we see in ornamental iron work, fire-screens, gates, the doors and window s of the old cathedrals in France.

Among the distinguished examples of his artistry is the iron work of the stairways in the Louvre. The French government commissioned M. Brandt to do the ornamental iron setting of the tomb of the unknown soldier.

In these designs the motifs are scrolls, figures and geometric patterns. They are worked into a flat surface ornamentation with surprising symmetry and proportion, and are printed on crepe and silk in the very newest colors.

Apart from these unique ferronniere prints, there are many new and altogether delightful designs. Polka dots are to have a vogue. Not the evenly spaced, uniform size dots with which we are familiar, but many clever variants. Some dots are oblong, printed at equal distances, and others, oval in shape, are clustered according to size Dots of every size are to be fashionable, the round dot the size of a dime or smaller, evenly arranged, being an especial favorite.

A novelty is a silk that has dots of two sizes, one quite small at one side of the silk width, graduating to large dots across the width to the edge. In making up the silk or crepe thus printed it is used with the width for length, and is shown by the importers in gay scarlet dots printed on white, in blue, brown and green on white. Blue and white—that clear, always smart combination of navy blue and white—is to be especially modish this season, first for the utility day-time frock, and later it will undoubtedly be in demand for summer.

Floral Pattern Novelty.

A conventionalized pattern is another among the novelties that is being very well received and is shown in some of the models from the most exclusive Paris houses

Small flowers and figures are most popular. Those in the new colors, orange, red, blue and green, printed on white crepe, have an indescribably dainty Dresden effect.

One of these small flowered patterns is treated in a unique fashion, the border idea being the general scheme. That half of the width which will make up the bottom of the skirt of tunic has a background of dark blue with fine lines of white running diagonally at inch-wide intervals. On this area is stamped the little block flowers of red brown and mauve, with green leaves.

On the other half of the silk width, the background of which is corn yellow, is printed the same pattern of conventionalized flowers.

The new scheme of colors, distinctly Spanish, in harmonies of red, yellow and brown, is shown in some of the best ferronniere prints. One that is no end smart has a ground of ivory crepe, on which the scroll pattern is printed in a red brown that the French call "burnt bread." At the very edge of this all-over design is a three-inch border of delicate fretwork stamped in gray and black.

On another white crepe roman a large diagonal diamond pattern is formed with narrow stripes in lattice work of black and blue.

A distinctive feature of the season's materials is the plain ribbed silks. These are shown in the crepe satin, crepe roman, bengaline and a pretty new variety, called folile de soie, similar to radium. All of these new silks and the different crepes are artistic and charming in themselves. As they are presented in the late models they are delightful, especially in the new combinations of plain and figured materials.

All of the prominent couturiers in Paris have designed an assortment of these silk frocks seen at the southern resorts. One creator of advanced ideas is Goupy, whose models are shown in an ultra-exclusive shop, his favorite scheme being the two-piece frock.

Usually the skirt or the slip is made of plain crepe or a crepe in plain color with printed border, plaited very fine. The blouse, which is a straight or belted affair, is done in one of the printed crepes. A variant of this model has a skirt of the patterned crepe roman in a small floral design, the overblouse, almost knee length, being of plain goods piped with a color to accentuate one note in the skirt.

Woolens Copy Ribbed Silk.

The togs that are required to make a proper appearance on out-of-doors occasions at the southern resorts are quite as engaging as this season's more elaborate dress. Some of the lightweight woolens appear to copy the ribbed silks, and the finer varieties of flannel are grateful in feeling and exceedingly smart.

These are presented in models of two sorts. One is the modish sports suit, that is showy and gay, extravagant and picturesque in its scheme of decoration in lighter weight and colors, though less athletic in character, of the suits that one sees at the winter sports resorts.

Then, again, white is now, as always, the predominating note of the southern Riviera wardrobe, and much red appears. Suit after suit in light woven wool is made of white, with pipings, bindings or narrow borders of scarlet.

One of the smartest ensembles seen lately was designed for Palm Beach, of pearl gray wool bengaline with an inch-wide binding of red silk and coat lining in the same shade. A tiny gray felt hat in the new soft cloche shape had a band of gray grosgrain ribbon about the crown, tied in a bow toward the back at one side.

The frocks and suits of attractive combinations are exceedingly modish at the moment, but there is in many of the late models a decided tendency to simplicity. Some of the newest things are self-trimmed, of one color from collar to hem.

If it is possible to specify one kind of dress that will prevail at the resorts it should be the two-piece frock, and the one indispensable garment, the tunic blouse. Much will be seen of these all through the summer, after the establishing of their vogue by the chic women who wear them in the South.

Attention to Evening Dress.

Of the French authorities on dress who have done particularly attractive things suitable for southern wear is Jean Patou, who gives especial attention to evening dress. His favorite material is always something of the nature of marquisette, which is exceedingly popular this season. He cuts his skirts circular in shape and uses lightly bands of silver or crystal and often a garniture of flowers.

In his latest dance frock models Patou introduces impartially fringe, feathers and lace. Needlework, particularly the bright-colored wool embroidery of the peasant type, is shown on some of the lightest wool crepe frocks, and the lingerie gown in all its dainty, fragile distinction is growing in a revived popularity.

SENATOR WILL FIGHT WOODLOCK NOMINATION

Senator E. D. Smith of South Carolina, democratic chairman of the senate interstate commerce committee, will oppose a favorable report by the committee on the nomination of Thos. Woodlock of New York for the position on the interstate commerce commission which has become vacant by the retirement of Commissioner Potter. His reason is that the president has refused to recognize the eastern states are now in control of the commission while the south is without a representative.

In speaking of the president's action, the Senator Smith said: "It is an outrage that the rates of this country cannot be made with every section sitting about the board in the persons of its representatives. I shall call on the president and tell him that fact as an explanation of the fight I intend to make. From Washington to Maine, a distance of 800 miles, there are four members of the commission From Washington south to the Mississippi river a distance of 3,800 miles, there is no representative. The fact that the south will not be represented by one constantly jealous of its interests may result in grave injury to the south in relation to its waterways competition with railroads."

In addition to the fact that the south has been ignored, although there is justice in its appeal for recognition, the opponents of Mr. Woodlock may ground their case in other facts. Only the Wall Street viewpoint is represented by Mr. Woodlock. Many things establish the correctness of this statement. The president himself said he desired for this office a man who knew railroad finance rather than railroad rates, although the interstate commerce commission is supposed to give a great majority of its time to the adjustment of transporation rates. The man with knowledge of railroad finance may be an important person for the protection of the railroads, but he means little in the protection of the public interest. Futhermore, if we must put upon the interstate comfor the protection of the railroads, in for the protection of the railroads, in their financing plans and in their dealings with the public, what are the railroads to do with their general attorneys and general solicitors who are always around when there is a suit pending a legislature in in session?

That Mr. Woodlock is a product of of Wall Street is indicated by an editorial endorsement of the Wall Street Jonrnal which was written January 20, several days before there was any indication at Washington that the president was giving serious consideration to the applicant. Under the caption, "An Ideal Appointment,, " the Wall Street Journal says:

"What seems to be a well grounded report is current, if perhaps premature, that the president is considering the appointment of Thomas F. Woodlock to succeed Mark W. Potter on the interstate commerce commission. The appointment would be so ideal from cevry point of view that some of us may well fear that it is too good to be true. There is absolutely no one else in the United States with Mr. Woodlock's qualifications for the office. This is a case of the office seeking the man and certainly a salary of $12.000 a year for an unexpired term is no serious inducement to an expert whose value in the business world may easily be three times that sum"

But how is the public to know that Mr. Woodlock purposes to use his peculiar qualifications, so admirably described by the Wall Street Journal, in the interest of those whom congress had in mind when it enacted the law creating the interstate commerce commission? Environment has a means of making a channel through which the average mind must run. It is not often that the human mind can escape this channel. Mr. Woodlock came up in Wall Street and Wall Street is proud of him. It is too much to think that he would desert his own neighbors and would become the representative of a great south, now without representation on the commission and long to continue to be without representation if the nomination of Mr Woodlock be, confirmed.

Ry. Economics Board Issues Statistics

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—Freight charges on live stock shipments represent only 5-3-5 cent of each dollar the purchaser paid for live stock, while the producer or seller at point of shipments realize net proceeds of 91-2- 5 cent, other costs of distrbution being 3 cent,, according to a study just made by the Bureau of Railway Economics into the relationship commodity prices bear to transportation costs.

The wide spread in the prices received in the markets for live stock of good quality and that of poorer grade, is clearly brought out in the study, which shows that this spread accounts for the variations in the percentage of the price absorbed in freight charges.

This study, which relates entiely to live stock, was based on sales of more than 6.000 carloads of cattle, ccalves, hogs and sheep made at ten principal markets in the United States during the year which ended on October 6, 1924.

The study according to a bulletin issued today, tends to show the following:

1. That the freight charges are a relatively small factor in the price paid to the seller for live stock.

2. That apparently the principal factors influencing the seller's net proceeds are the qulity of the stock and marketing conditions.

3. That in the marketing of cattle and calves, hogs and sheep, the transportation costs permit of the free movement of live stock to the various marketing centers from a wide range of territory.

Freight charges on cattle and calves," according to the bulletin, "represent 5.8 per cent of the price paid by the purchaser; other costs of distribution were 2-8 per cent, while the net proceeds to seller at shipping point were 91.4 per cent of the price. For hogs, the freight charges were 5.1 per cent with other costs of distribution 3.2 per cent, which leaves to to the seller at shipping point net proceeds of 91.7 per cent. For sheep, freight charges were 6.9 per cent; other costs of distribution 3.0 per cent and net proceeds to the seller at shipping point 9.1 per cent."

The study also indicates that the percentage of the price paid by the purchaser, which is absorbed in freight charges, varies greatly, and that the principal cause of these variations is the difference in kind and quality of live stock.

This conclusion, that the principal factors influencing live stock prices are the quality of stock and marketing conditions, is borne out by a compilation of prices paid for beef steers of various grades sold at Chicago during the year ended on November 8, 1924

The figures show that out of 1.304.-907 head of steers sold during the year, 132.432, or 10.2 per cent, were graded as "choice and prime" and sold at an average price of $10.94 per hundred pounds; 365.401 head, or 28 per cent, were graded good and sold for, $1..06 per hundred pounds; 638.-403 head, or 48.9 per cent, were graded as medium and sold for $8.88 per hundred pounds; 168,671 head, or 12.9 per cent, were graded as common and sold for $7.27 per hundred pounds. This means a difference between the "common" and "choice and prime" prces of $3.67 per hundred pounds.

sales where heavy, a fluctuation of 2.23 per hundred pounrs.

The spread in average price between "common" and choice and prime" grades for the individual weeks varied prices of $3.67 per hundred pounds.

For "choice and prime" grade, the highest average weekly price paid during the period was $12.15 per hundred pounds when sales were light, and the lowest average price was $10..22 when sales were heavy, a fluctuation of $1.93 per hundred pounds.

For "common" grade, the highest average wekly price was $8.08, wpring the period when sales were light, and the lowest price was $5.85, when

TRAILING THE WHITE [illegible] COME LOWER [illegible] GOWNS

NOW that we have our adoring eyes on spring apparel—while our budget for spring clothes resolutely stands between us and many things we desire—what shall we do about the beaded gown? If you will read society reports in the newspapers, look upon lovely ladies at social functions, or study the pages of smart fashion journals, you will soon know as much about beaded gowns as the observant fashion writer does. What she knows is that every one, from her majesty at the head to little Lady Debutante at the foot of the class in styles, owns a beaded gown. "The bride's mother wore a crepe gown beaded in," etc, or "The bride's dress was trimmed with lace, incrusted with crystal and pearl beads," or "Many ladies at the White House reception wore beaded gowns," impress themselves by sheer force of repetition. Therefore there is but one thing to do—take our budget firmly by the hand and lead it in the direction of beaded dr[illegible]

Verbena Department

The large crowd in Verbena Friday evening, February 28, before evidence to the fact that the "old time fiddling" still holds interest and entertainment for the majority of people, and these "conventions for fiddlers" that are held annually in Verbena, we get the real meaning of "fiddling," and the pleasure of listing to experts along this line.

Every inch of standing and setting room in the "community house" was occupied, and many stayed on the outside, where the center of attraction was a ""hot dog stand," coming in very handy, as the night was chilly.

After several hours of ffiddling, the judges retired, a few minutes later returned and announced M. E. H. Johnson as winner of first prize. Ten other prizes were awarded, according to the decision made by judges.

The people at the Baptist church, of Verbena, listened to an interesting sermon Sunday evening, March first, preached by Mr. Nicholson, a returned missionary from foreign fields.

—o—

"The Boyhood of Christ," a sermon especially for the young people, will be preached at the Methodist church, Sunday morning, March 8, at the usual hour, by Rev. G. W. Jones, pastor Both young and old will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear this sermon.

—o—

The boys of Verbena have awakened to the fact that good citizenship can be both obtained and carried out by Boy Scout, and have organized a Troop, under the leadership of Prof. W. E. G. Sutton.

To be a boy scout, and uphold the standards that have to be kept by a a true scout, is an honor of which every boy is justly proud, and one which we are glad to claim by the boys who belong to the troop. The best that we can wish for them is that they will always remain true to the standards they are upholding when they are wearing a "Boy Scout unifom."

The girls are going to follow this splendid example of the boys, and organize a troop under the leadership of Miss Johnson, junior 1 and 2 teacher.

—o—

Mrs. C. B. Norrell will present her music class in a Piano Recital at the community house, Wednesday evening, March fourth, at eight o'clock. This will be the last recital before commencement.

—o—

As work is continued on the school building, the seniors have high hopes of graduating in the new auditorium, and claming the honor of being the first class to do so. Who says this is impossible?

Forage Crops Essential For Pork Raising

Forage crops are essential for the most economical production of pork, but sometimes it is a question of which is the most profitable to grow. A test has just been completed to [illegible] value of soybeans and peanuts as a forage crop for hogs, says A. L. Durant, assistant animal husbandman.

Three lots of pigs averaging 20 lbs. each at the beginning of the trial were used in [illegible] test. Ten pigs received [illegible] and tankage for 35 days. Fifteen pigs grazed on an [illegible] Mammoth Yellow soybeans for [illegible] days. [illegible] on an [illegible] Spanish peanuts for 35 days before these forages were consumed. The pigs on soybeans and peanuts were also given a two per cent corn ration, and all pigs were allowed free access to a mineral mixture, consisting of 12 parts charcoal, four parts ground limestone, and one part salt.

The results of the test show that pigs on corn and tankage gained 1.33 pounds per pig per day and required 526 pounds of corn, 427 pounds tankage, and 4.3 pounds mineral per 100 pounds gain. The pigs on soybean pasture and corn gained 1.48 per pig per day and required 99.2 pounds of corn, 14 acre forage, and 10.1 pounds mineral per 100 pounds gain, while [illegible] pounds per pig per day and required 9.64 pounds corn, .18 acre forage, and 9.7 pounds mineral per 100 pounds gain.

With corn at $1.54 per bushel, tankage 576.00 per ton, mineral $20.00 per ton and the cost of $15.00 to produce an acre of forage, the feed cost per 100 pounds gain was $10.47 on corn and tankage, $4.92 on soybeans and corn, and $5.44 on peanuts made the better gains, but the acre of soybeans made the largest amount of pork. With the high price of feed at present, an acre of soy beans was worth $34.64 while an acre of peanuts was worth only $43.00

KEEP SALT BEFORE CATTLE CONSTANTLY

Many [illegible] much thought as to why they do so, most farmers provide salt for their live stock. They know that cows will become "salt hungry", if not well supplied with salt regularly.

Denied salt, normal growth, health, general thrift and production either [illegible] Carefully conducted experiments have proved this to be true. Salt it as essential as good feed and pure water.

Most farm crops and mill feeds are very low in the element chlorine, the very element that common salt supplies cheaply, abundantly and in readily available form. The main use of salt is to supply chlorine that is required to make the hydrochloric acid found in the digestive juice of the cow's stomach and without which that organ can not properly perform its digestive function. Diminished milk flow and generally impaired physical conditions soon follow if salt is not included in the ration.

It is sometimes customary to add salt to the grain mixture at the rate [illegible] Clanton Tuesday, April 7 purposes. Whether fed in the grain mixture or not, addition, salt should be available at all times in the barn lots and pastures. This may be provided in the form of rock salt blocks. It is advisable to keep this outside supply protected in some way from the weather. A common feeding salt in a covered box, where the cattle may have access to it at all times.

COTTON CLUB WOBK TO HELP EDUCATION

Cotton Club work as a means of putting the rural boy or girl in the South through College is being urged leaders as a stimulant to 4H activities. It is the plan being followed by Paul Grimley, the Alabama boy declared the champion boy cotton raiser in America at the International last fall, and it is also being used as the basis calities. Grimsely is the lad whose bale of cotton brought him that handsome check from the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundaton, which is using the bale in demonstrations of improved methods in cotton growing.

Grimsley's career s any boy's career. He is sixteen years old and was reared on a farm in Tallapoosa county, Alabama. In 1922, on the first patch of ground that he could call his own he raised two bales of cotton on five acres. He did no better the next year but on the year following, under the direction of S. M. Day, county agent who is also club work leader for his locality, Grimsley succeeded in growing a bale of cotton on less than an acre. It was this bale that won him over a hundred dollars in addition to several other prizes and made him the junior coton king of America.

Young Grimsley's philosophy, is well expressed in a message which he has written for the farm youth of America. "I feel that club work offers an easy way for the southern country boy to go to college, for he can during his high school course have a cotton crop each year and make enough money above expenses to pay a good part in putting him through, providing he uses some economy," he wrote.

"I am convienced that new methods taught us by our leaders and which have proven successful at our experiment stations are superior to the old ways. These methods mean less trouble to the farmer and less expense, and trained agricultural experts are ready to help him in producing larger yields. Farmers now realize that they have something to learn from these men about their own business, and this accounts for the active interest in progressive farms methods."

Cottons Now Play Part in Fashions

Attractive Collection of Fabrics for Spring and Summer Season

It is not so many years since cotton was considered merely an inexpensive substitute for silk, principally to be used for the strictly utilitarian frock. Recent seasons, however, have entirely changed that conception and each year has witnessed an increasingly diversified and elaborate assortment of cotton cloths for frocks in the more temperate climes. Last summer Paris outdid itself in the creation of novelty cottons, and this winter the fabric designers—notably Rodier—have conceived even more variegated fabrics for Nice, Cannes, Monte Carlo and incidentally, Palm Beach.

A beautiful material which is also laid off in squares has a lovely honeycomb surface in white with scattered embroidery patterns in vari-colors. The fabric looks thick and perfectly appropriate for its present highly fashionable use—that of making sports wear coats.

The crepe is again popular and is shown in many new patterns this season. One particular cloth has the fashionable check pattern with the surface illuminated with a sort of [illegible] embroidery in artificial silk, which breaks up the squares and gives a decidedly new and interesting look.

A charming sort of a blistered crepe—blistered is the correct check this season—comes in a wonderful series of colors with the over-check in white. Another woven crepy check has brilliant colored embroidery scattered over its surface. Red and green combinations on white are most effective and following them come yellow and blue.

Entirely different in concept but equally attractive is a flatter crepe with undulating lines. These lines are like an embroidery and are often done in two colors on a third tone. Another fascinating crepe is of cotton and artificial silk and has an elaborately printed surface.

All of these cottons are most attractive when made up in the new Palm Beach modes in coats or dresses. They are also well adapted for making the long tunic blouses. Very frequently the foundation skirt is of white crepe de chine and the long tunic of some beautiful cotton novelty.

Among the woolens and silks that dominates the southern resort fabrics camel's hair twill and fragile novelty crepes on the order of georgette are the outstanding materials. The ribbed silks, crepe suzus, kasha and tweed—the last for sportswear—are among other fabrics which are repeating their last season's popularity.

Last, but not least, are prints, which are a distinct feature of the winter resort season, and no wardrobe is complete unless it contains several frocks printed in floral or geometric designs. The most fragile of backgrounds for the new prints are chiffons, crepe de chines, sheer cotton voiles or crepes.

Dainty Lingerie Yields to Fashion for Fuchsia

Whether it is due to seasonal influences or to some vagary of fashion, it seems more than less true that silk lingerie in brilliant shades of red is becoming fashionable. Chinese lacquer red was the first shade used, but now a shade more on the order of fuchsia, although it is called flame, is taking first place.

This flame shade in crepe-back satin is used for entire sets, including chemises and nightgowns as well as pajamas. One of these is developed along tailored lines, with narrow pinked frills of self material to outline neck and sleeves. Another is more unique, in that it is trimmed with alencon lace in ochre color.

MANHATTAN DAYS

New York.—Saw Guy Viskniski on the street this morning. The man who made the Stars and Stripes a going concern in France. One of his former staff told a story:

"We mutinied against Guy," said he, "He drove us too hard. One of the charges against him was recited by our spokesman;

"He kicked a minister of the gospel down stairs one morning. That was all right, ye understand. The guy was a nuisance. But then Major Visk he rand upstairs and stuck his head out of the window and sung a hymn."

Magic headquarters for this country are in a little dusty second-floor room on Sixth avenue. Two or three workshops are kept busy manufacturing the gimmicks, but it is almost all sold through this single unpretentious store.

"Best magician I every saw came in the other day," said the man in charge. "Busted and ragged.

"I'm down and out,' he said "but I am the finest in my line. Let, me have half a dollar and I'll make it disappear."

"Well?"

"He did.

I did not know until just the other day that there are almost 100 policewomen in the city's service and that the number is increasing. I've never seen one in uniform. Maybe they always travel in plain clothes, for, after all, they are really detectives. The old prejudice against them has died away for the coppers have learned that the young girl in trouble can best be handled by a woman.

THE OLD RELIABLE

SEVENTY-FIVE years ago the L. & N. received its charter to construct a railroad from Louisville to Nashville—a distance of 185 miles. Today, it is one of the most important transportation systems in the world, serving fourteen states in which reside one-fifth of the Nation's population, and connecting the principal trade centers of the Central South.

With more than 5,000 miles of track excellently constructed and maintained; with freight and passenger equipment of the most modern type, and with a carefully-trained and most efficient corps of employes—"The Old Reliable" this week celebrates its Diamond Jubilee Anniversary.

During all this three-quarters of a century the L. & N. has constantly striven to provide the best possible service to the people of the South; it has weathered the financial storms; it has not changed its corporate name and it is one of the few large railroads of the country that has never been in receivership. It has never failed to meet its obligations; to pay every dollar to its workers, its creditors and its bondholders, and for a majority of these years it has been able to pay its stockholders a moderate return for the use of their money.

In thanking the public for the patronage which has made possible the growth and success of this railroad, and in soliciting its future support, the Management pledges a continued effort to serve its patrons, and submits as evidence of this purpose the following comparison of its progressive development since the earlier days of its career:

Property	1924	1855-56
Investment (approx.)	$391,000,000	$366,267
Locomotives	1,347	2
Cars	64,825	45
Passenger cars	922	4
Officers and employes	50,600	25
Compensation per month	$6,100,000	$2,309

As further indication of its determination to produce unrivalled transportation, the L. & N. during the past two years has constructed or expended on improvements over $70,000,000, or 38 percent of the accumulated money invested during the first seventy years of its existence. During the first two years it has already appropriated for improvements a total of about $20,000,000.

STUDY BROADENS THE MIND

Education is nothing but the development of the mind to a state where from the sight of the object, the sense of touch or from a sound, it may be able to perform certain work, to form conclusion or develop certain things.

This thought came the other day in reading the high school department of the Rockford Chronicle, edited by the high school pupils, under auspices of the teachers. The pupils write on any subject they choose, and the two articles in question dealt with opposite sides of a question in which we are all interested, and shows that the children in school are preparing their minds to grasp the problems that will confront them in their mature life.

We give the two items in their own phraseology to show the legitimate argument put up by both writers:

Rural Schools Should Be Consolidated

It would be better if the rural schools were consolidated. If the rural schools were consolidated it would save money. With this money they can have better material, better teachers, and better attendance. It would bring children that live apart in contact with each other. In the country the schools hardly every run over the sixth grade, so they have to come to a high school to get a diploma. They can have more studies than they could in the rural school. They would have a chance to take part in athletics, public speaking, all through life, for who know when he is going to be called on for a speech? The library is another thing the rural school doesn't have. Therefore, rural schools should be should not be co nsolidated.

THE CONSOLIDATION OF RURAL SCHOOLS

The rural schools should not be consolidated. When the schools are taken out of one community to build up another, the citizens will lose interest in their community. The schools not be consolidated.

The pupil's parents and the teachers cannot meet one another and learn what their children are doing in school.

In rainy weather the bus will slip out of the road and turn over. The children would be scared, hurt, and some of them accidently get killed.

The parents will be uneasy about their children from the time they leave the gate unitl they return.

It does not cost much to go to public schools and are large enugh to care for themselves they can go to high schooland board.

Therefore: The rural schools should not be consolidated.

The roads in this county are too bad to have a consolidated school. The children have to walk a mile or two to meet the bus. If it is raining and the bus is not on time, the children will get wet. The country school are healthier than the city schools. If a good teacher is put in a country school a child will learn twce as much as or she would in high school.

ESSENTIALS FOR SERVICE

Mr. H. M. Atkinson, of the Georgia [illegible] and Power Company, gives five, factors essential to the development and increase of new industries.

1. Availability of raw material.

4. Power Supply.
5. A favorable attitude of the public mind toward the establishment and [illegible]

Poor Corn Crop Not Troubling Mexico; Intersting Facts

Washington, Mar. 3—Mexico's corn crop moved up a few pegs this year. Interesting economics and sociology [illegible] such a report [illegible] to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society which points out that, like adequate rice supplies in China, potatoes in Ireland, or wheat in Russia, a good stock of corn in Mexico is ilkely to contribue toward general contentment and stability.

"Corn or maize is the staff of life in Mexico," says the bulletin, "but to the American used to his substantial and sizable loaf it is likely to appear a somewhat frail prop. Most of the Mexican corn is not milled into meal or flour. It is laboriously crushed with small stone rollers by hand, in millions of kitchens and dooryards. The crushed grain is then moistened into a stiff paste and cooked on a griddle into what the average visitor from north of the Rio Grande would term a tough, flabby pancake. These are tortillas, the most generally used articles of food in Mexico. They are cooked in the home, in restaurants, over braziers in the market-place, or taken cold by laborers in their lunch packets. Nor are they unknown on the tables of the prosperous. Whatever food appears in Mexico the tortilla stands well to the fore.

"Not only does the tortilla look unappetizing to the outsider; it is sure to prove unappetizing if he follows his first impulse and treats it like a pancake, for its is tough and rather tasteless.

But treated as bread, the tortilla will make a much better impression, the proper trio is to roll it tightly so that it will be manageable and will retain its heat. It then becomes a breeadbreadstick whose spiraled end will melt a bit of butter and furnish a really delectable bite.

"You Roll Your Own".

"If one casts aside outlander notions to etiquete he can enjoy his tortilla even more. If the roll then is dipped into the fiery red sauce of chile con carne of the highly seasoned gravy of a stew, it furnishes delightful morsels. Among the millions rather than the thousands of Mexicans, however, tortillas are eaten day in and day out with boiled brown beans.

"Corn contributes to another important Mexican dish, the tamale. The raw corn paste is flattened out as though tortillas were to be made. On the paste is spread a thin layer of minced meat and pepper forms an inner core with a sort of capsule of corn paste about it. Each piece is these are placed n a tin vessel and theen wrapped in water. Numbers of cooked by steam, then served piping hot both with fire and pepper.

Native of Western Hemisphere

"Indian corn or maize is almost universally believed by botanists to have originated in the western hemisphere, probably in Central America, or Mexico. It was wholly unknown in Europe and the Near East until after the discovery of America; but it is so prolific a crop and the gran is so satisfactory as a food for both man and stock, that its culture spread rapidly over the world after the sixteenth century. The United States continues to be the dominant producer of maize but Argentina is getting to be a considerable rival and exports millions of [illegible]

"Throughout Portugal, in parts of Spain, in southern France, in the Po Valley of Italy, and in the countries along the lower Danube, maize is a valuable crop and the grain an important food material. The American from the 'Corn Belt' who made a trip through these countries would have surprises aplenty in the different methods of handling and raising corn. In Portugal he would find corn not being shelled by machine or hand, but the ears spread out on a threshing floor, being beaten with fails. A course bread. The meal is made into thick ed is eaten throughout Portugal.

"In Italy corn is seldom made into bread. The meal s made into thick porridge containing bits of meat and [illegible]fied poicteata. A course bread of [illegible]se meal is sold on the streets of Constantinople.

When Corn Is Not Corn

"In Egypt, South Africa, Syria, Persia, India and even China. American corn is grown, through it is given a different name in eack locality, ranging from meafies to Turkish wheat.' The stalks are valuable for fuel in the almost treeless Nile delta, and are used also by the fellaheen in building their simple huts.

"Certain old records in China indicate that corn was received at the court as tribute from parts of the empire before the discovery of American [illegible] This has been taken by some students as pointing to an Asiatic orgin of the plant, but the general opinion is that [illegible] that it appeared in China before the voyage of Columbus, its presence rather indicates a pre-Columbian traffic between America an Asia.

Dishes That Are Different

"In the United States corn finds its most important use as a food for live stock. Millions of bushels, however, are exported to Europe, and other millions are used as raw materials in industries. Corn starch oil and glusose are the principal products now manufactured through in the past years considerable quanities of corn were used in the making of spiritous liquors.

"Much corn is used also as a food in the United States, especially in the South and in parts of the West. The dishes prepared from corn meeal are to a considerble extent localized. The Southerner who has not tasted the fluffy sweeten corn cake of the North the Northerner who has not eaten the golden crusted egg-bread' or the foamy spoon bread of the South, and those in both regions who are too far removed from the farm to know the nutt 'cracklings pones' have missed some of America's most characterstic foods."

SOIL SURVEY OF CRENSHAW COUNTY

A report of a soil survey of Crenshaw county, Alabama, work carried on by the United States department of agriculture and the state, has recently been issued by the department. In this report, in addition to detailed description of the various soil types found, there is a general discussion of the topography of the county, streams, roads other transportation facilities, drainage historychurches and schools, climate and agriculture.

The county is almost entirely rural. Cotton, peanuts, velvet beans, and sugar cane are the principal cash crops, and corn, cowpeas, hay peanut hay oats, and a few oth[illegible] crops are grown for local use. Corn occupies largest acreage, with cotton next. A considearble number of hogs and cattle are produced and shipped to outsde markets.

The report provides valuable information regarding the twenty-two different types of soil which is not only useful to the land owners themselves but to others, including the State authoritiqs investigating soil and crop problems. The report contains a lar[illegible] may in colors showing the location of the varoius types of soil throughout the country, the streams, roads, and topography.

Copies of the report may be obtained from the United States Departm[illegible] of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Thomas Jefferson Simple in Death

A recent speaker at the University of Virgina, which was founded by Thomas Jefferson, read a letter written by Jefferson to his friend and kinsman, Nathaniel Burwell, on March 14, 1818, which said in part:

"A great obstacle to good education is the inordinate passion prevalent for novels and the time lost in that reading which should be instructively employed. When this poison infects the mind, it destroys its tone and revolts it against wholesome reading. Reasons and fact, plain and unadorned, are rejected. Nothing can engage attention unless dressed in all the figments of amiss. The result is a bloated imiginancy and nothing so bedecked comes tion, sickly judgement and disgust toward all the real busness of life."

Thomas Jefferson wrote his own epitath and in it he omitted all references to the fact that he twice had been president of the United States, governor of Virgina and minister to France. Instead, Jefferson desired that his tomb should commeorate the fact that he was author of the Declaration of Independence and the Virgina statute for religious freedom—which were to prove his devotion to liberty grand that he was the Father of the University of Virginia."

If every one in Alabama who has money to invest in stocks or bonds would take on at least some of the securities of a publice service corporation serving his community, it would accomplish two great ends: It would give the companies captial and confidence for aequate extension and service, and develop the country enormously so that all values would insrease and further, it would pay the investor at least as good rates as outsdiee securities besides all the collateral benefits of building up one's own state.

The man who has no faith in his country, but must send all his investment money away for safetey, is a business and industrial slacker. Also he is a fool to expect outsidders to put up all the money to develop his community in which he has not sufficient faith to invest part of his savings.

Baptist Young Men Banquet

The young Men's class of the Clanton Baptist church held a banquet at the Masonic Temple Monday evening which surpassed any entertainment of it's kind attempted in Clanton in some time.

Covers were laid for sixty-five, and the entertainment provided highly entertaining.

Mr. Jack Wade acted as toastmaster on this delighted occasion and acquited himself fine in the manner in which he handled the program of the evening.

The women of Circle No. 4 of the Baptist church had the honor and the pleasure of serving the delightful menu to this assemblage.

Mr. Cecil Smith made a very delightful address as did several others who were present.

Mr. Wallace Cox is president of this class and Mr. J. L. Johnson is teacher.

A feature of the evening was a contest as who was the most beautiful young lady present, and this event proved as interesting as a general election in Chilton Co. Misses Pearl Harris. Willo Dean Reynolds and Mary Popwell were the candidates. Miss Popwell was winner, but she was lucky as the two other young ladies were lively rivals for this honor.

CLANTON BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE

On Tuesday morning, Joe Halls, small son of Dr. and Mrs. Authur Johnson, was in his coaster-wagon and was being drawn by his little friend and school mate Wm. Green Retherford, across a busy thoroughfare, when a grocers truek collided with the small vehicle damaging it considerable in the rear. Joe Hall leaped to safety, beheld the wreck of his prized coaster and demanded of the driver: "Why don't you look where you are driving?"

The boys will probably never realize how near they came to having a very serious accident, when Joe Hall's coaster was wrecked.

"Rosetime" Beautifully Rendered at High School

Before a crowd which filled the high school auditorium, the musical comedy, "Rosetime," was presented by pupils of the Clanton highschool, under the tutelage of Miss Bernice Henderson, an experienced and competent instructor.

Miss Abbotte McKinnon, who played the leading role of "Rose," in the setting of a rose—covered home, played her part in such a manner as to win the hearts of the vast audience. Her natural beauty added charm to the picture part played and her natural graceful manner made her an ideal character in this cast.

Victor Heard who took the character of Pa Perkins, did "Pa" credit in the character he bore. Also Miss Bernice Henderson as Ma Perkins, was true to the character and her domination of the household proved her ideal for her cast.

Miss Alma Robinson, as Babe Burnette, with her chewing gum and her impudent little moue, was a character that depicted the ambitious movie actress, who never gets to star, but who always is in a receptive mood. Her disgust, after the leading lady had abruptly jumped the movie troup and it seemed that "Babe" was the only chance to take leading role, was "something awful" when Rose perkins happens to stroll out into the rose garden just in time to be "caught" by the camera in star role and shoved Babe back into oblivion.

Jacqueline Deauxville, a French actress portrayed by Miss Willo Dean Reynolds, was a character well portrayed, and although it was a character which was rather hard to play, Miss Reynolds acquitted the part nobly.

Clay Marcus as the property man, had his hands full, and his "repertion" kept his French buddy. Percy Peabody, played by Harry Margolis, in disgust, and Harry said it was "painfully uanseat to aesthetic taste, by jove." Both these characters were well taken.

Bill Murphy as J. Dillingham Jones the director of the movie troupe. and Frank Mullins as Jerry Brown, Rose's eccentic and persistent lover, were well portrayed.

Squint Smith as portrayed by Cecil Smith, was always on the job, and regardless of which end of the camera he used or the direction he turned the same, was in that happy-go-lucky manner the part portrayed until the company "hit the financial rocks" in sunny California, when he became as imphatic in his manner as the Medes and Persians.

Miss Sarah Jones as the French maid. did her part well.

Were we to stop with the above, without mentioning the supporting gilrs and boys choruses it would be like describing a play and forgetting to mention the leading characters. This chorus was splendid in its readings and in its gracefulness and indeed made a hit with the large audience.

The song hits were pleasing and entertaining and were well delivered.

Between the first and second act Alred Merchantile company staged a style show of their spring merchandise using living models, and the hats, frocks, stocking and shoes shown would have done credit to Broadway in New York or Hollywood.

The men of the audience proclaimed it O. K. and the women admired the pretty frocks and the beautiful colors immensely.

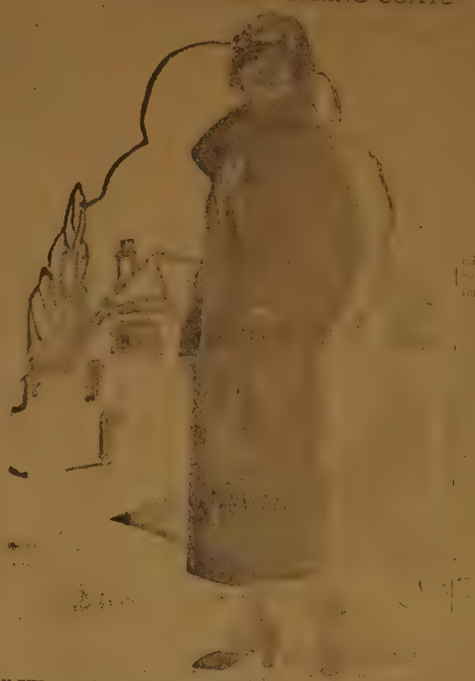
STYLISTS POINT WITH PRIDE TO MERITS OF SPRING COATS



IN THE procession of styles for the coming season, that division comprising coats made a quiet but effective entry and is now passing in review. And stylists have a right to point with pride to the high merits of these new examples of the fine art of tailoring. They flaunt no startling departures from the modes that made winter coats most becoming and decorative. A kind fate has preserved the slender silhouette, with simple and graceful lines, while making the most of new fabrics and colors, details of decoration and finishing which this spring contributes.

CUT BACK FRUIT

Trees After Setting

In setting an orchard, it is important to start with a good tree. However it matters not how strong, stocky and vigrous the tree may be when it is set, unless the proper care is given from that time on a good tree or first class fruit cannot possibly result.

One of the very fist things to do after properly setting the tree in the orchard, is to prune or head it back. Usually peach and apple trees when received from the nursery are all the way from 2 5 feet in height. To properly head back so as to cause the branches to come out near the ground, it is necessary to cut back the newly planted trees, cutting of the main stem to 15 to 36 inches above the ground, depending on the kind of fruit one is planting.

In the case of the peach, it is desirable to have the head cut quite low. Cut back the main stem of the newly set tree anywhere from 15 to 24 inches above the surface of the ground. Some even head them as low as 12 inches but, 18 to21 is about the right height under average conditions. In the case of the apple, the tree should as a rule be slightly higher than the peach. Therefore head it back 21 to 30 inches above the surface of the ground, and where a comparatively high head is desired, as much as 36 inches aobve the surface of the ground; 24 to 27 inches is probably about the correct height under average condition.

If the fruit tree is nothing but a small whip with no branches on it, then nothing but a straight shoot of a few inches of wood will be left. Spray to Keep Worms And Rot from Fruit

To succeed with fruit, spraying is absolutely essential. The various fungus diseases and insect pests of most fruits are so numerous as to make it impossible to grow fruit that is worth while without spraying.

Many seem to think spraying is something difficult to understand and hard to do. It is a comparatively simple matter. It is definitely known just what kind of spray to use and when to spray to control these various diseases and insect pests. A spray calendar telling exactly when to spray and what to use may be had from [illegible] states agricultural colleges, and experiments stations. Briefly speaking the following spraying are required for peaches and prunes:

Spray during fall or winter, or at least Spray during fall or winter, or at least before the buds begin to swell in the spring with oil emulsion or lime sulphur to control San Jose scale. Just as the blossoms begin to fall from the fruit, spray with the dry mix sulphur lime or self boiled lime sulphur and arsenate of lead. Three [illegible] after the second spray, repeat the dose, using the same mixure. Just before the fruit begins to show signs of ripening, give another spraying, using self boiled lime. Usually at this time the arsenate of lead is not necessary, but it is so inexpensive that it is a good ied to add it to the mixture to safeguard against any eating insects that might be present at that time.

For apples and pears, give the same kind of spray during fall, winter or winter or very early spring before the buds begin to swell as is given for peaches and plums. That is, through spraying with the oil emulsion or lime sulphur.

Then just before the blossoms open or just when the buds begin to show pink, spray with the concentrated lime sulphur solution, using 1 1-2 gallorns of the concentrated mixture to 50 gallons of water; plus 1 pound of the arsenate of lead.

Just as the last blossoms fall from the [illegible] spray the [illegible] using the same spray as was used the time before. Three weeks after the blossoms have fallen, spray with Bordeaux mixture, plus the pound of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water. Three weeks later give another spray with the Bordeaux plus arsenate of lead and three after that, give the fifth spring spraying with the same mixture. If diseases of various kinds show up or insect pests attack the fruit after this, give still another spraying of the Bordeaux plos the pounds of arsenate of lead to each 50 gallons of the mixture.

Grapes are very susceptible to rot but this can be controlled with comparative ease by spraying. Just before the blooms come out, spray with Bordeaux mixture plus a pound of arsenate of lead to each 50 galloon of Bordeaux. The arsenate of lead is used to kill any eating insect that may be present.

Just before the fruit sets, give the second spraying, using the same mixture as for the first. A week to 11 days later than the second, give the third spraying, using the same material. Then two weeks to 15 days later, give the fourth spraying with the same mixture.

Before growth starts in the spring it would be well to spray the old grape vines with the concentrated lime sulphur or Bordeaux mixture in order to kill any disease spores that may be present. Anyone can do good spraying if they will only give it a little attention and study. Certainly this is the only way that worth while fruit may be produced. Get the spray calendar from the county agent or State Agricultural College, and spray the fruit.

DEMANDS PRIEST BE PROSECUTED

Atlanta, Ga., —William Schley Howard, a former Member of Congress from Georgia, has publicly voiced a demand that "father" Thomas Hayden, former Roman Chaplain priest at at the Atlanta Federal penitentiary, be indicted by the federal Grand Jury in connection with graft disclosures at that institution. The Warden at the prison has been found guilty and given a prison sentence, and although the Roman priest admitted at the trial of the Warden and Assistant Warden that he shared in the money received for giving bootleg prisoners at the penitentiary soft assignments during their prison terms, for some reason no indictment has been found against him. Why one man should be convicted and another be immuned even though he wore the Roman cloth, is beyond understanding, and former Congressman Howard has merely voiced the sentiment of the great majority of Georgians who are familiar with the story of the prison graft.

THE HORSE'S STORY

"I have no cause for complaint," said Raven, the hor[illegible]

Raven was a very black horse. He was very handsome and his owners loved him dearly. He was the pet of the whole family.

"I have [illegible] sideration [illegible] is on continued. Billie [illegible] as sitting perched up in [illegible] ner of Raven's stall.

[illegible] Raven went on. "[illegible] to put over me when I'm left standing.

"If it snows I'm protected.

"If it rains I'm kept dry. There is always a rug brought along for me just as there is one for the rest of the family throughout all the winter.

"But I see other horses. Billie [illegible] are left standing in the wet. They get drenched and chilly and then they feel [illegible]

"You see, Billie Brownie, horses don't go back home as people do and sit in front of fires and dry off.

"That is why my family see that I don't get wet or cold and that I have a lovely warm stall [illegible]

"Why can't they think of their horses too?

"If they let their horses get wet and then were allowed in the house and sat down before the living-room fires it would be quite differently.

"It's cold these days, Billie Brownie, and it often snows.

"We like to be useful but we also want to be treated fairly.

"I'm speaking now for the whole horse world.

"Billie Brownie, can't you get your messengers, the Breeze Brothers, to go around and whisper to people with horses:

"'Please put a rug over your horse when you leave him standing in the cold. Put it over him when it is snowing or raining.

"'Please see that he is properly shod when it is slippery. It doesn't take long to do this and it saves the poor beast from being nervous and frightened and maybe getting a bad fall.

"'Please try to think a horse's thoughts once in awhile.'

"Will you try to get these messages around, Billie Brownie?"

"Indeed I will do my very best," Billie Brownie said.

"Oh, I do hope they will listen to these messages," Raven sighed.

"You can imagine how it makes me feel to see these things and not be able to do anything about it.

"My family say many fine things to owners of horses who are not being kind.

"If they could only think of it all as though they were horses it seems to me it would help."

"That would help a great deal," Billie Brownie said. "And I'm going to do all I can to help."

"Oh, you make my horse heart very glad," said Raven.

Then Billie Brownie was off, and Raven went to sleep.

He had a beautiful dream that all horses were treated kindly and just as well as he was.

It was a lovely dream, and he woke up feeling so happy.

"I just hope my dream comes true," Raven delighted to Himself.

Her Idea of Play.

Jean Frances's mother had taught always to put her toys away. At grandma's she had to take them upstairs.

One day during the visit, when playing with her toys when she called to grandma: "don't you want to play house with me?"

Of course, grandma agreed.

"Well, be my little girl," said Jean Frances.

Grandma agreed.

"Well, then, get busy and gather up those toys and take them upstairs," said the child.

Mother Wants Him

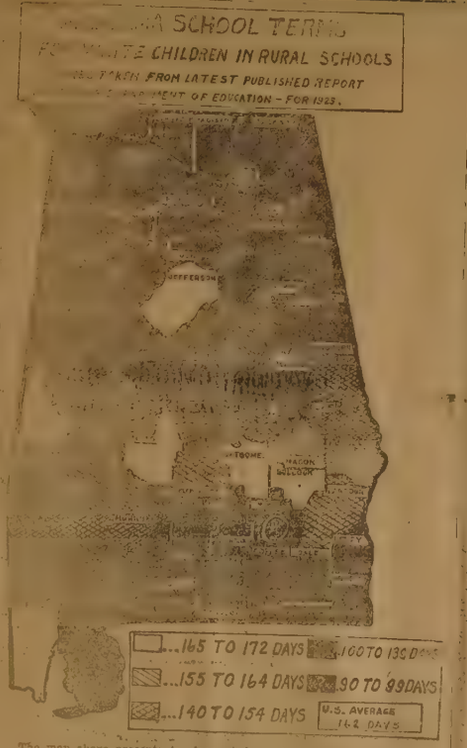
Helen Jean saw a small boy sitting on the curb in front of his home, shivering with cold.

"Why don't you go in, if you're cold?" inquired Helen Jean, in friendly little girl fashion.

"Cause I don't know where my mamma is," was the pathetic reply.

Helen Jean started on.

"Say," the little fellow called after her, "if ya see my mamma, will ya tell her she wants me?"



The map above presents in clear-cut form the greatest school problem in Alabama, according to H. G. Dowling, Secretary of the Alabama Education Association.

A full school term is an essential of modern education. No excellence of buildings, equipment, or teaching force can take the place of an adequate number of days spent in directed study.

The schools of the United States—averaging all city and rural, long and short terms together—are open for 162 days each year. Some states furnish a ten-month term (200 days). Others, particularly certain Southern states, afford terms far below the standard 180 day length generally accepted as a minimum.

Only six counties of Alabama have a school term for rural white children approaching the 180 days of instruction.

Six other counties are near the United States average—which is not considered a satisfactory condition.

In the remaining fifty-five counties, the rural boys and girls prepare for life under a most discouraging handicap. The doors of the school houses are not open a sufficient number of days to permit their advancing a grade each year, or any creditable standards.

That the people of Alabama believe in good schools is proved by the great school bonds now going on and by the increasingly insistent demands for better teacher and longer terms. The people are willing to pay for better buildings and equipment, but they have a deep-seated belief that adequate terms and trained teachers should be provided by legislative action. They object to fee systems and school supplements for such purposes.

No worth while increase of school funds has been made possible since the county and local three-mill tax laws went into effect ten years ago. Tax values rose greatly during the war; but the cost of everything makes schools more than keep with the increase, and the number of children and teachers continue to outrun the gain in property values. Many counties have voted the constitutional limit in school taxation and still have terms and other facilities utterly inadequate.

Reductions in school terms or in other facilities for education are being made right and left this year, and the cuts must continue until relief is provided through new legislative action. Several counties actually have less school money from all sources than five years ago, and the rise in cost goes on.

Boards of education are facing embarrassment because the public demand for improved schools cannot be met with available public money. The demand for creditable rural [illegible] the state, and many high school [illegible] city schools have been forced [illegible] to close [illegible] like standard facilities may be offered. In rural schools, the collection such fees is a nearly impossible task, because the people believe that tax money should carry the whole burden.

Relief will come when the demand for improved conditions in the rural districts become organized sufficiently to enforce recognition and legislative action.

ALABAMA—SHALL HER DREAMS COME TRUE

A booklet called "Alabama—Shall Her Dreams Come True?" is now being distributed by the Better Education Committee, 415 First National Bank Building, Montgomery, and it arouses considerable interest in the minds of those who read it. The publication gives in interesting style the story of the recent and remarkable advance made in the state of North Carolina and in an address to Alabamians outlines similar possibilities for this state.

The pamphlet is the first of a series to be sent out by the Better Education Committee in an effort to secure public understanding of conditions and possibilities in Alabama.

The personnel of the Better Education Committee represents a large degree of public interest and confidence in the campaign. The committee consists of the heads of such organizations as the Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions and Progressive luncheon clubs; the Masons, Knights of Pythias and other fraternal organizations; the Alabama Education Association, the State Farm Bureau, all public and denominational colleges, the State Board of Health, the Federal Extension Department, the Parent-Teachers Association and other educational agencies; the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Colonial Dames, the Business and Professional Women's Clubs; several church organizations, and many professional associations, as the State Medical Association, the Bar Association, the Rural Mail Carriers' Association, the Alabama Press Association, Labor Federations, etc.

The prospects of all these organizations are cooperating by presenting to the membership which they represent the need of a great educational awakening in Alabama and by support in a concerted effort in this direction. Direct supervision of the publicity and educational work is exercised by a special board of Managers representative of several of the organizations and located near the Montgomery head quarters.

IN MEMORY OF LITTLE HEWETT HAYS

Democrats Wipe Out Indebtedness

Alabama is given credit for its participation in clearing the state of indebtedness incurred during the last national campaign and election, the national democratic committee, through contributions of 40 democrats of this country not only wiping out the deficit of $265,000 but having a balance of $50,000 on hand as a nucleus for the future campaigns, it is shown.

Clem Shaver, chairman of the national democratic committee, with Jesse Jones, of Texas, chairman of the finance committee, cooperating interested the 40 democrats in the matter and indebtdeness has been lifted and the blance placed on the right side of the ledger, it is stated.

Walter Moore, Alabama member of the national democratic committee, himself a liberal contributor to the fund, has received information as to the paying off of the entire indebtedness incurred by the democratic committee and he pays tribute to the splendid work in the matter of Messrs. Shaver and Jones.

"When the indebtedness was paid off, after the democrats throughout the country had contributed and no partisan contribution was made, the press of the country did not parade the fact as much as was done making known indebtedness," said Mr. Moore. "The work was done in a quite way, the indebtedness removed without great publicity and the national committee feels proud, and properly so ,of the work accomplished with its financial affairs.

"Report was out and spread by opponents to the party that Thomas Fortune Ryan was willing to contribute a large amount, or even take over the entire indebtedness, if a secretary were allowed him but there wasn't anything to that, and the contributions received to lift the indebtdness were made by democrats who represented no particular candidate and were concerned in no faction of the party.

"The committee is going to begin functioning at once, for future matters are to receive attention. It won't be many month now before some business will come to light for consideration on the part of the national committee. Quietly setting about and clearing off the slate as to indebtedness was a great stroke, put across without much publicity. Jesse Jones, of Texas, is one of the finest of financiers. He is coming to Alabama in the near future and there will be more to his visit than politics."—Exchange.

FOREST RANGERS ARE BACK ON JOB

Montgomery, March 10.—All state forest rangers who have been on furlough during the recent wet weather have been restored to active duty on account of the spring fire hazard, announces the Alabama Commission of Forestry. While there are some parts of the state where fires will run any month in the year, for most of the timbered areas there are two distant fire season, on comprising the late summer and fall , the other including the late winter and spring.

Usually there are more forest fires during the spring season than in the fall. These result very largely from the escape of fires set by landowners to clear ground for cultivation. Spring fires usually wipe out the pine seedings that sprang up during the previous Autum. They also kill out the tender annual grassed and permit the survivial of only the tougher and woodier plants thus depriving the range cattle of forage badly needed at this tme of the year.

The severe fall burings of last year, however, riddled the woodlands so extensively that the spread of the spring fires is likely to be checked to a considerable extent, since many of the old burns have not yet acquired a new cover of inflamable litter.

Most landowners are making strenuous efforts to protect from spring burning the woodlands that were spared last fall. In nearly every community cooperation to this end among the citizens is already showing decidely beneficial results.

JUDGE ADAMS GETS SENTIMENTAL LETTER

The following letter is one of several received from different friends of Rev. S. M. Adams, since his recent confinement, and shows the sentiment held for Mr. Adams by his brethren in the ministry. We requested Judge to let us publish this letter on account of the sentiment in which it is expressed.

Following is a copy:

1030 N. 19th St., Birmingham, Ala.
March 5, 1925.

Dear Brother Adams:

I am writing you because it is a joy I have which gives me pleasure, and I am sure I love you enough, among all my friends, and especially among Baptist preachers, that in writing you my cup of joy will increase because I feel that I am doing a good deed. I, by permission of Bro. Allen, read your good letter in reply to one from him, last Sunday at Alpine. They love you for your work's sake at Alpine, and I hear of you there as I minister to them as your successor.

I learn with pleasure of your continued improvement in health, and I wish and pray for yours and your wife's constant happiness in the Master's keeping and in the esteem of brothren and sisters in the Lord whose hearts go out n sympathy to those who are shut in.

After all, as I go along I am learning that not all of life consists in physical and material activities. That feature is often predominant, and yet in truth may be the less powerful and far-reaching in effect.

I think it is necessary for us to learn that in waiting we may glorify God, as also in what we usually eal working. There is a Lord of the harvest, as well as the Lord of the sowing time in life. One labors—others enter into their labors. For me, good men went before and labored. Through the passing years I have been entering into "their" labors—thus my own labors have been les laborious."

When you feel like it, write me a line, and accept my God bless you for yourself and wife. I am in good health again, and quite busy with four good churches. Yes, I am 58 years o, age, glad to be at work—laborers are few.

Yours truly,
C. J. BENTLEY.

OIL INDUTRY SERVES PUBLIC

Reviewing conditions in the petroleum industry, Edgar Pew, president of the American Petroleum Institue, expressees the opinion that the condition of the oil business is better than it has been for several years."

"Within the industry there is a better spirit of cooperation for the benefit of all Standards of equipment are being established that should vary considerably reduce the costs of materials and increase the efficiency of all field labor. Drilling operations are conducted with better success as a result of geological data, largely developed with the past few year. New pools of oil are being discoveered with greater frequency and with less of the wildcat type of operations than ever before.

"The relations of the industry to the public are improving. The problems confronting the industry, its responsibilities and its great achievements are being better understood.

"I do not look with alarm upon any this year, or for many years to come. The oil ndustry has in a big way accomplished the seminly impossible in the amount of oil it has produced notwithstanding repeated predictions the contrary that there was no such amount of oil to be had. I am confident that the precedent of its past performances will be fully maintained in the future for many years to come until science and invention shall have provided a good and sufficient substitute for oil products. This seems to me to be a safe preesumption. On the whole, the future of the legitimate oil the legitimate oil business looks very bright."

Mr. R. E. DeSears, family, Misses Evelyn and Josephine Barrett, Virginia Scott and Sara Pattillo went to Speigner, Ala, Sunday afternoon to see the prison there. Every person in Alabama, and especially those near, should see the prison there. As you notice reforms and improvements in the treatment of the prisoners, you will also be aware of the fact that the conduct of the prisons is much better in later years. The merit system, now used in our prisons, is fast becoming recognized as the best way of management. It is interesting to note that among the numbers prisoners at Speigner, only one is wearing stripes, and this because of violation of a parole rule.

A new addition to the prison is the radio installed in library, plans be ing made for a "loud speaker" to be installed in each of the three cells The radio is probably one of the most useful forms of amusement that can be used in prisons. It not only furnishes entertainment for the prisorers, but keeps them connected with the outer world, so that when they are freed, they do not feel as if they were a "Rip Van Winkle."

Hog Shortage Looms Up Big in United States

Nothing that is still in the future seems clearer than that we are headed for [illegible] and high hog prices. The cycle extends [illegible] about four years, two years [illegible] and declining prices, two years of curtailed production and high prices.

It is said that we have passed the low point of the cycle and are now on the [illegible] price scale. Under these conditions [illegible] hogs are almost sure to make money in the next two years. With a good corn crop this year, and under the law of [illegible] up is due, 1925 should show the largest hog [illegible] had in years [illegible] in the economics of hog production is more clearly established than the relation between the size of the litter and profits. The principal item of cost in producing pigs up to weaning time, is the up keep of the brood sow. It amounts to about all a litter of four pigs is worth, and the profits is in the pigs above this number. The problem, then, is to insure large litters. Mere numbers will not not count, for unless the pigs are healthy and vigorous they will return no more profit alive than dead.

The farmer is virtually throwing away his chance of having his hogs [illegible] they lost in the last two years when he feeds his brood sows on corn alone and brings them up to farrowing time fat and flabby from overfeeding and lack of exercise.

Again the farmer is throwing away his chance of making hog profits this year, probably the best hog year he has seen recently by allowing pigs to be farrowed in hog lots where the soil is colaminated with diseases and parasites. In the soil of these old quarters are to be found the eggs of the round worm and the germs of diseases like marrce, scours and sore mouth. Many of the pigs farrow under such circumstances die before weaning time and other that survive are so diseased they cannot make gains profitably.

The simplest way to insure health of the young litter is to have it farrowed and brought up fresh ground. The successful hog producer now follows this rule strictly. His movable farrowing houses are taken to frsh ground and troughly scrubbed with some disinfectant like boiling hot lye water. The sow is taken to new quarters a short time before farrowing and is washed with warm soapsuds to remove all dirt in which the eggs of the round worm might lurk. As soon after farrowing as possible the mother and pigs are given access to fresh pasturage.

Illustrating the value of taking these precautions, the experienced of a McLean County, Illinois, farmer who produces about a thousand hogs a year is given. When this Illinois farmer allowed his pigs to be farrowed in old lots he raised to market age on average of six and one-half pigs to the, including the usual proportion of runts. Now he keeps his hoghouses sanitary and his pigs are farrowed on celean land and kept there until they are at elast a hundred days old. He markets under the new system an averageof sx and one-half pigs to the litter, almost none of which is dwarfed by disease.

This farmer keeps the same kind of sows, feeds about as he did before and has essentially the same equipment he used when he saved only five pigs to the sow. The change from foul farrowing places to sanitary farrowing places had made a difference of one and one-half pigs to the litter in the number he raised to market age. It is not difficult to figure the added profit on these additional pigs. H. J. Waters.

Meat Held in Storage 50,000 Years in Russia

Washinghon, March 11,—Is the recent warning of the Russian government against aliens landing on the islands north of Siberia spoiling a summer trip for you, by any chance? If so, it may add to your discontent to know that you are missing a possible gastronomic adventure that couldn't be duplicated anywhere else in the world —the chance of eating mamoth meat placed in cold storage 50,000 years or more ago.

A bullentin from the headquarters of the National Georgraphic Society here tells something of these little known islands that soviet diplomancy is trusting into the world's consciousness.

"It is necessary to throw overboard numerous opinions and definitions in dealing with the islands north of Siberia," says the bulletin. " A body of land entirly surrounded by water" does not quite fit these islands. They are bodies of land amost continually surrounded by ice. The only practical mans of transporation for hunters and trappers between them and the mainland, in fact is sleds drawn by dog teams. The New Siberia islands largest group north of Siberia, lying 50 miles off shore, were discovered in 17 70 because a hunter saw a hugh herd of deer walking on the ice out of the northen sea, and had curosity enough to trace their tracks. backward.

"One must also put aside the leda that only yminerals are mined. Ivory from the tusks of thousands of mammoths that perished in former geologic times is dug by ythe ton from the ground of the New Siberia group. With the ivory are other mamoth bones, together with those of musk ox, deer and primitive horses. So numerous are these deposits that one writer has said that the wholee soil seems to consist of bones. Fossilized trees also exist on the New Siberia islands, showng that in the age of the mamoth trees grew as far north as the seveenty fourth parallel of latitude. The northernmost trees in this part of the world now grow some 400 miles farther north.

Officers May Search Without a Warrant

Washington, March 6.—Federal prohibition agents may lawfully stop automobiles and other vehicles and search them for contraband liquor without a warrant, the supreme court decided today in a case from Michigan, brought by George Carroll and John Kiro.

Another liquor case decision, brought from Georgia by Sig Samuels, the court held that states may, under the constitution, make unlawful the possession of liquor acquired legally before enactment for the federal prohibition act.

Chief Justice Taft delivered the opinions in both cases, Justice McReynolds and Sutherland dissenting in the former and Justice Butler in the latter.

Declaring that "it would be intolerable and unreasonable if prohibition agent were authorized to stop every automobile on the chance of finding liquor, and thus subjected all persons lawfully using the highways to the inconvenience and indignity of such a search," Chief Justice Taft asserted that those lawfully within the country entitled to use the public highways have a right to free passage without interruption or search unless there is known a competent official authorized to search, probable cause for believing that their vehicles are carrying contraband or illegal merchandise."

It was the intent of congress, however, to make a distinction between the necessity for a search warrant in the searching of private dwellings and of automobiles, the chief justice stated and that distinction was constitutional. There is no provision in the constitution which denounces all searches or seizures without a warrant, he said, adding that it prohibits only unreasonable searches or seizures.

The guaranty of freedom from unreasonable searchers and seizures has been construed, practically since the beginning of the government," he explained, "as recognizing a necessary difference between a search of a store, dwelling house or other structure in respect of which a proper official warrant readily may be obtained, and a search of a ship, motor boat wagon or automobile, for a contraband goods where it is not practical to secure a warrant because the vehicle can be quickly moved out of the locality of jurisdiction in which the warrant must be sought."

The mere manufacture of liquor can do little to defeat the prohibition amendment unless the liquor can be distributed for illegal sale, and use the court asserted and for that reason it was necessary that that transportation of the contraband be prevented.

The rule to be applied in determining the legality of a seizure without a warrant, as laid down by the court, is whether the seizing officer has reasonable or probable cause for believing the automobile which he stops and seizes has contraband liquor in it which is being illegally transported. This is ample protection to the individual in the opinion of the court, because it gives him the right to recover his automobile and its contents should he be not guilty of violating the law, and to sue the officers making the arrest for damages when arrests are made without probable cause.

The evidence, as analyzed in the opinion, showed that Carroll and Kiro had been negotiating with federal enforcement agents for the sale of liquor and the court held there was ample justification for the stopping and searching of their automobile without a warrant.

Justice McReynolds, announcing that he and Justice Sutherland dissented, said they were of the opinion that the rule which the court laid down was unconstitutional. They protested against the arrest and search of persons upon mere suspicion, and declared evidence so procured shold not be used in the courts.

In the Georgia case, it had been shown that Samuels had placed in his cellar liquor lawfully obtained before the passage of the prohibition law and before the State of Geogria made possession of intoxicating liquor unlawful. Chief Justice Taft, in the majority opinion, asserted that states could make unlawful the possession of such liquor despite that it was permitted by the 18th amendment and the Volstead act.

FARMERS' LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM DEFENDED

Farm organizations in California, including the State Grange ,Farm Bureau Federation, Farmers Union, Farm Legislative Committee and marketing are united in a statement that public utilities owned by cities shall be taxed, and that issuance of all tax-free securities shall be prohibited.

These two propositions are perfectlogical when it is considered that cities operating public utilities issue tax-free securities, with which to construct the same, thus interests to escape their federal income taxes.

Tax-free, city -owned utilities built with issues of tax-free securities create a priviledge condition for dwellers in cities and cast a double burden upon the owners of the Petaluma Argus, champion agriculture's almost entirely in our cities. The amount of this tax now being shifted upon the backs of those who live outside the larger cities especially upon the farming class, amounts to millions of dollars annually.

ities should contribute to the cost of maintaining the government in exact proportion with privately owned public utilreasons why pulicly owned public utilities, and no good an valid reasons why they should no do so."

OUR LORD'S RESURRECTION

LESSON TEXT—John 20:1-29.
GOLDEN TEXT—"The Lord is risen indeed."—Luke 24:34.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Rises From the Dead.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Risen From the Dead.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Christ's Victory Over Death.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Proofs of the Resurrection of Christ.

The resurrection of Christ is one of the foundation truths of Christianity. Its entire superstructure stands or falls upon its reality. It is the grand proof that Christ was what He claimed to be, the Messiah, the Son of God (Matt. 12:39-40; John 2:19-21). His resurrection authenticated his claims. If Jesus did not rise from Joseph's tomb, He was not the Son of God, nor a true prophet (He said frequently while alive that He would arise), neither a Savior; not even a good man, for He would then be a falsifier. However, if He did arise, all that He said concerning Himself is true. His resurrection declared Him to be the Son of God with power (Rom. 1:4).

I. The Empty Tomb (vv. 1-10).

John does not enter into a description of the resurrection of Christ, but says the tomb was empty, and that Jesus had repeatedly manifested Himself after the tomb was found empty. To see the body of Christ with a spear thrust and nail prints, and then the empty tomb was all that faith needed.

1. The Testimony of Mary Magdalene (vv. 1-2).

This woman out of whom Jesus had cast seven demons (Mark 16:9; Luke 8:2), announced the fact of the empty tomb to Peter and John. Prompted by great love to Him for His kindness to her, she went early to the tomb even "when it was yet dark." "She was last at the cross, and first at the grave. She stayed longest there and was soonest here." This woman's love for the Master was genuine though her knowledge as to His resurrection was defective. She had realized great good at His hand, therefore she could not rest until she had done her utmost for Him.

2. Personal Investigation by Peter and John (vv. 3, 10).

The news of the empty tomb which Mary brought with breathless haste so moved John and Peter that both ran to investigate. When John came to the empty tomb he gazed into it, but Peter entered it. This investigation convinced them. The removal of the stone from the sepulcher and the arrangement of the grave clothes convinced them that the enemy could not have done this.

II. The Manifestation of the Risen Lord (vv. 11-29).

1. To Mary Magdalene (vv. 11-18).

(1) Mary Weeping at the Empty Tomb (v. 11). Peter and John went home, but Mary could not. She stood weeping. Home was nothing to her while her Lord was missing. Earnest love need not weep long for Jesus is found of those who love Him. She should have been rejoicing that the grave was empty, for the empty tomb was eloquent proof of His messiahship and deity. Had His body been there she would have had real cause for weeping.

(2) Mary Questioned by the Angels (vv. 12-13). She viewed through her tears angels at the tomb who inquired as to the cause of her sorrow. She replied, "Because they have taken away my Lord and I know not where they have laid Him."

(3) Jesus Reveals Himself to Mary (vv. 14-16). She first saw the angels and then her eyes lighted upon the Lord. As soon as He called her by name she recognized Him and fell at His feet weeping.

(4) Jesus Forbade Her to Touch Him (v. 17). This showed that she was coming into a new relationship to Him; besides there was not time for such familiarity while the disciples were in darkness. "Go tell my brethren," was the message she must carry.

(5) Mary's Testimony (v. 18). She told the disciples that she had seen the Lord.

2. To the Disciples (vv. 19-29).

(1) When Thomas Was Absent (vv. 19-23).

a. His message of peace (v. 19).
b. He showed His hands and His side (v. 20).
c. He commissioned them (v. 21).
d. He defended the power that was bestowed upon them (v. 23).

(2) When Thomas Was Present (vv. 24-29).

a. Victory of sight and touch (vv. 24-28).
b. Greater blessings for those who believe, not having seen (v. 29).

A Prayer

Father, we thank Thee that Thou hast called us to work for Thee, and we pray that Thou wilt show each one of us just what Thou wouldst have us to do.

Visions

It is well to have a vision of a better life than that of every day, but it is the life of every day from which elements of a better life must come.—Maeterlinck.

Riding Among Clouds by Auto

Richmon, Va., —Riding among the clouds, not 80 miles from the nation's captiol, will be the unique experience of the touriest of the future "going south for the winter through Virginia, if plans made by the Federal government for a mountain highway, running 75 miles along the top of the Blue Ridge, materialize. The highway proposed would pass through the heart of the new Shenandoah National park, now before Congress, and would look down upon the most famous valley in America, Shenandoah, "daughter of the stars."

The proposed Shenandoah National Park area extends 75 miles along the Bule Ridge, beginning at Fort Royal, 75 miles automobile ride from Washington, according to the Virgina State Chamber of Commerce, and ending at Waynesboro. Engineers of the Department of the Interior in inspecting the site have recommended the proposed highway not only a practical but as furnishing an opportunity for one of the most beautiful scenic routes in America. The highway would have an average altitude of more than 3,200 feet and it would wind around twenty mountain peaks on the top of the Blue Ridge, which is almost level.

Engineers were delighted to find at hand hundreds of tons of rock suitable for the highway, which would cut the cost to a fraction of the necessary expense otherwise involved. According to the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce, the highway would run by more than a score of waterfalls, several of them more than 100 feet in height. It, would pass through a great deal of virgin forest and along the edges of precipices from which the traveler can gaze for miles across the beautiful Shenandoah Valley. On a clear day it is said that the Washington Monument, 75 miles away on an air line in Washington, is easily discernable in the park. From the mountains can be seen thousands of acres of apple orchards and land in farms in the "granary of the Confederacy." Should the route be built it will furnish a unique link in the Lee Highway to the South along the crest of a mountain range where the temperature has never been known to exceed 80 degrees.

Illinois Mourns Her Loss of Sen. McCormick

Chicago.—All stations of vivil and political life in the nation, state and city, were represented at the simple funeral services here Friday for Sen. Medill McCormick.

In accordance with his oft-expressed wish, arrangements for the obsequires at the Fourth Presbyterian church, included only prayers, scriptural reading and singing by the church chior, with no funeral oration or sermon. Rev. H. A. Dalzell, acting pastor of the church of which McCormick was a member, conducted the service assisted by Rev. Charles B. Wood, of Washington, and Rev. H. P. Armstrong, pastor of the Little Presbyterian Church, of Middlecrist, near Byron, Ill., boyhood home of the senator.

The body was entombed in Graceland cemetery here pending final burial in the little grave yard at Byron. Mrs. Robert S. McCormick, hs mother, ill in Florida, was unable to attend the funeral. Mrs Ruth Hanna McCormick the widow, accompanied the body from Whsaington and joined the three children at the McCormick winter residence here.

Orders were issued to close the departments in the federal building, except the postoffice, during the hour of the funeral and flags were draped at half mast over all public buildings.

Many persons nationally prominent, including counsuls of all nations in Chicago, were honorary pallbearers.

The trustees of the Chicago Sanitary District, the Union League and Hamilton club and similar organizations sent delegations after passing resolutions of tribute.

Sen-Elect Charles S. Deneen, named Thursday by Governor Len Small, to complete the unexpired five days of Sen McCormick's term, left for Washington immediately after the funeral.

"Poor" Rockefeller Girl Plans to Do Her Work

New York, —A bride and groom to —Abby Rockefeller and David M. Milton, Jr.—are hunting a modest apartment somewhere near Park Avenue and sixth street, but not on the avenue itself because rents are too expensive there for the only granddaughter of the richest man in the world and her lawyer sweetheart.

The couple are going to live within Milton's modest income. Abby will manage her own household, do part of her own housework and keep a budget. She will do without a car at first but hopes to have one later.

Mrs. Abby Milton is quoted as saying that her father, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., said through a spokesman, because he had trained his daughter and her brothers to know the value of money, so that they might "meet the strenuous life" when the time comes as they act for themselves. When she is being envied as one of the richest youngsters in the world, Miss [illegible], aged 7, had exactly 10 cents a week which mght, squander. Her total owance was 30 cents but she was to save 10 cents and put the other dime in the Sunday school collection plate.

None of Rockefeller's children had more than $2.00 per week which they might call their own before they were 15; be fore and since that time they have been required to keep account of their expenditures by their father who penallized or rewarded them by the accuracy of the accounts which he always audided.

Later Abby had a large allo but she was compelled to provide her own clothes, entertainment and travel from it—and keep the accounts. So that now her father feels that she is self-sufficient "knows the value of and is able to assume the responsibilities of a housewife.

Boy Meets Horrible Death in Automobile Accident Sunday

Vastine Bean Killed North of Clanton When Radius Rods on His Ford Car Broke

One of the most horrible accidents that has ever occurred in this section, was that of last Sunday morning when a Ford car driven by Vastine Bean of Colins Chapel was wrecked in an accident at Wessons, just north of Clanton, young Bean being fatally wounded and several other boys in the car with him escaping with minor injuries.

It is understoood that young Bean had come to town for medicine for a young girl of the community who was desperately sick. Several boys of the neighborhood came with him in the car, and it is presumed the boys were driving at a rapid rate when the radius rods of the car broke, the car turning turtle and catching Mr. Bean, brusing him about the head and body. He was rushed to the hospital at Clanton, but died shortly after his arrival.

The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hilyer was desperately ill, and it was necessary to have some medicine from Clanton at once. It is said young Bean pleaded to make the trip, and in company with the other boys, accomplished their mission in Clanton and were on return trip when the accident occurred. Vastine Bean, was about 17 years old, and was son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bean of Collins Chapel. His remains were prepared for burial by undertaker J. Mell Martin of Clanton, and were tenderly laid to rest at Cedar Grove cemetary Monday afternoon. One of the largest crowd ever at this country church were present to pay their last respect to the young boy.

The News joins with all Chilton in sympathy with the bereaved family over this unfortunate accident.

Revs. C. C. Wilkerson and S. J. Ezell of Clanton and Rev. Dykes conducted the funeral service.

RADIUS RODS BREAKING COST ANOTHER LIFE

Mr. John Broadhead was instantly killed Monday on the South Calera Pike when the radius rods on his Ford car broke, running his car out of the road, and hit a stump, throwing Mr. Broadhead into some mud. He lived a short time after being picked up.

MR. L. R. KENDRICKS DROPS DEAD AT CHELSEA

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Nivens and family have returned from Chelsea in Shelby county where they went to attend the funeral of Mrs. Nivens' father, Mr. L. R. Kendricks, who dropped dead about 7 o'clock Saturday evening.

Mr. Kendricks was in his usual good health and ate a hearty supper Saturday evenng and then retired to the living room where he fell dead before medical aid could be secured. He was buried Monday at Pleasant Valley cemetery in Shelby county.

The many friends of this section extend to Mrs. Nievns and family their sympathy in her breavement.

CANE CREEK WILL HAVE A GOOD PROGRAM

The Cane Creek School is planing on an interesting program for April 3. This will consist of dialogues, recitations, pantomimes, music, etc.,

This program will conclude the school work for the year.

Appreciative patrons express much satisfaction over the work that has been done by Miss Julia Parrish, principal, and Miss Jewel Minor, assistant.

Lecturer for Ku Klux Klan Speaks Court House Sunday

Mr. C. O. Johns of Nashville, Tenn., a lecturer for the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, will lecture at the court house in Clanton at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Johns is reputed to be a very forceful speaker, and he will explain the principles and purposes of the Knight of the Ku Klux Klan.

Everybody is invited, and especially the ladies, to come to the court house and hear this address.

The Ku Klux Klan is said to have a very fine organization at Clanton and in Chilton county, and the people in general are urged to come out and hear this noted speaker on this occasion.

MR. MANNING AND MISS CROOK WED

Mr. Malcolm Manning of Verbena, and Miss Elizabeth Crook of Spencer, Tennessee, but who has been teacher at Oak Grove in Chilton county, for some time, were married in Birmingham Saturday.

Mr. Manning is a prominent man of Verbena, and is a brother of Mrs. W. T. White and Mr. D. O. Manning of Isabella.

Studying Practical Lessons

Miss Mamie Northcutt, high school teacher, carried the senior second and third physics class to see the steam shovel in operation on Friday, March 13 (and all got back safely).

The class had already been studying the steam engine and it was very interesting to see the steam shovel working on that same principle. The class has planned to visit the ice plant at Clanton to learn more about ice making, and to see one in operation after studying the principle on which they work, also to visit Mitchell Dam while studying electricity.

School Societies Entertained

A majority of the high school students were at the joint entertainment given by the literary societies This was one of the nicest high school socials that has been given by this school. Much credit is due the social committee who planned the games and refreshments. That the Crossword puzzle craze has entered our social gatherings was made manifest by the solving of a crossword puzzle (made by the social committee) Friday night, March 13. One of the most enjoyable games of the evening was "Pig in the Parlor." This is one of the games that once you start playing it, you never tire.

The "Initiation" of the students was perhaps the most amusing feature of the social. The boy saw the girl eat a spoonful of sugar just as he was about to take it into his mouth. Thinking this all of the joke he was quite ready to try it on another girl. While the boygoes for the girl, salt is exchanged for the sugar, and the boy eats a spoonful of salt instead of sugar. To watch the wry faces made by the boys is as interesting as a comic movie (if you don't happen to get initiated).

Delicious refreshments were served, a few more games played, and the group adjourned a good many minutes past the time that all "good school children" should be in bed.

—o—

Mr. Robinson Entertains Class.

The members of Mr. Lee Robinson's class of the Baptist Sunday school were made extra proud of the fact that they were members of his class when he and his wife entertained them at their home Sunday, March 15th. The pastor was also invited.

Mrs. Robinson proved herself a most charming hostess, and soon after a delightful dinner, the guests were taken by truck and auto to Mitchell Dam where they spent an enjoyable afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson's kindness, and the good times afforded by them will not soon be forgotten by the following:

Rev. Lawerence, Doyphus Harris, Ada Glen, Thelma Glen, Cora Lett, Thelma Rhodes, Bertha Barrett, Eute Deasman, Denis Hopper, Vesta Lett, Zelma Glean, Blonnie Baxley, Adelbert Norris, Annie Lee Pinson, Alton Harris, Lawerence Lett, Julia Johnson, Pinson Glenn, Edna Dorris, Mary Pearl Johnson.

Don't get suspicious if you happen to get a glimpse of some school pupils burning the "midnight oil"—for this is test week, an event that occurs once every month to keep students from becoming too faint-hearted and merry.

—o—

Mrs. W. A. Gulledge, Cordelie Gulledge and Miss Evelyn Beck spent a few hours shopping in Montgomery Saturday.

The home of Mr. T. B. Whitworth and family was made brighter by the arrival of their new daughter, Bessie Mae.

Don't fail to see "The Flapper Grandmother." The play for laughs proceeds for Parents-Teachers benefit.

Miss Audie Broadhead from Siluria spent a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Cambell.

Mr. Bob Tate who has been in Birmingham for sometime came home last week.

Mrs. Mary Griffin has been visiting heer friends in South Calera for several days.

Mrs. Arthur Busby and little son, Henry Lee, of Birmingham have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Davis Green for the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott from Jemison spent Sunday in South Calera as the guests of relatives.

NEW BRIDGE BUILT

The citizens of the Ed Bruce neighborhood are tickled over the new bridge that now connects them with Clanton.

The old bridge went to the bad. By virtue of the fact that the Birmingham-Montgomery highway cuts the creek at this point, the citizens of this community knew that eventeually they would have a permanent bridge. In the mean time they reached Clanton by the tiresome route first led by Friendship. They grew weary of waiting for the permanent bridge that will ultimatel be constructed and with combined means and energy they now have a satisfactory birdge and close connection with Clanton.

ROY GOODGAME FOUND DEAD SATURDAY NIGHT

Roy Goodgame a young Clanton man about 30 years of age, was found on the L. & N. railroad track about a mile or two north of Verbena, Saturday night about 10 o'clock, with his head crushed and one leg broken, and his body horribly mangled.

The discovery of the body was made by two negro men, who were walking down the track, and came upon the body. They are said to hove run to Verbena and told the authoraties of their find. Immediately a crowd went to the scene and identified the body and brought the remains to Clanton where they were prepared for burial.

From the best information obtainable, it seems that Mr. Goodgame had motored to Verbena from Mitchell Dam with a friend, where he expected to catch the evening train to Clanton to spend Sunday with his wife and mother. For some reason or another, he failed to board the train at Verbena and from best information obtainable, it is believed he started to Clanton sometime after dark on foot up the railroad track. It is presumed he was run down by a freight train or in some way was caught on the track.

The body was carried to the Martin undertaking establishment, where it was prepared for burial and then was transferred to the home of the mother of the deceased, Mrs. Saphronia Goodgame, in the eastern part of Clanton.

Mr. Goodgame, of Dadeville was reared in Clanton. He was married in Dadeville, during last November to one of Tallapoosa County's school teachers.

The young wife had been in Clanton on a visit to her husband's relatives for about a fortnight.

The burial took place in the Clanton cemetery on Monday morning at 11 o'clock.

Sympathy of many friends is extended the breaved.

State Highway to Go Down Seventh Street

At last it seems to be settled

The Clanton town council, at a special meeting Wednesday evening voted to grant the state highway commission permission to build the state highway on Seventh street, and ordered Mayor Grass to initiate condemnation proceedings against property affected by this improvement

Other contingencies were voted into this question, providing that Second and Third avenues South be opened up as street, which will also take condemnation proceedings, it is thought

Yesterday was the last day for Clanton to give the state highway commission an answer as to which street it could use through Clanton, Sixth street having been under consideration and a vigorous contest has been waged [illegible] the two thoroughfares.

The state highway commission meets today (Thursday) to dispose of this matter, and their action will be watched with [illegible]

AN IDEAL PLEASURE TRIP.

Mrs. J. A. Hester and daughter, Julia Ruth, have just returned from a most delightful trip to Jacksonville and Miami.

Next best to the real enjoyment that such a trip affords one, is to listen to Mrs Hester while she gladly recounts the many thrills of delight experiences by herself while away.

Mrs. Hester's leave-of-absence allowed for only a brief stay in Jacksonville, with her daughter Miss Margaret who is successfully conducting the Cottage Hill school.

Flapper Grandmother Next Week

"The Flapper Grandmother" a musical comedy in three acts, is really an excellent show and will be put on by best local talent. It is not only spectacular and spotaneous but full of screams in the form of uncontrollable laughter. In fact it is so funny that even the old hard boiled folks wind up the evening by calling for "pain killer" to rub on their aching sides. This show includes a little bit of every thing. It has dashes of sentiment, sprinkled with pathos, beautiful melodies galore, with clever dancing, but the big overwhelming ingredient is fun spectacular effects, clever lines, original costumes.

As to the cast of characters there are so many good ones it is hard to tell who is the Star. The charming Flapper Grandmother and her two granddaughters, Lena and Belinda, are a whole show within themselves. You will get 100 per cent satisfaction out of Matt and Andrew. Bobby Smith as the bashful boy lover of broken hearts is a never ending scream, to say nothing of Dr. Joy and Count Seekem Rich, who present another triumph of "Make-up over matter." Dix Tate and the Jelly Beans constitute the clever young men in the cast and Rastus and Lilly, the two gentlemen of color, create their part of the fun too. Lilly, though a gentleman, is dressed as a high toned "yellow Gal" wearing a super-vamp costume with ear rings to match.

Others in the troup who deserve special mention include the debutant Flappers, Rag Dolls, Door Knobs, little Grandmas, Matrons, the Old King Tuts, Elf, Mummy and many others.

The comedy is a gem from every stand point. The situations are absolutely novel, the lines sparkle with originality and mirth and you will find each character is a real joy.

To be given at the Clanton high school auditorium March 26 8 o'clock. Admission 35 and 50 cents.

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean of the Bible Training School, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago. Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 22

THE FORTY DAYS AND THE ASCENSION

LESSON TEXT—Luke 24:13-53.
GOLDEN TEXT—"Ye are witnesses of these things."—Luke 24:48.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Goes Back to His Father.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Ascends to Heaven.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Forty Days and the Ascension.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Ever Living Christ.

I. The Walk of Two Discouraged Disciples (vv. 13-15).

Emmaus was seven and a half miles northwest of Jerusalem. Just why they were walking this way we do not surely know. Perhaps their home was there, or they were merely walking to seek relief from their stunning sorrow. If they had believed what Jesus told them about His death and resurrection they would have escaped this great disappointment. The topic of conversation was the tragedy of the cross and the resurrection rumors. If they had believed what He said about coming forth from the grave they would have been expecting to hear just such reports as were being circulated.

II. The Unrecognized Companion (vv. 16-24).

1. Who He Was—Jesus (v. 15).

While they reasoned together on the wonderful events of the last few days Jesus joined them. Even when He questioned them concerning their sadness they did not recognize Him. Many times we are so taken up with our sorrows and disappointments that we do not recognize Jesus walking by our side.

2. His Question (v. 17).

Perceiving their sadness and perplexity He ought to help by calling forth the statement of their grief.

3. Their Answer (v. 18).

His question so surprised them that they jumped at the conclusion that He was a stranger in Jerusalem, for the condemnation and crucifixion of the great Prophet of Nazareth were so recent and notorious that no one that had lived in Jerusalem could be ignorant of them. One valuable feature of the unbelief of the disciples was that it revealed the fact that they were not credulous enthusiasts, but hard to convince. Out of this incredulity of the disciples developed unshaken faith in Christ's resurrection.

III. The Scriptures Opened (vv. 25-31).

1. His Rebuke (vv. 25-30).

He did not rebuke them for not believing the strange stories that they had heard, but for ignorance and lack of confidence in the Old Testament Scriptures. They had only accepted such parts of the Old Testament as suited their notions. Men and women who do not believe all that the Scriptures say about the work of the blessed Savior are entirely blameworthy. The very center and heart of the Old Testament Scriptures set forth the death and resurrection of Christ. It is ignorance of the Scriptures and unbelief of the wonders and complete redemption wrought by Christ that robs us of many joys, and power and efficiency as workers for Christ.

2. Jesus Recognized (vv. 31-35).

While sitting at meat with the disciples their eyes were opened as they saw Him bless the bread and distribute it to them. We, too, can see the Lord on such common occasions as eating a meal, if we have open eyes.

Indeed we ought to see Him when eating, selling, buying and in our recreations, for He has promised us His presence. They were so filled with joy over this revelation of the Savior that they hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the other disciples of His resurrection.

IV. Jesus Stands in the Midst of the Eleven (vv. 36-47).

1. He said, "Peace be unto you" (vv. 36-47), but they were terrified and affrighted. Sinful man in the presence of God is ill at ease.

2. He showed them His hands and His feet (vv. 38-40). In order to convince them of His personal identity He gave them tangible evidence that He was not a mere spirit.

3. He ate before them (vv. 41-43).

4. He commissioned them to evangelize the world (vv. 46-49).

They were to testify concerning His shed blood and resurrection, and on this ground they were to preach repentance and remission of sins to all nations.

V. Jesus Ascends Into Heaven (vv. 50-53).

Having given them the parting message to evangelize the world, He ascended into heaven. Just as we treasure the last words of our departed loved ones so we should ponder the farewell message of the Lord.

FARM WORK PROGRESSING

It is suprising to find farm work so far advanced for the time of year. In making a trip through Maplesville, ... ton, Pletcher, and Verbena last ... we found every animal at work ... The cotton land is already prepared for the seed. Other land is being rapidly put into shape.

Having spent most of our years a little higher up-state, it seems real early, yet the pretty weather of the past several days has given the farmers opportunity to catch up with their work, and with good preparation and intensive cultivation the yields per acre in Chilton should be bounteous the coming fall.

Fertilizer dealers of this county report sale of the better grdaes. Nitrate of soda is being used extensively for a side line dressing with phosphate used with the seed.

Year by years farmers are learning more and more how to use fertilizer to produce a larger yield and with the trend toward tenants staying on a place for a term of year is a favorable omen for better farming.

THE OLD ANDIRON

... one hundred years the old andiron had never gone out of the house.

"The Man Was Very Careful."

For one hundred years it had been, together with its partner andiron, serving the fireplace and remaining stout and strong and beautiful.

For the andirons were both beautiful. This special one, somehow, had always been considered more beautiful. Perhaps it was because it was the one by which Granma had always sat. And anything near Grand... somehow grew nicer.

If you stayed with Grandma any ... th of time you felt nicer. The ... ers that grew under her bedroom window were always the loveliest flowers in the garden.

The honeysuckle bush and the roses that she planted were more ... ragrant than any others.

"Remember," she cautioned the man, "to carry it with great care, for the outside world will seem very strange to the andiron which has spent its whole life by the fire.

"It will be astonished by the excitement of a street. It will be a ... herous. So be very careful."

The man was very careful. The ... ... into the shop, carried ... ... The blacksmith shop and the fire looked natural, in a way, to the andiron, and it was a relief after the excitement of the street.

Talladega County Court House Burns

Talladega,—Fire originating in the belfry destroyed the Talladega County court house here March 13, at an estimated loss of $150,000. Insurance carried on the structure totalled $25,000

The flames were discovered about 8 o'clock and the fire department responded immediately. Firemen were prevented from entering the cupola by smoke and were forced to confine their efforts to the ground. More than a dozen hose ware played on the building but with little results.

The court house, a two-story brick structure, is located in the center of the business section. Stores were threatened for a time by the sparks from the burning structure. The roof caved in within a half hour but the building was several hours burning. Only bare brick walls are left standing.

Records of the probate judge, tax collector and assessor were locked in a vault on the first floor and were saved. However, many records of the circuit clerk on the second floor were destroyed.

Owing to the heroic efforts of Knox Camp, son of former Probate Judge J. E. Camp, a number of papers in the probate office were saved. Seeing the fire in the cupola, he broke a window in the probate office, unlocked the vault and placed a number of records in the fireproof container.

The court house was a historic structure which had been added to and remodeled several times. Several years ago the building was badly damaged in a tornado.

Probate Judge E. A. Hammett announced that a called meeting of the county commissioners would be held to arrange temporary office quarters until the court house can be rebuilt.

FARM CHILDREN NOT INFERIOR

Facts involving 20,000 high school pupils representing every state in the Union show that farm children make better progress than other children through school. This is true because of the unusually good progress of farm girls. The facts show also that a higher percentage of farm girls than of other girls are enrolled and that the precentage of elimination from high school is lower. Unless we concede remarkable sex differences of ability between farm boys and girls, therfore, that the farm stock is decaying and we must abandon the ancient myth that all the brains have migrated to the cities.

Sentimentalists who have sought to improve rural education by raising the cry of decay of farm stock and have advanced a program designed to keep the most intelligent on the farm must seek another leg to stand on. The farm stock is still virile and intelligent it is yet educable. We need not fear to offer to country children an unbiased liberal education and permit even encourage, those so minded and fitted to seek opportunity wherever is beckons whether it be upon the farm or in the professions or trades.

Ku Klux Representative Draws Large Crowd Sunday

[illegible] which filled every available space in the circuit court room on Sunday, afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, with probably 300 or more turned away from lack of standing room, Mr. C. O. Johns, Imperial representative of Knights of the Ku Kulx Klan, delivered an interesting and instructive address on the principles of the Ku Klux.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. C. C. Wilkerson of the Clanton Methodist church, who acted as chairman of the meeting. A song was sung after which Rev. W. S. Cox led in prayer.

The speaker was introduced by the chairman, who in a forceful and eloquent address of introduction emphasized the point that if the Ku Klux were all that they are accused of being then he was against them, but if they were an American organization and standing for the divinity of Christ, for the promotion of law and order, and for the protection of the government to keep it in the hands of the Americans people and against those who would have it controled from afar, then he was for them. He was loudly applauded.

Mr. Johns entered into his address, with a very happy and pleasing personality. With a ready flow of oratory and view of harmony that kept his audience in an attentive state, he explained the principles of the order which he represents in a most forceful and enlightening manner.

He disabused the minds of his hearers that the Ku Klux Klan was an organization promoted to fight any sect or creed of people, and not even our own southern negro or the negro race.

He stated it was not its purpose to antagonize any organization at any time, and it would not do so.

Mr. Johns stated that his organization was organized and promoted by pure blee born American protestants, organized to promote the teachings of the well-being of the country, in which we live, to help protect the womanhood of our country, and to always be on the watch out to keep our country free from clutches of any foreign influence which he said was at all times organized and working to undermind it.

He stated that a lot of people charge the organization with being antagonistic to the negro. He said nothing was further from the truth. He explained that the organization was a friend to the negro and was always ready to help him in any laudable undertaking. He said his organization was to promote the well being of pure Americanism, and anything that tended in anyway to push this cause always could expect his organization to back it up.

He excoriated different organization, foreign in their scope, who confidence and have fought the organization and are still doing so, and so long as they continued, he said they would always find the Klan ready to watch with them.

We [illegible] communication of the Associated Press who he said had made a hard and organized fight to kill the Klan, and that it was the first time the press organization had failed in any attempt. He explained the growth of the order and the uphill fight it had made. He stated the organization had upwards of 8,000,000 members and based on an average of five person to the family would make it representative of almost half of the populaton of the United States.

Verbena High School Stands Near Top In State

Verbena High School, which was accredited last year, has made a most excellent record through its graduates of last year now attending institutions of higher learning of the state. This is shown in a communication from the State Department of Education received by Prof. W. E. G. Sutton recently, in which it is shown that of 72 rural high schools represented in the various colleges of the state, Verbena High School ranks sixth, being among those few whose graduates did not fail on any subject of mid-[illegible] examinations. Of all the city, county and rural high schools of the state, there are ten groups, and Verbena High School has rate being placed in Group 1, the highest ranking group. The school and community are gratified by the excellent results from the initial year of ecredit.

METHODIST MEET STARTS APRIL 5TH

A protracted series of meetings will begin at the Methodist church in Clanton Sunday, April 5th, and continue for two weeks.

Dr. J. M. Glenn, presiding eldee of the Dublin, Ga., district of the South Georgia conference, will be in charge of the meeting, and a special song leader will also be here to have charge of the choir. Dr. Glenn and his singer will not arrive until the 6th.

The Methodist congregation at Clanton is one of the most untiri[illegible] of the south, as is attested by the new church edifice they have erected in Clanton in the past year. Although it is not hardly completed, it stands as a glorious monument to the women and men who worship there.

This series of meeting promises much good for the community and all churches and everybody who will, are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

CHILTON SHERIFF MAKING GOOD

The escape from the Montgomery jail Monday night of Jake O'Brien, one of the three men who attempted delivery from the Clanton jail some time ago, brings to the realization of the people of this county that they have a sheriff who is ever watchful and is doing his duty as an officer in a very hard position.

It will be recalled that three men stole the automobile of Lester Parnell at Stanton, and were captured in Mississippi and held for Chilton county authorities. They attempted to break jail in Missis ippi and saws were taken off their person there.

On being brought here, other saws were found. Sheriff Littlejohn kept a close watch over them and nipped an escape in the bud just as they were ready to make their escape.

They were carried to Montgomery for safe keeping. The escape from the Montgomery jail, one of the best in the state, where sufficient guard is always kept, is just one way of emphasizing that a sheriff of the calibre of our own sheriff is something to feel proud of. Mr. Littlejohn is a painstaking young man, faithfully endeavoring to perform the difficult job he has been elected to.

White Man Bound Over on Carnal Knowledge Charge

[illegible] its kind was enacted at Mountain Creek in this county on Monday of last week when it is alleged that Jo[illegible] Wyatt, a young white man of [illegible] county, who has been working with one of the construction crews near Mountain Creek, enticed Mary Smith, a 15 year old school girl, to leave with him.

According to best information obtainable it seems that young Wyatt has been working near the Smith home on the outskirts of Mountain Creek and had made the acquaintance of the young school girl.

Monday of last week a note was sent to the school for Mary to come down in town for some cause and from there she is alleged to have left with Wyatt.

The school teacher is alleged to have become suspicious of the circumstance and wrote a note to her father explaining the excuse for leaving school. Mr. Tom Smith, father of the girl could find no trace of the girl. It was alleged that she went to the home of a Mr. and Mrs. Cooper from school, but they both denied she had been there or that they had seen her or to know anything about her. A clew was found and with Policeman Burton and Mr. Parsons, a son-in-law of Mr. Smith, a search was started and they were traced to the home of Wyatt's mother in Shelby county, where the girl was found in his embrace, screaming and fighting to get away, it is alleged. Mr. Burton informed a reporter for the News that Wyatt's mother told them that Wyatt had another wife and several children whom he had abandoned and she further said that he was worthless, no account and ought to be hung.

Policeman Burton brought the [illegible] per back to Clanton Tuesday and placed him in the county jail at Clanton. He was given a hearing before Judge J. W. E. Gulledge Friday morning on a charge of carnal knowledge and bound over to the grand jury under a $1,000 bond, which Wyatt has not made up to time of going to press.

The girl says that a note was sent to her at the school house to come down town, and that she met him at or near the midway store of the Coopers and that she wore a hat of Mrs. Cooper when she left.

For convenience of those who want to get married in that section, the probate judge at Columbiana has been allowing a justice of the peace to issue licenses at Calera, but on receiving a wire from Mountain Creek that it was thought Wyatt would try to get a marriage license at Calera, he phoned the justice of peace to refuse a license and to tell them they would have to go to Columbiana to get married.

They appeared at Calera for a li[illegible] and [illegible] to Columbiana, but they didn't go there.

This is a very serious offense and the people of the Mountain Creek community are very much wrought over the affair, as the young girl bears a most excellent reputation and is well liked by the people of that section.

Attorney General Davis Answers Mr. Rodgers

Montgomery, Ala., March 23.—Attorney General Harwell G. Davis in a statement Staurday pointed out that Alabama's highway building program is being carried on at a rate of expenditure of $ 7,000,000 worth state bond issue money per year with only a little over a million and a half dollars of federal money available to match it. The attorney general's statement was in reply to a recent published interview from John A. Rodgers that the state highway commission, in which Mr. Rogers, sad the state has spent or is now spending $13,000,000 and the federal government $11,000,000 for road work in Alabama."Rogers neglected to mention, according to Davis, that a large part of the federal aid was spent before the $25,000,000 bond issue and was capsequently not used to match bond issue money.

Reference was made by the attorney general to a letter sent out by Mr. Rogers a year ago in which the chairman of the highway commission declared that successful roads did not indorse the plan of the highway department to bond road on them.

Following is the text of Attorney General Davis' statement:

The interview of the chairman of the highway commission relative to my published statement concerning the $7,000,000 bond issue read me the following statement:

"In Alabama the state has spent or is now spending $13,000,000 and the federal government 11,252,963."

Many accepted this as meaning that over $11,000,000 federal money had matched by state road funds. Only 11,252,963 has ever been available to Alabama from the government since 1916, the beginning of federal aid. The first state bond issue was voted in June, 1919. A large part of this $11,000,000 voted road fund had been matched prior to the first bond issue as appears in the following extract from the testimony given by this commissioner on November 30, 1923, to-wit:

QUOTES FROM ROGERS

"Up to [illegible] accumulate to the credit of Alabama of the federal appropriation [illegible] for the benefit of the road in the state. The $5,000,000 [illegible] by a like sum of Alabama money. [illegible] cash been spent, or are now being spent on the roads under construction. From now on Alabama will get from the federal government each year $1,500,000."

On July 1 1924 there will be available for the government fiscal year 1925 to Alabama $1,541,870 and which to match the $1,500,000 Alabama bonds. On July 1, 1925 there will be available to Alabama $1,541,870 with which to match the 1925 Alabama bond issue of $7,000,000. Here is $13,000,000 of bond money against a little over $3,000,000 federal aid.

The interview also stated that a majority of the counties acting through their courts of county commissioners indorsed the program of spending money now followed by the highway commission. Three indorsements came to my notice, there were doubtless others which were not available to me. I do not know why these county bodies were selected as spokesman for the people rather than the legislature which under the constitution is the representative of the people.

The plan submitted to and indorsed by these county bodies was contained in a letter by this commissioner which states that all county sites notnow connected with other county sites would be maintained by the counties till surfaced by federal aid. No such program of constructing unsurfaced roads to be maintained by the counties has been undertaken. On January 17, 1925 the chairman of the highway commission, not having received the number of indorsement of his plan desired, wrote a letter to the county commissioners in which the following statement was made, to-wit:

Writ- Second Letter

"As there are now no federal funds available and will not be for some time, no county that does not indorse the plans of the highway department to use state funds in accordance of the federal government can expect the highway department to build roads for them."

According to an interview published in the Mobile Register, Albert S. Townsend the boarded secretary of that county said relative to this letter, "The threat to incriminate Mobile from [illegible] should not have been made."

the emergency road construction program. 'How is a person to know how many other county boards saw in this treat to eliminate their county from any road construction, and knowing that the expenditure of highway funds was in the almost irrevisable discretion of the commission, indorsed the program to prevent being eliminted?

An indorsement must be with full knowledge of what is being indorsed and free from coercion to be worth considering.—Harwell G. Davis.

RAPID DEVELOPMENT IN STREET LIGHTING

Two hundred years ago street-lighting consisted of a few lanterns hung in front of houses, chiefly to discourage cutthroats and other prowlers. A century ago city streets were lighted with lamps at regular intervals, both to promote safety and to enable people to get about without constant collision.

Modern street-lighting has progressed beyond these requirements and must accomplish many purposes. The most important functions of a street to the police with particular reference to [illegible] have been tabulated by the British Institution of Public Lighting Engineers as follows:

1. It must reveal stationary and moving obstacles particularly pedestrians, not visible by them, to other traffic, especially drivers of automobiles.

2. It must reveal the route to drivers and pedestrians, varying in degree [illegible] with sufficient to show sudden bends, cross roads and obstacles in the roadway, to a more exact vision of all objects from side to side of the street in continuous illumination.

3. It must reveal names of streets, number of houses traffic warnings etc.

4. It must reveal all objects in the street to the police, with particular reference to those in entrance ways and other recesses.

5. It should make it possible to read ordinary print if necessary a time table for example or an address on a letter.

It should make possible the recognition passers-by.

7. The degree an quality of the lighting should attract traffic.

8. I should give a cheerful and pleasing appearance to the street

9. Architectural features of the street should be suitably illuminated

MAKE FARM LIFE ATTRACTIVE FOR THE GIRLS AND BOYS

One of the most serious problems among the world is this question: 'How can we keep the girls on the farms'

It is one of the hall marks of civilization that so many girls are forced into the big cities to seek their fortune.

Probably no more daughters of the farm come to misfortune in the big cities than do the city girls or the girls from the small towns who work for a living.

It can be set down as a sound proposition that working girls as a class, are more apt to make a success of life than another large class of girls having more social advantages but seeking the bright lights.

It is a great social duty to make the home life on the farms more attractive to the girls. There should be more rural recreation centers under proper supervision.

If the churches and fraternal orders could minister to the social needs of humanity, includes the growing young people, we would hear less of farm girls crowding to the cities.

With good roads, cheaper motor cars, the rural mail and telephone, the phonograph, electricity and the radio, life is growing more attractive on the farms.

Individual initiative, energy and ambition the driving force which has built this nation is the great agency that is today remaking it pleasant for both girls and boys to stay on the farm.—Manufacturers and Industrial News Bureau.

SPRING IS COMING ON

It is probably an old sermon—but old sermons are best. It doesn's deserve a place in the news columns—and yet it is more important to the entire population of Clanton than anything else appearing in the paper this week. We are referring to our annual reminder that "spring is just around the corner" and that it is not only the privilege but the duty of every citizen to make his own individual corner as bright and as clean as it is possible to make it.

It isn't the fact that more and more visitors are coming through town each year that should prompt us to make a more thorough job of the spring clean-up than we ever did before, but the main reasons is that we know from experience that both of ourselves and our neighbors, keeping the town and the houses in it clean keeps down disease and reduces the death rate. It is the health, the of ourselves and our neighbors that we are interested in more than anything else—and goood health depends upon surroundings more than upon anythings else.

Let us hope that a second notice that it is now safe to start the spring cleaning will not be needed. Let us also hope that the job will be a thorough one and that it will not stop at the front gate and the back door. Clean up the street. If the walks need fixin, see that it is done, or report to proper authorities. Clean up the back yard, and give the largest part of your attention to the greatest disease--breeder of all—the back alley or vacant lot. Do it now, and you'll enjoy more time for rest when the hot months do arrive.

THEY HIT IT

We heard old-timers around Clanton and even some younger, of amateur weather-prohets predicting long, hard winter. Experts in Uncle Sam's weather bureau issued long reports to show that our winters, average by and large over a long period of years, are always pretty much the same They contended that we have about the same amount of snow and cold each winter, although it may not always come in the same month.

But the old-timers and the amateur scoffed at this and said that the husk on last fall's corn was thicker than usual, that the fur on small animals was heavier this fall, that the squirrels were gathering nuts earlier than they ordinarily did all of which, they contended, meant that we were to have a long hard winter. And if you've been keeping any kind of track of the weather for the past four or five months you'll have to admit that they were right. Take the United States from one end to the other and it has passed through one of the most severe winters in its history. Middle-western states, especially, have to record more snow and more zero weather than for a good many winters.

Next time maybe it would be wise to give the old-timers and the amateur weather sharks a little more consideration. Maybe, after all they are just as capable of peering into the future, so far as the weather is concerned, as are the men who make a business of it and who are paid fancy salaries by Uncle Sam.

THE ROAD TO PROGRESS IN RADIO

Discussingg radio, Secretary Hoover of the department of Commerce, says: "There can be but one point of view is the consideration of radio regulation and development. That is to assure increase service to the listener. The radio is steadily enriching our homes. More particularly to our farmer folks it is bringing more of those contracts that the town populations have long enjoyed up to this time. The road of progress is to stimulate the development of the art; to secure greater perfection of reception, increase in the number of alternative programs and better programs."

Concerning charges of radio monopoly which have been made. Mr. Hoover says:

There is no monopoly of radio broadcasting or any sign of it. There are only four or five concerns in the entire United States which own or operate more than one station and of the total 563 stations in action, not more than four belong to anyone of them."

SPECIAL EDITION

A copy of the Opelika Daily News of March 13, containing 80 pages of live reading matter and advertising, gotten up as a welcome edition to the Pepperwell Mills of New England, who are locating at Opelika.

Opelika is one of the progressive cities of Alabama and the News is one of the valuable assets and Editor Ware is always found with the goods when anything for the good of Opelika and Lee county are in the offering.

We congratulate our east Alabama neighbor on the splendid edition, also Opelika on its growing achievement in landing this manfacturing enterprise. It shows what a little push and pull and every shoulder to the wheel can do.

"And when a man does take his wife to a show," declares, Col. W. W. Fox "she tells the neighbors that she knows he'll brag about it for a week."

Just so long as young people continue to believe that this thing of being good is out of date parents are going to have a hard row to hoe.

A special edition of the Fort Payne Journal has reached our desk. The Journal is spreading it on typographically.

IS OUR INDUSTRY PERMANENTLY DECLINING

Our animal husbandry industry is falling off in volume. According to the reports of the boards of agriculture of Missouri, Kansas and Iowa there were at the end of 1924 fewer animals on farms in these three typical agricultural states than at the beginning of the year.

The heaviest falling off in numbers was in hogs due to the unsatisfactory relation between the price of hogs and corn. But beef cattle continued in their long time decline in numbers The end of the year registered another reduction in the numbers of horses and mules. Apparently we have not reached the limit in the substitution of motor power for horse power.

The trend downward has been accentuated no doubt by the unsatisfactory price of meat animals in the last four years but it reaches far back of this era and probably has a more fundamental basis than a temporary price upset.

Little as we like to admit it, the fact as we are consuming less meat per person than formerly. Our education in schools, on the lecture platform and in the press encourages the eating of less meat. We are looking everywhere for meat substitutes as though meat were deleterious to health and beyond the average family or the output of an industry we should discourage. Our schools, from the graduate course in universities to the lowest elementary instruction, are teaching us to eat other things and, in effect, to omit meat as far as possible from our dietary.

These teachers and the rest of the public are apparently unmindful of the effects of their teaching. They do not realize that animal husbandary is the principal part of animal husbandry.

Seven-tenths of the land of the United States occupied by crops that are harvested is used exclusively for the production of feed and live stock. Only about two-tenth of our cultivated land is used for the production of food for human consumption such as bread grains, fruits and vegetables. Besides there are vast grazing regions, representing about 60 per rent of our total arble area, used exclusively for the production of livestock and almost wholly for the raising of meat animals.

We can scarcely imagine the state of American agricture with meat production continuing to decline. Instead of doing our best to hinder it we should be doing all in our powe to restore this ndustry to its forme standing.—Kansas City Star.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Hall of Clanton Lodge, No 304
I. O. O. F.
Clanton, Alabama,
March 19, 1925.
To the noble Grand, Officers and Brethern of Clanton Lodge No 304
I. O. O. F.

We, the undersigned committee respectfully beg leave to submit for your approval and adoption the following resolutions:

Our departed friend and brother, Henry Andrew Jackson Harris was born in Elmore County, Alabama on the 29 day of Oct 1852, where he spent his early years. He married Elizabeth Kelly January 7, 1875, daughter of Elias and Elizabeth Kelly of Coosa County, Alabama to which union there were borned nine children, four boys and five girls, who are all living. Brod. Harris joined the Baptist church when about twenty-four years old and until his death took an active part and was a devoted church member. He moved to Chilton County in 1886 where he first became a member of the Odd Fellows Lodge, being a charter member of Clanton Lodge No. 304 which was insituted January 9, 1904 He was elected treasurer of this lodge December, 1905 which office he held until his heath. His devotion to his lodge and his love for the principles of the order were manifested by the fact that Brother Harris until his recent illness and failing health in the last year or more never missed a single meeting of his lodge. He was always ready to stretch out a helping hand for a falling brother and extend them sympathy and consolation and within the lodge and out he was a source of honest information to his brothers and was considered one of the old land marks of Odd Fellowship.

It is also significant that all four of our deceased brothers boys belong to the lodge and the majority of his girls belong to the Rebecca Lodge.

Brother Harris was laid to rest with Odd Fellowship at Chestnut Creek church on the afternoon of February 2r. 1925 where a great throng of Odd Fellows and relatives and friends assembled to mourn the passing of this good and noble man.

Whereas: The great and supreme Ruler of the universe has in his infinite wisdom removed from among us, one our worthy and estemed fellow-laborers. Henry Andrew Jackson Harris; and whereas, the long and intimate relationship held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties in this lodge make it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him, therefore.

Reolved, that the wisdom and ability which he has exercised in the aid of our organization by service, contributions, and counsel, will be held in grate ful remembrance;

Resovled, that the wisdom and ability such a life from our midst leaves a vcaancy and a shodow that will be deeply realized by all the members and his friend of this organization, and will prove serious loss to the com munity and the public.

Resolve, that with deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of the deceased we express our hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overuled for good by Him who doeth all things well;

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of this organization, a copy printed in the local papers and a copy forwarded to the bereaved family.

MINUTES INSTEAD OF DAYS

The world's longest telephone circuit is between Chicago and Los Angeles 2000 miles. It would take seven days to make the round trip and would cost a minimum of $200.00 A talk to Chicago over the telephone for ten minutes would cost about ten dollars. In many instances the telephone call today take the place of a seven day trip. Nowhere but in America s any such telephone service rendered.

Chrevrolet Stands Afrrcan Trip

Within a few months the fly tents and the cooking utensils will have been strapped on the car and that new species of traveler-the Auto Tourists will be on his way to live in the open and see the hidden glories of this country as they are seen only in a gypsy kind of wandering.

If you chance to be one of them and think that there are many irksome duties connected with primitive living in the open, hark to the tale of a 2,000 mile trip of Mr. and Mrs. L. Blake Jolly in the Broken Hill country of nothern Rhodesia, Africa. Mr. Jolly is chief recruiting agent of the Rhodesia Broken Hill Development, Company, Ltd., North Rhodesia, Africa.

Even the worst roads you may have encountered are veritable primrose country in the land of the tom-tom and the teese-fly. The Jollies encountered every type of annoyance and adventure in their journey of more than two months.

At the time of this trip, the middle car used was the only one in their of last summer, the Chevrolet touring country and the only car that ever successfully left Broken Hill and got safely through to Lake Tanganyika.

Food for two week had to be carried besides complete cooking and sleeping equipment, while gasoline and extra food had to be sent on a head by 40 carriers. In addition to the tremendous weight of equipment, four persons were carried in the car through "tracks cut through brush, full of pits and holes."

First day out the only road was a native foot path, at times hardly visible and every few miles a dambo plain was encountered, which is very marshy ground with a bog in the middle and which becomes a veritable river in the rainy season. Often a native boy had to be sent ahead to reconnotire and then car was pioited.

Through the diary of the trip contains more than 3,000 words, only the most interesting extracts will be taken.

On July 22, grass from six to seven feet high intermingled with bushes, was encountered, tosay nothing of ant hills and holes which shook the car to its very limit. The sun was so hot that the gasoline had to be completely covered by the equipment.

On the following day the car became stuck in a bog and it was necessary to send back for a dozen natives to push out. It never rains but it pours, it is said, and 12 foot elepnant grass was encountered which filled the radiator with grass seed, so that it was necessary to stop every few miles and dislodge the seed to prevent the motor from boiling. Later this same day the party fan across a great brush fire-flames from horizon—and only avoided hitting a large patch of ground where the grass had already been burned.

The next day the only thing exciting was a jackal, a wild cat and phython crossed their path and a group of babboons which the superstitious natives never kill for fear of bringing bad luck.

"The next day," writes Mrs. Jolly "my husband went over the car which had extraordinary little the matter with it."

Mrs. Jolly explained in her diary that they often encountered great patches of burnt down timber land. The natives burn down miles of trees to fertilize the ground—a lazy way to prepare the ground instead of hoeing it.

A raft made of old gasoline cans ferried the Chevrolet across a river the next day. Two days later another river was encountered and the wheels of the car went through a bridge up to the axle and it took two hours to unpack the car and get across. About six miles further the same day a second bridge was encountered and the same strenuous exercise was needed to get the car out of the rotten timber.

The party camped under Mount Sunza, the highest nountain in northern Rhodesia, after strenuous work on the bridges. In the small settlement where they unpacked for the night there were 40 Airedales that were used to hunt lions.

About two days later they struck a bad belt of teetse-fly and it was all they could do to keep the bites off the dog—the bite of the teetse-fly being fatal to a dog.

The following day the party had to cut down a number of trees and build a 200 foot stretch of corduroy road. They shot some delicious pheasants for lunch.

For the next 25 miles the car was was hardly ever out of low gear as the journey was continually up-hill-sand hills which made the going most difficult.

Killing a zebra, walking five miles to hunt game only to find a solitary pelican, crossing more ridges and helping a sick man to go 100 miles to a doctor constituted the outstanding adventures during the remainder of the trip.

"In conclusion," writes Mrs. Jolly in her diary, "I must pay a tribute to our Chevrolet car. It has been smply marvelous and considering the tremendous load and the roughness of the country which we have traversed, it is more than a fair test of its power and durability. We have spent extraordinarily little on repairs and it is now in excellent condition after a strenuous trip of more than 2000 miles."

DRESSING-UP

Brenda had come to play with Jane. They had played "house" first. Jane had a splendid room in which she could play with her friends, and today because it had been rainy for several days in succession her mother had said they could dress up in her clothes—all except her best party frock.

They loved dressing up and wearing long skirts and in making believe they were giving large parties to which all the grown-up friends of their mothers came.

"How Do You Do, Mrs McIntosh?"

Jane was hostess.

"Oh, how do you do, my dear," she said to Brenda who had said in a low voice:

"I'm Mrs. Campbell now.'

"How do you do, my dear Mrs. Campbell," Jane repeated. "I'm so glad you could come. Such wretched weather we've been having. I do hope you brought your music.

"You're always so good about singing, and your friends so love to hear you."

"That's so good of you to say so, my dear."

"I mean it—every word of it. As I wrote to my husband—you know he's abroad just now? Oh, didn't you know it? Well, he's in Europe. Yes, just in Europe—no special place at all.

"You see he's an artist. Yes, he paints such beautiful pictures. And they hang so many pictures in Europe that he leaves all his work there.

"But as I was saying, I wrote to my husband, and I said:

"'I do hope dear Mrs. Campbell will bring her music to my party. It will make such a difference.'

"Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Phelan. And are your dear little girls well? Such charming little girls. So prettily mannered. Ah, I wish my child were as good as yours. Mine gets into trouble all the time.

"As I say so often. If there's trouble to be found, that child finds it."

"I'm Mrs. McIntosh now," Brenda said.

"How do you do, Mrs. McIntosh?" I hear your daughter is going to be married. Do you approve of the match?"

"I wish he had more money, but then they love each other," Mrs. McIntosh answered in Brenda's best take-off voice.

"Oh, well," said Jane, in her best hostess manner, "you'll enjoy the wedding. They are so exciting."

Brenda trailed out of the room and changed her costume now. Jane went too and picked out a second-best evening dress of her mother's.

How they did love to lean up against all the pretty clothes and almost fondle them. There weren't very many, Jane's mother only had a small wardrobe but it was very interesting—so entirely different from Jane's own clothes.

"I shall give a ball now," Brenda said. But just then the clock struck five.

"Brenda, would you like to stay for supper?"

"My mother said I could if I was invited. I asked her to make sure before I left."

"Just a moment then," Jane said. And with Brenda a little behind her, Jane went into her mother's room and said in a loud whisper:

"Mother, may Brenda stay for supper? Her mother says it's all right if she's invited."

Jane's mother smiled and said:

"I suppose so. She seems to know you're asking me though I have told you, dear," her mother added in a low voice, "that you must not let your guests know you're doing this. It makes it inconvenient, sometimes. But she can stay tonight."

"Mother, May Brenda Stay?"

Jane bounded out of the room. Brenda was right by the door. "Yes, you can stay, Brenda, though mother says next time I mustn't let you know I'm going to ask you. Never mind, though, you can stay tonight anyway."

So Brenda stayed and after supper they ended up with Blind Man's Buff. It was such fun to play it in the hall where they could jump over the lower part of the bannisters when the one who was "It" came up the stairs after the one not blindfolded.

And it was particularly nice to have a little game before bedtime.

TO OPEN BIDS ON ROAD SOUTH

Bids will be opened at the state highway department April 15 for the section of the Birmingham-Montgomery highway from the Chilton county line through eastern Autauga county about one mile south of the Reese's Ferry bridge over the Alabama. It was announced Saturday. The length of the project will approximate 25 miles including a spur about a mile and half long to connect Prattville with the highway. Bids will be opened on the date mentioned for grading and bridges on the project, bids for surfacing to be called for at a later date.

When this contract is awarded, the Birmingham-Montgomery highway will be completed or under construction from Hunter's Station, in Montgomery county, to the city limits of Birmingham. The highway is already under construction in Chilton county down to the Autauga line and the project on which bids will be received April 15 will connect with the section now under construction, at the Chilton line. IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL

Sunday School Lesson

(By REV. P. B. FITZWATER, D.D., Dean of the Evening School, Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.)

(©, 1925, Western Newspaper Union.)

Lesson for March 29

CLOSING PERIOD OF CHRIST'S MINISTRY—REVIEW

DEVOTIONAL READING—Rev. 1:9-18.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, and today and forever."—Heb. 13:8.

PRIMARY TOPIC — How Friends Cared for Jesus and Paul.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Helping the Mission.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—[illegible] From the Quarter.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Closing Scenes in Christ's Life.

The lessons of the quarter have been so rich and full that perhaps the best method of review will be to summarize the outstanding teachings of the quarter. The following suggestions are offered:

Lesson I—The so-called triumphal entry was the official presentation of Jesus of Nazareth to the Jewish nation as their Messiah. He was the predicted King coming in the name of the Lord (Psa. 118:26).

Lesson II—Coming judgment is absolutely certain. The judgment portrayed in this lesson is that of the nations living on the earth when Jesus comes. The judgment pronounced—reward or doom—will be on the ground of the attitude of the nations towards Jesus as expressed in their treatment of His brethren, the Jews.

Lesson III—Before Jesus went to the cross He instituted a memorial of His broken body and shed blood. This should be gratefully and strictly observed by believers until Christ come again.

Lesson IV—Many are the trials through which the believer must pass as he goes through this life. The sure cure for "heart trouble" is the assurance that Jesus has gone to prepare a place in His Father's house, and will come again and receive His disciples to Himself.

Lesson V—Jesus is the true vine and believers are the branches. Abiding in Him will result in fruitfulness, success in prayer, fellowship, the love-life of God, fullness of joy and love-life like that of God.

Lesson VI—It is not the purpose of God that Christians should be taken out of the world at once when they believe on Christ because the world needs their influence and testimony. Christ needs them as His representatives and they need the trials of the world to strengthen the grace of God in their hearts. Those whom God has given to Christ are eternally secure even though they must pass through great trials.

Lesson VII—The agony of Gethsemane was due to the fact that Jesus was bearing the burden of the sins of the world.

Lesson VIII—The heart of this lesson is that Christians should be obedient to civil authority because human government has been ordained of God. The more loyal the believer is to Jesus Christ, the more loyal he will be to rightly constituted authority (This lesson has no logical connection with the others of the quarter and should be omitted where time is limited).

Lesson IX—Jesus Christ gave clear proof that He was the Messiah promised in the Scriptures, but the wicked nation rejected Him and chose a murderer instead. Both Pilate and the nation went down under the guilt of the rejection of Christ.

Lesson X—Christ on the cross is the supreme expression of unselfish love, a revelation of the moral nature of the world, and stands as an exhibition of a cross section of the world in any generation.

Lesson XI—Christ's resurrection is an absolute certainty. This unquestioned fact certifies that He is the divine Son through whom we get eternal life.

Lesson XII—The various appearances of Jesus Christ after His burial demonstrate the reality of His resurrection, confirm the truthfulness of the Scriptures and reveal Him as not only the supreme and grand center of the Scriptures, but the supreme interpreter of them.

TWO DOLLARS FOR ONE ON ROADS

All over our country there is a lot of excessive expenditure in the name of enthusiasm for permanent highways, and two dollars spent where one would do, and result is one mile of paved road where two miles might have been built.

In one state a heavy concrete construction, seven inches with ten inches on the sides was foisted on the taxpayers merely to show that a cement structure could be built heavy enough to with stand shocks and crumbling from [illegible] cracking, and the [illegible] was doubled up at [illegible].

For forty years the taxpayers had piled gravel on this roadway until there was a solid base nearly a foot thick on which a three inch wearing surface of asphaltic concrete would have made a perfect, permanent highway for half the cost and of twice the mileage.

CONTRACT IS LET FOR COURT HOUSE

Goodwater, Ala., March 23—The commissioners' court of Coosa county has awarded a contract to Walker brothers of Fayette to rebuild the courthouse at Rockford, which was destroyed by fire in the latter part of January. The price for the job is $37,500. Work will begin at once and it will be several months before it is completed, and the spring term of circuit court will not be [illegible].

SCHOOL PLAY PRESENTED

The senior class of the Goodwater High school gave a play, "Blunder Billie," at Ashland Saturday night. The play will be put on at other places it is stated. The first rendering of the play was here [illegible].

Sometime ago Miss Curry filled a long engagement with "Uncle Tom's Cabin" troupe, using these songs. She also filled a successful engagement with the "Punch and Judy" theatre on Broadway, making these songs her specialty.

ARE RUBBER CORSETS INJURIOUS?

London, March 16.—To wear, or not to wear—rubber corsets. That is the question which is arousing English women today.

Man, not mere, man, but a distinguished man—Sir Bruce— Porter raised the issue, and now that it has arisen a wordy and bitter controversy rages and the London newspapers are given considerable space to the question.

"Damnable"—that is the strong phrase which Sir Bruce is one of England's distinguished physicians, used in opening his attack on rubber corsets and the boyish figure, which is the aim of those who wear these appliances.

"Fashion," said Sir Bruce, "confered a great boon on young girls in doing away with the tight Victornian corset, but the tight rubber belts they are wearing at the present time is likely to produce far more serious effects.

"It is unnatural for women to have a figure which is described as 'boyish' Toget that fiuure a bet has been put upon the market which can only be called damnable. I warn parents not let their young daughters wear them.

"When growing from girlhood to womanhood girls begin to get a widening of the hips, which is natural and proper. It is essential for happy motherhood that such growh should not be restricted. These appalling belts prevent the growth of important muscels and a danger to the mothers of the future.

"Nothing is more certain than that nature will punish those who misuse their bodies. The girls of today pride themselves on getting rid of their mothers' Victorian corsets. They must beware lest they get into the worse bondage of the infernal band called the rubber corset."

So much for man and his views on the rubber corset.

The camp of the women is divided on the question.

Lady Ronald takes up the cudgels for the rubber corset.

"I have been wearing rubber corsets myself for six months," confessed her ladyship. " I think them perfectly healthy and the most comfortable thing I have ever worn. I do not believe they really make you thinner, and I think it is quite wrong and unpleasant to wear them next to the skin, but over thin silk they are delightful."

Princess Labanoff also defended the damanable appliances.

"Rubber corsets, so long as it is not too tight, gives a very good line to the figure," said the Princess. "But if the corset is a couple of sizes too small it stands every likelihood of being injurious to the health. When the right size it is the most natural type of support to the figure."

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, APRIL 2, 1925. NO. 30.

EASTERN DISTRICT W. M. U. ENJOYS SESSION FRIDAY

Clanton Hostess to Women of This District

The eastern district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union of Alabama was called to order Frday morning by Mrs. Grady Broadhead, of Clanton, district vice president. After singing "Stand Up for Jesus," Rev. S. J. Ezell, pastor of the Clanton Baptist church, read Deuteronomy 4:29 and offered a prayer.

Mrs. S. J. Ezell of Clanton, on behalf of the hostess W. M. U., welcomed the visiting delegates in most appropriate manner. Mrs. W. E. Lacy of Wetumpka, responded in well chosen words.

After appointment of committees, District vice president, Mrs. Broadhead, delivered her message to the congregation, outlining what had been accomplished during the past year, and plans for 1925. Her address was well received and was very instructive.

A review of the work by delegations from different associations was then had. Each report showed much work being done and broad plans laid for the ensuing year. Mrs. Billingsley made the report for Chilton county, which was one of the best ever made.

The quarterly meeting for this county will be held on Thursday after the third Sunday in April. An interesting program is being arranged.

Mrs. J. R. Hardy of Rockford, made the report for Mrs. McCain, who could not be present.

Mrs. Hanna Reynolds of Anniston, state young people's secretary, took charge of an open discussion of the plans and accomplishments of the association in Alabama, and a very interesting discussion ensued of the splendid work being done in Alabama.

Miss Della Latham rendered a very beautiful solo, with Miss Robinson accompanist.

The feature of the morning session was the address of Miss Kathleen Mallory of Selma, on mission service. Miss Mallory is a very pleasing speaker, a woman of letters and her words were listened to with rapt attention by a large and appreciative audience. She reviewed the mission work being carried on at home and abroad, and pictured the service that is being rendered and how great is the opportunity for a greater service.

The hymn, "The Morning Light Is Breaking," was rendered by the congregation, after which Mrs. F. H. Bancroft of Carbon Hill, Ala., led an open discussion on personal service.

Lunch was had at 12:30, with the afternoon program beginning at 1:30

Seeking Others (John 1:45)—Miss Alice Powell of Port Royal, Ky., substituted for Mrs. Clay Murray, who could not be present. Her part was very interestingly presented.

Hymn, "Rescue the Perishing," by the congregation.

Report of committee on schedule for quarterly meetings and nomination of delegates to W. M. U. convention at Memphis; also pledges for district scholarship

Mrs. C. E. Crowell of Sylacauga, was to have discussed the subject, Mission Study Made Interesting, but not being able to attend, Miss Mallory took her place on the program and handled her subject in a fine manner.

Miss Della Latham rendered a special musical reading.

Teaching Them to Observe All Things—Miss Hannah Reynolds, Montgomery.

Open discussion—W. M. U. Plan of Work—White Cross Work at Home and Abroad—Rev W. R. Seymore of Selma. Mr. Seymore is superintendent of the Baptist Hospital at Selma, and he made a most excellent address at this time.

The report of committees on resolution, enrollment and place was read.

The afternoon exercises were adjourned with prayer by Mrs. Shanks.

The evening program was put on by different organizations of Chilton county and the impression made was evidence for good in the church life of this section.

Miss Reynolds took charge of the evening program. The first number was "Sinning Afar" (Isa. 60:1-3) read and discussed by Miss Reynolds. Miss Mallory rendered a prayer.

G. A. Hymn, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," by a G. A. chorus of Clanton and other church G. A. of this county.

Sunbeam Song—Thorsby and Clanton Sunbeams.

The Southern Baptist Program for 1925—Three R. A's—Earl Ellis, Bill Miner and Joe Earl Gowan.

R. A. Hymn, "The King's Business," Congregation.

A playlet, "Worshipping Women," written by Mrs S. J. Ezell and directed by her was rendered to the large congregation. It is really the life of Christ from the birth in the manger, to His death on the cross, and also the resurrection. It was a life story of the Savior depicted by Clanton people in a most pleasing manner. Mrs. Ezell for its creation, and the Clanton people for its rendition, are due much credit for this splendid portrayal.

Miss Mallory at this juncture gave an address on "Three Trophies: Three Testimonies," and again she captivated her audience.

Y. W. A. hymn, "O Zion, Haste," was sung by the congregation and benediction closed one of the most interesting meetings of this splendid body.

The following delegates and visitors registered for this assemblage:

The following elective officers were chosen: Mrs. W. E. Lacy of Wetumpka, secretary; Mrs. J. C. Gaines of Lineville, personal service chairman; Mrs. J. C. Hughes of Billingsley, publicity chairman; Mrs. Gordon Ivery of Roanoke, young people's counsellor.

Methodist Start Revival Sunday

The Revival at the Methodist church starts April 5th and will continue through the 19th inclusive. Dr. J. M. Glenn, Presiding Elder of Dublin, Ga., will have charge of the services.

Dr. Glenn is in his prime. He has made Revival Meetings a specialty. He has had charge of the Indian Springs Camp-Meetings for years. He has conducted some of the most outstanding tent meetings in the state of Georgia and Alabama. He runs at high tention, but is sane and keeps himself well poised at all times. He has run meetings in a number of the leading churches in our Conference. He was chosen as the regular speaker for the Epworth League conference held in Montgomery last year. We are praying and expecting to turn Clanton up side down for God during this meeting. "Come and we will do thee good."

Miss Ruth Harris will be the choir director. The following is what Dr. Glenn has to say of her work:

"She is one of the very best soloist in all the country, and is a splended leader. She was a teacher of music in the Western University for several years and gave it up to enter the Evangelistic field as a singer. I heard her at Indian Springs camp meeting two years ago where she sang the gospel message to thousands of people to their delight."

In speaking of the coming meeting Dr. Wilkerson said:

"We desire the cooperation of all the churches and cordially invite the community at large to worship with us."

Miss Harris will be with the congregation on Sunday, the fifth. Dr. Glenn will be here on the si xth.

Miscellaneous Shower Given to Honor Mrs. Floyd Seving

Friday afternoon, March 27, was indeed a happy one for Mrs. Floyd Seving (one among many). The faculty of Verbena high school gave a miscellaneous shower in her honor, at three-thirty o'clock, at high school auditorium. There were many beautiful gifts, including bed linen, face towels vanity sets, table runners, silver, cut-glass and alminum.

Those present wrote a wish for the bride and groom in a memory book and also a recipe in another for that purpose

An interesting contest was arranged by jumbling up names of household furniture, leaving them to be rearranged

After all the guests had arrived, a large basket covered in pink and white crepe paper was presented to Mrs. Irvin by two beautiful little girls, little Miss Mamie Meroney and Josephine Barrett

When the presents had all been opened and displayed, pink and white ice cream and cake were served to the guests present.

Clanton High Ball Club Still Romps Opposition

Chilton county high school baseball team still continues its winning streak, last Friday taking Wetumpka Aggies scalp to the tune of 8 to 3.

The Aggies showed a fair defense and a very strong offense, but the bearing down qualities of the Clanton team finally smothered the victory out, but every man on the team had to exert himself to make the victory complete.

Hayes again proved the star of the game, both in offense and defense. Vann started the game and for seven innings held the home team in check but in the eighth he showed signs of weakening, and Calloway was sent to the mound, but he was as wild as a March hare, and filled the bases with none out. Hayes was called upon to put the bars up and he "did nothing previous," striking one man out, catching one at third, while Thompson picked the third and last out off second. It was the grand finale to a game replete with errors, although very interesting from start to finish. Thompson proved himself a bear on the bases, stealing third and home in the ninth frame.

Harris pitched a good game for Wetumpka, giving up only five hits, but luck was against him, and with the Clanton team taking advantage of every play, his chance to win was nil.

All the Clanton boys showed up very well, but not the form they displayed at Cramton Bowl, Montgomery, where they defeated Lanier.

FLAPPER GRANDMOTHER

What promises to be one of the most entertaining and laugh-provoking plays every played here, is billed for the high school auditorium, this evening, when "Flapper Grandmother" trips upon the stage and the curtain of the evening's entertainment flaps. Pretty and Flapper-bows will be there too to support her in the cast. but from what we hear of the play, she needs but very little support—

"And still the wonder grew;
That one small head could carry all she knew."

The invitation is to you to come and find out just how she holds her own while traveling 'round this mundane sphere without some down-trodden son-in-law showing her how to right-about-face and retreat.

This play is under the auspices of Clanton Parent-Teacher Association, and local talent makes up the cast.

Miss Bronaugh is in charge of the instruction of the characters. She is an accomplished woman in this line of work, and is receiving some able assistance from Miss Naemi Turnquist of Thorsby, as accompanist.

All the characters are well taken, and a packed house is promised to greet the performance. Admission is 50c and 35c.

MR. CALLOWAY HURT IN ENCOUNTER WITH BURGLAR

Mr. Fred Calloway was very painfully hurt by a fall when he encountered a burglar on his premises last Thursday night. The fall might have saved his life, however, as he was struck a violent blow in the dark which caused him to step back into an open flower pit, partly filled with water.

Mr. and Mrs. Calloway were in their home entertaining some friends for the evening, when Mrs. Smith, a next door neighbor, heard some one on her premises and came over and told Mr. Calloway, and he promptly slipped out back of his home and encountered the would-be thief. In the dark, he ran upon the burglar who hit him a blow across the face, and in the struggle which followed Mr. Calloway was knocked into the pit.

Mr. Calloway was indisposed for several days as a result of his injuries, sustaining a wrenched leg. Mr. Calloway says the only regret he has was that he didn't get a good hold onto his adversary.

Poplar Springs

Dear Editor.

Will you allow me space in your paper this week.

First I want to say that our singing society and Sunday school meeting last Sunday morning was good. We had a good attendance and everybody seemed to [illegible] time.

A few songs were sung and then Miss Lena Downs, with her Y. W. A. girls, had a nice program. We thank Miss Lena for the great work she is doing. We feel that she is doing a good work in leading the young girls. We feel that the Lord will bless her in the good work that she is doing.

Don't forget the all day singing at Poplar Springs on Easter Sunday. We invite everybody to come and bring your 1925 song books and a full trunk of dinner. The singing will begin at nine thirty. Brother Parrish will preach at 11 o'clock. We [illegible] be all to hear a good sermon. It is hoped to make that day a great day in the service. Mr. W. F. Gilliland is chairman of the program.

Mrs. Ella Nancy Keen Died Sunday

Mrs. Ella Nancy Keen, 38 years of age, and wife of Lou C. Keen, died at the family home in Beat 6 Sunday afternoon at 1:15, after an illness of about two weeks.

Mrs. Keen was a daughter of Mr. T. J. Billingsley, one of the old settlers of this county. Her mother has been dead about 15 years. Besides her husband, Mrs Keen is survived by four children, Morris, Eloise, Warren and Louise. Besides these she leaves three sisters, Mrs. Lula Bice, Mrs. Alice Deason and Miss Lena Billingsley; by six brothers, Messrs. R. N. Billingsley, J. L. Billingsley, T. W. Billingsley, O. C. Billingsley, Alvin Billingsley and [illegible].

Keen was a consecrated Christian, for many years a member of Shiloh Baptist church, where her remains were tenderly laid away Monday afternoon by neighbors of the family.

The deceased spent her whole life in this county, being the daughter of one of the best known families in this section. She numbered her friends by her acquaintances, and the place filled by her in the community in which she ministered as the friend to everybody is vacant.

The News extends sympathy to the bereaved families.

BATES GARAGE ALEMITE PRESSURE OIL APPARATUS

Bates Garage, successor to Carter Bros., has just installed the Alemite system of oiling cars.

This is a high pressure force pump, which thoroughly greases every portion of the car which it comes in contact, thereby leaving no part left to run hot when it is supposed to be thoroughly lubricated.

It is just another one of the many things Mr. Bates says he will keep his garage up-to-the-minute with.

If Your Speedometer Says---O

IT'S TIME TO LUBRICATE AGAIN

Don't delay another day, if you want to prevent repair bills later on. It's cheaper to let us lubricate your car—than it is to risk wear and tear on the vital parts of your chassis. We have complete equipment for thorough, rapid Alemite service.

— EVERY 500 MILES

We are equipped with the alemite One-Ton High Pressure, High Speed Gun.

COLORED WOMEN ORGANIZED P. T. A.

The Parent-Teacher Association of Colored Schools met at the County Council Training School, Friday March 20 for the purpose of organizing County Council of P. T. A.s.

The many presidents came at the call of their County Supervisor and were present at the appointed hour.

The object of the meeting was vividly stated by the supervisor and after which the following officers were elected:

Mrs. Estella Hall, Clanton, Alabama, president. Mrs. Sallie Jackson, Thorsby, Alabama, vice president. Mrs. Mattie Wilson, Clanton, Alabama, Sect. Mrs. M. V. Raine, Cox Alabama, Cor. sect. Mrs. Virginnia Ford, Plantersville, Alabama, treasurer.

The officers were installed by Prof. I. B. Bryant. Mrs. Lela Woods rendered a beautiful solo, "Ring out Sweet Bells."

The object of this organization shall be unify and make efficient the work of the locals P. T. A.'s.

Next meeting will be held at Clanton Ala., at the City Colored School Friday before the Second Sunday in February 1926.

They used to use the mail, but now our "expert agriculturalists" who can tell a squash from a gourd are broadcasting over the radio.

We've noticed around Clanton that the fellow who works hardest has the least bad luck.

THE BLESSINGS OF PENTECOST

LESSON TEXT—Acts 2:1-21, 36-38.

GOLDEN TEXT—Repent and be baptized . . . every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.—Acts 2:38.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Makes People Glad.

JUNIOR TOPIC—What Happened on the Day of Pentecost.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Story of Pentecost.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Holy Spirit in the Church.

I. The Day of Pentecost Fully Come (vv. 1-13).

1. Significance of the Day (v. 1). Pentecost is from a Greek word meaning fifty. It was the feast held fifty days after the wave sheaf offering (Lev. 23:16). The wave sheaf typifies the resurrection of Christ (I Cor. 15:20-23).

2. The Gift—Holy Spirit (vv. 2-4). On this day the Holy Spirit descended upon the disciples. This does not imply that the Spirit was not in the world before this, for throughout all the ages He has been in the world giving light and life to it. It means that from that time forth He would work on a new basis, having the crucified, risen and ascended Christ to present to the world.

3. Upon Whom the Spirit Came (v. 1); cf. 1:15-17.

The twelve and others, both men and women to the number of 120, showing that the gift of the Holy Spirit was for all believers.

4. The Marks of the Spirit (vv. 2-4).

(1) External.

a. The sound of a mighty wind (v. 2). This is suggestive of the mysterious, pervasive and powerful energy of the Spirit.

b. The tongues of flame (v. 3). Each of the 120 was crowned with such a tongue. Tongues show the practical purpose of the Spirit's gift-witnessing, and the fire indicates the purifying energy burning up the dross and making effective witnessing for Christ.

c. Speaking in foreign tongues (v. 4). This was a temporary endowment for this special purpose.

(2) Internal.

This is seen in the transformation wrought in the disciples. Though a little while ago they were trembling with fear, they now have great courage and [illegible] possession.

5. The Effects (vv. 5-13).

(1) The multitude were filled with amazement and wonder. The gift of the Spirit transforms common men into men of power and influence.

(2) Some mocked and foolishly attempted to account for this remarkable occurrence. They accused the disciples of being intoxicated. The world today mocks men and women who testify in the power of the Holy Spirit.

II. Peter's Sermon (vv. 14-47).

Peter's sermon is as wonderful as the gift of tongues. It demonstrates the presence and power of the Spirit, since Peter was a Galilean fisherman without literary training. His analysis is perfect. He begins with a brief defense and scriptural explanation of the phenomenon of tongues (vv. 14-21). This is followed by a threefold argument to prove the messiahship of Jesus (vv. 22-36). The conclusion is an appeal to repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus.

1. The Introduction (vv. 14-21).

(1) Defense of the disciples against the charge of being drunk (v. 15).

(2) A scriptural explanation. He showed that this was a partial fulfillment of that which Joel predicted would come to pass (vv. 16-21; cf. Joel 2:28-32) before the messianic judgment, viz., an outpouring of the Holy Spirit and the salvation of all who call upon the name of the Lord.

2. The Proposition, or Theme (v. 36).

This was the messiahship of Jesus.

3. The Argument (vv. 22-36). It was threefold.

(1) From Christ's works (v. 22). He was approved of God among the Jews by His miracles, wonders and signs which God did by Him in their midst.

(2) From His resurrection (vv. 23-32). The Old Testament Scriptures had foretold the death and resurrection of Christ (Ps. 16:8-10).

(3) From His ascension to the right hand of God (v. 32). The proof that He had ascended on high was the wonderful miracle of the Spirit's operation in their midst, for He had said that upon His ascension into heaven He would send forth the Spirit.

4. The Effect of the Sermon (vv. 37-42).

Many people were convicted of their sins. Some three thousand repented and were baptized.

The American Sabbath

To say nothing of the divine law, on mere worldly grounds it is plain that nothing is more conducive to the health, intelligence, comfort, and independence of the working classes, and to our prosperity as a people, than our Christian American Sabbath.—Tyron Edwards.

TRUCKS MADE BY CHEVROLET

During 1924 the Chevrolet was the third largest truck [illegible] turing concern in the world, being surpassed only the number of truck by only two other automobile companies. Plans are now being [illegible] lated which, it is expected, will greatly increase truck sales during the present year and may place Chevrolet second position for 1925.

There were nearly 24,000 Chevrolet trucks sold last year. These both the commercial chassis and express types, the greater portion [illegible] selling of the latter.

An analysis of 1924 sales, R. H. Grice president and general manager asserts, shows that farmers, truck raisers, oil dealers and [illegible] ban business requiring medium delivery cars were among the buyers of the utility express, a considerable number also were for school busses.

The utility express has the Chevrolet valve-in-head motor constructed heavier at various points to conform to the requirements of speedy, easily operated trucks of ton capacity, for [illegible] exceptional heavy semi-elliptic springs in the rear. Driving pinion and shaft are integral to eliminate any chance of backlash. Gear [illegible] are specified and there is a special bevel gear drive at the rear axle.

ROAD BUILDING BIG PROBLEM

The cost and ease of repairs should be a main consideration in road building, according to H. Smith Deputy State Engineer of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York, in his address to a convention of engineers.

A short asphalt pavement is readily repaired. The material forming the surface patch is the same as the pavement and forms a close bond with the adjoining old material. Such patches can be laid so that they are almost invisible after they have been subjected to traffic for a short time providing there is no settlement of the foundation. The same thing is true of a patch in granite block pavement and in both cases the patches can be opened to traffic almost as soon as they have been completed which is a very important consideration when dealing with streets where there is considerable traffic congestion."

Mr. Smith might have made a further illustration showing the adaptibility of the asphaltic types of pavement as a covering for wellpacked gravel and macadam roads which need hard surfacing to prevent their destruction [illegible] there are thousands of miles of such roads that offer suitable base for waterproof and shock-absorbing [illegible] character [illegible] western states has saved taxpayers millions of dollars and has permitted many paved roads which would not otherwise have been secured.

ANOTHER DISASTER

Tragedy in the form of a tornado followed by fires, has again been visiting upon a portion of our country. Parts of four states have been visited with death, destruction and ruin, entailing a loss of a thousand human lives besides hundreds of millions of dollars in property [illegible] entire nation joins in extending the heartfelt sympathy to the stricken communities and their desolated people. The American Red Cross, so indispensible in peace as well as war, was first to commence the work of relief and is devoting every energy to alleviate the suffering of thousands of homeless, helpless maimed and destitute. Such a calamity brings into bold relief the humanitarian service and generosity of our American people and institutions.

AFRAID OF THE BANKS

According to the U. S. Treasury more than $415,000,000 of lawful money that ought to be [illegible] disappeared—spirited away in old stockings, jars, mattress corners and secret hiding places.

Mr. McCoy, the treasury actuary, produces evidence to show that there are about 8,000 misers in the United States holding a total of $14,000,000. He estimates that toy savings banks in the home [illegible] that about 50,000 [illegible] about $75.00 each, or [illegible]

He estimates [illegible] hoard there earnings, thus accounting for $225,000,000. Of gold coin there [illegible] per capita representing outstanding gold certificates but at least $7,000,000 in silver is hoarded in this manner.

SPECULATIONS IN FOOD PRODUTS

Wheat and food speculator gives very little attention to the proposed investigation by the government of the causes of violent fluctuations prices. They assert that this business is just as legitimate as speculations in oil, gasoline, railroads, coal or any other commodity and perhaps they are correct. The cornering of necessaries of life, however, for the purpose of controlling prices contrary to the law of supply and demand, savors of conspiracy to "filch" from the people, and in as much as it is conducted within the law, is becomes what is termed a "legal steal."

Just now the control of the food supply of the nation seems to have centered in Florida where a combination of wealthy speculators have assembled there [illegible] for this condition—for any law that will meet the necessities will also out [illegible] of the business of Wall Street.

Two people were badly hurt in a St. Louis taxi the other day when the driver thought a girl on the sidewalk looked better than the road.

Women are an unfortunate lot. No matter what their station in life or how many changes of dress they have they never have anything "fit to wear."

Our advice to all young men is to keep in mind the fact that you never get ahead of anyone so long as you follow in their footsteps.

The average Clanton man may think his neighbors dull, but they can tell the difference between a social caller and a collector.

If they sent ever autoist to jail for not knowing his license tag number where would they find a jail big enough to hold them?

Music is getting so you can't tell if the neighbors are playing the phonograph, fighting, crying or washing the dishes.

It's pretty hard to understand some Clanton women's tastes when you see the kind of husbands they are jealous about.

Why is it that every girl imagines she can reform some dissipated, no-account [illegible] to do it?

[illegible] man falls in love very hard he naturally breaks something, even if it's only himself.

New Millinery Store Opened at Jemison

Mrs. E. E. Smith, Birmingham, has opened up a new millinery store at Jemison, and with a very atractive display of spring millinery, she expects to attract the trade of many of her friends. Mrs. Smith needs no introduction to the public in her part of Chilton county, as she was reared at Jemison, and her husband, Mr. Ephram Smith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] Smith, of near Clanton. He was [illegible] but for some time they have been making their home in Birmingham.

Mrs. Smith deals exclusively in millinery and her millinery display would do credit to a town much larger than Jemison.

She has just returned from New York city with her new stock.

THE LIFE IDEAL

Doctors Neighbors and Allred with their families have been enjoying several days out in camp.

These gentlemen spent each day attending to their business affairs at home, returning to the camp at night to enjoy the peace and quiet fishing (?) that might be afforded.

After camp was broken up all expressed the utmost satisfaction over the time that had been happily spent.

Methodist Revival Drawing Large Crowds Daily

Special Service for Friday and Sunday. Dr. Glenn of Georgia, in Charge

Clanton is in the midst of one of the greatest series of revival meetings in its history. Dr. J. M. Glenn, presiding elder of the Dublin, Ga., district, is doing the preaching in a very earnest and telling manner. His messages are of the convincing type, and there is no doubt but that great good will be the outcome.

Miss Ruth Harris, who is leading the singing during the meeting, was formerly an instructor in music in Western University, but gave up this work to enter the evangelistic field. Her music is proving of great interest, and is adding much to the success of the meeting. Her solos are indeed a rare treat for the large audiences who are present at each service.

Dr. Glenn arrived Monday evening, and since that time he has been preaching the doctrine of the lowly Nazarene with such eloquence and earnestness, that Christian and non-Christian have become thoroughly aroused as to their soul salvation. The success of the meeting spiritually is already assured, all churches lending their aid and assisting the Methodist congregation in "spreading the tidings of great joy" to a long lost world.

The following services of special importance have been announced for the next few days, and Dr. Glenn urges upon all who can possibly do so to hear these sermons:

Friday, 7:30 p. m.—"The Devil's Bid for the Young People of Clanton."

This is an appeal to the highest and best in the young live of today and should be heard by every young person in and around Clanton.

Sunday, 11 a. m.: "The Immortality of the Soul."

This is an Easter message full of inspiration and incentive to the cultivation of the spiritual and eternal values of life. You cannot afford to miss it.

Sunday, 3:30 p. m.—"Sowing and Reaping."

This is a message to men only, and boys under 12 years of age will not be admitted. A prominent business man of Georgia said after hearing it: "I would give a thousand dollars if I had heard it when I was a boy." Every boy in this country should hear it."

Monday, 3:30 p. m.—"A Great Woman."

This is a challenge to a higher and better life upon the part of the women and girls of today. Girls under twelve years of age not admitted.

This sermon has received the highest endorsement of the press, the pulpit, the schools and the good women of the country. It has never been delivered except to packed houses; and the women and girls of Clanton and surrounding country will doubtless throng the Methodist church Monday afternoon. In it Dr. Glenn deals with the most sacred things in the life of a woman in language so chaste that none can take offense. Dr. Ellison, presiding elder of the Montgomery district of the Methodist church, said of it: "It is an inspiration for the time to which we live. Preach it everywhere you can."

At the eleven o'clock service Sunday morning, the Knights Templars of Clanton will be honor guests, and special courtesies will be extended. This is annual custom of Templars everywhere to attend a local church in a body on Easter. They will appear in full regalia.

HISTORY OF THE TOWN OF CLANTON

(By Vivian Gray.)

Clanton was first settled in 1871, the same year Birmingham was first settled, and is now 54 years old. It was named after General Clanton, who distinguished himself in the war between the states. Lomax was Clanton's first depot, goods being hauled from there, as this was a flag station.

The railroad was graded before the war, then called the North and South Alabama, and was finished in 1870.

The first courthouse, built some distance from here, was burned down and rebuilt in Clanton in 1872-1873, after the railroad had been finished, with Mordicai Robinson as Probate Judge. This was torn down and rebuilt in 1890, while H. C. Cullen was judge, who served for 8 years. He was replaced by a brick building during the term of Mr. Honeycutt, who became judge after Mr. Cullen. This brick building was burned during Judge Reynold's term, and the present one built at an expense of $70,000.

Mr. Alfred Baker was the first merchant of Clanton, beginning in 1871. He was also the first representative from Chilton county. Other merchants were the Gullahorns and Captain John Hanna.

Dr. Stewart and John Hanna were the leaders in building the first school house.

The first Baptist church was built in 1872 by J. A. Mullins, pastor. The first Methodist church was built in 1874 with O. A. Duke as one of the leaders.

The town was incorporated in 1890 with W. L. Sampey as mayor.

E. Y. McMorris built the first high school in 1893 which he served as a teacher for several years. This school building was removed and W. C. Robinson's lumber yard occupies the ground.

The first hotel was built on the site occupied by Upchurch Drug Co. by a Mr. Baker, the second by a Thornton and still stands on second avenue. Next Mr. Wm. Wilson built a hotel on the lot occupied by the present Wilson hotel. This was burned and the present Wilson hotel was built by Wm. Wilson, Jr.

About the year 1910, Clanton seemed to put on new life. Since that time the then old field has been filled by the section called "Gowan Addition," county high school, Exchange hotel, and many stone and brick buildings occupied by stores and shops. It is safe to say that within the last 15 years Clanton's population has more than quadrupled, trade has increased many fold, her schools have kept pace with population and the churches, consisting of 4 denominations, have changed from the $300 type of 1872-4 to the present Baptist costing $35,000, and the Methodist costing when completed, $50,000.

High School Opens Season With Lanier

Games in Clanton Friday and Saturday. Big Attendance Expected

Wham! Bang!

Baseball tomorrow!

Clanton High vs. Lanier!

On Friday and Saturday afternoons the Lanier high school of Montgomery, will be in Clanton to play the Chilton county high school, in what promises to be one of the most interesting series of games ever played on the Clanton diamond.

It will be remembered that the local team went to Montgomery a few weeks ago and run rough-shod over this crack outfit, winning the first game in 12 innings, the second in 11 innings, and tied the other, one and one. But this is no criterion for the two games here. Lanier is one of the very best teams in the state, and Hayes, Vann and Ruffin and all the other boys will have to be on their toes to bring victory here.

Interest at the high school is running high, the game is well advertised, and a monster crowd is expected to be present when the umpire says "Play Ball."

The Clanton high team this year is possibly the best that has ever represented the local high school, and the people of the county should give the boys a hand and send out when they line up for the game afternoon.

BIG TREES REMOVED FROM TOWN STREETS

There is a great deal of change being made in the streets of Clanton by a force of men under the supervision of Mr. [illegible] Reed and an engineer. A number of the [illegible] which have stood in the streets and on the sidewalks are being removed so as to beautify the streets and make Clanton put on the appearance of a city.

Much sentiment is attached to these old landmarks, but in the making of a city there are certain things to be done [illegible] to many, [illegible] that have sheltered some of our men and women in the spring time of life, when they played beneath their swaying branches and while away the flitting hours, which brought pleasure and gladness to their yearning hearts.

RADIO STATION W. O. R.

Roberta Curry gave her radio program of southern songs and old time melodies from the the broadcasting staton WOR in Newark on Saturday evening, but Clanton admirers failed to catch the words. Mr. Boutelle went into rapture as he echoed "Arommunies Roberta Curry"—just a fragment of the announcement.

Shelby Sheriff And Son Fist Fight With "Tigers"

Columbiana, April 6.---Sheriff J. J. Falkner and his son, Deputy C. J. Falkner, engaged in a battle yesterday with alleged bootleggers in the northern part of Shelby county as a result of which the sheriff sustained a twisted leg and Andrew Falser was arrested on a charge of resisting an officer and violating the prohibition law

According to information here, the officers attempted to arrest Andrew and Horace Falser. A rough and tumble fist fight occurred. The son captured Andrew Falser, but Horace Falser escaped but not until after a shot had been fired at him by the sheriff. The Falsers are said to have had a fruit jar filled with liquor in their possession, which they poured out when they saw the officers coming.

Four or five other residents of the neighborhood are said to have witnessed the fight.

Andrew Falser was brought to jail here, but was released later under $500 bond in the liquor case and $300 on the charge of resisting an officer.

Sheriff Falkner when seen today said that he was slightly hurt and that he did not consider the occurence of any consequence.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation for the kindness, sympathy, and the beautiful floral offering of our friends during the sickness, death and burial of our dear wife and mother.

J. W. Beasley and family.

Your attention is called to the annual ruthless destruction of our Southern evergreens and beautiful wild flowers. Now that the time is near when our woodlands will be a bower of beauty with their fragrant bud and blossom. Every person is requested to be a vigilant committee of one to see that the extravagant waste of this kind is stopped. Let our slogan be: "Spare the bud and save the bush."

Conservation Committee,

Mrs. Hayes, President.

SMOKELESS INDUSTRIES

A recent report by the U. S. Bureau of Mines places the annual loss caused by smoke in industrial centers at $7.66 per capita, and the Smoke Abatement Commission, after detailed analysis of conditions in Chicago, puts that city's yearly smoke loss at more than $42,000,000. To this is added the human loss due to injured health and resulting deaths.

Similar reports from Pittsburg, Philadelphia and other cities show the national danger and waste caused by smoke.

Gas and coke, both smokeless fuels, must be substituted for soft coal to produce a pure and healthy atmosphere,and their use will make possible the saving of valuable by products of coal combustion that are now wasted and whose value amounts to hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

OUR COURTS

Chilton county has just finished a two weeks session of its opening term [illegible] business was transacted and justice was had, according to the juries upon whose shoulders the responsibility lay.

It is a very irksome duty to sit in judgement between your fellowmen, and when [illegible] that position, the average man should have, in his heart, nothing but the purest of thoughts between the parties involved. Of course he is sworn to weigh the evidence, and we believe most juries do, but there are times when the evidence is not sufficient, especially in civil cases and it is doubly hard on the juror to find a verdict in his mind that will be just to both parties.

We have always held to the opinion that it is harder to serve as a juror in a criminal case than where a civil question is involved. But there is the added duty of maybe taking the liberty of your fellown [illegible] from him for a period of time; the taking him away from his home, his family and out of [illegible]

We were much interested last Friday afternoon after court adjourned when a state truck [illegible] took six or eight prisoners away to begin serving their terms. The [illegible] and men who looked to be well cared and under better conditions, were the ones who were charged with the worst crimes and received the heavier sentences. They didn't look to be criminals, yet by their acts they had proven themselves such in the eyes of the law.

This brings us to the point we wish to make. Wouldn't it be good if all persons, regardless of how high or how low, rich or poor, saint or sinner could stay within the bounds of the law. If, in other words, we people would realize and accept the fact that without our laws, organized government could not exist.

Of course, some laws are offensive to some people. Many laws are on our statute books that should not be there, but it behooves everyone when the law is put there to observe it and respect it, and anyone who doesn't do this and who repeatedly assails it leads not only his friends, but those closest to him, to break the law and suffer the consequences.

In attending court during criminal week, you will find that a big majority of the cases are for violation of the liquor laws. And the cause of this is that it is so much discussed adversely by those who have always been against regulating the liquor traffic, that their natural demeanor leads men to tempt the law, to take chances with violations, and those who are at the root of the evil and whom the law doesn't reach, is the buyer. The maker and the seller are urged on by those who have no other purpose than to see it so flagrantly violated that decent people would move to have it taken off the books.

But still deeper behind the screen lies the influence of some of the larger newspapers of the country who have so consistently been controlled by the brewery interests, that they can't write their news stories in an unprejudiced manner. We don't have to leave Alabama to find this condition, and it is a pity that when a law is passed that at least all newspapers will not lend their support in the strict observance of [illegible]

Strict enforcement of all laws is the backbone of organized governmen and the press of the country should be united as one in this work.

Chilton county farmers are getting things in shapefor the coming season We are with you boys. Here's for bountiful harvest.

Peach is no name for milady when she crosses the threshold Easter Sunday.

The first rose of summer is about to bloom.

"My, don't that girl look stunning in that new frock?"

True to nature, we say.

Methodist Revival Will Continue Throug Next Sunday

Dr Glenn Dellvering Soul Stirring Message Each Day

The revival series of meetings which have been conducted at the Methodist church for the past ten days continue with much interest. Dr. J M. Glenn of Dublin, Ga., who is conducting the meeting, is delivering some fine gospel messages. The people of this district should rally to the remaining services.

On last Sunday Dr. Glenn put in a hard day's work. At 9:45 he delivered a sermon to the Sunday school of the Methodist church. At 11 o'clock his sermon was to a full house, the Knights Templars being a special guest for the Easter service. At 3:30 in the afternoon Dr. Glenn talked to a good congregation of men and boys on the biblical subject of "Sowing and Reaping." In this sermon the speaker appealed for a clean life and the sermon should have been heard by every man and boy in this community. Several from Verbena and other places in the county were present at this service.

The last service for Sunday was an eloquent address on the second coming of Christ and an exhortation to his hearers to be ready for that time.

On Monday afternoon Dr. Glenn preached to the women and girls, and delivered another earnest appeal for a better life. The speaker's messages are eloquent messages direct from the Bible and his hearers are being spiritually revived by his masterful appeals.

Dr. Glenn delivered a sermon to the business men at 10 o'clock each morning to good congregation.

All churches of Clanton are entering into these services and are deriving much good from them. It is regretted that larger audiences are not hearing this man of God in his exemplication of the plan of salvation to lost souls. This is an earnest appeal to everybody to attend the few remaining services and receive a blessing from them.

At the last minute Wetumpka high cancelled, or rather failed to carry out the agreement to play in Clanton F. [illegible] and two time [illegible] runs. Wetumpka had agreed to $25 if they failed to appear, and Clanton will not feel kindly toward them for not keeping their word. fans are in for possibly better games under the new arrangement.

Lanier came they saw and they conquered!

The above sentence tells the story of the three game series played on the local diamond last Friday and Saturday, by Lanier high school of Montgomery, and Chilton high. The visitors took the double header Saturday and the local boys won the opening game Friday 7 to 3.

In Friday's game, Lanier got away to a lead, but the school boys of Clanton were not long in overtaking their rivals, and before the ninth inning was over had outstripped their rivals

Fielding by Littlejohn was one of the features of this game, although Hayes contributed a nice stop and throw. J. Jones did stellar work with the willow. In the seventh inning after one was down on a fine catch by J. Jones, Carroll hits one to right field which Littlejohn takes after a hard run. Kirtland singles and Raminsky gets on by [illegible]. With two on and two down, [illegible] again drawed the applause of his inning by racing over to the fence and pulling down a liner that was good for two bases and two runs

Both Vann and Snyder were hit

The two games Saturday were hit and run affairs, and while the local team continually threatened, they never got close enough to make a dash for the games. Some sensational batting was done by both sides, several balls being placed over the right field wall. Mullins in left and Littlejohn in right contributed some spectacular fielding. Hayes at short also did some fancy fielding, but the jinx still pursued.

The Lanier team is a clean manly set of boys and are always welcome at [illegible]

MARBURY LOSES 2-22 WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON

RADIO, SOCIALLY, IS VERY CONSTRUCTIVE

Any who will take time to study and tink about the present statue of broadcasting will come to the conclusion that it can have only a constructive and invigorating influence in the American social structure.

Fear of a private or government monopoly in radio broadcasting is groundless, as it would be intolerable and equivalent to granting exclusive right in the air.

This would be vicious and unAmerican as a monopoly in sailing the seas or navigating a great river.

Secretary of Commerce Hoover says cooperation within the ranks of the industry and a free and open competition are better than federal regulation. "Similarly, in the case of the radio, the standard of taste among broadcasters constantly improves to match the rising tide of a demand for good music, for addresses worth listing to, for subject matter that appeals to the mind when the voice has no picture for its auxiliary. For the listener has the remedy in his own hands, and with aturn of the wrist will put himself beyond so-called entertainer who sights his opprotunity and insults the listerners intelligence."

Lesson for April 12

THE CRIPPLE AT THE BEAUTIFUL GATE

LESSON TEXT—Acts 3.
GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the Lord that healeth thee."—Ex. 15:26.
PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Lame Man.
JUNIOR TOPIC—The Care of a Cripple.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Care of a Cripple and Its Results.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Church's Ministry to Body and Soul.

The indications are that some months had elapsed since Pentecost. The believers were being taught by the apostles who were showing their credentials by their mighty works (Acts 2:43).

I. The Lame Man Healed (v. 1-11).

1. The Occasion (v. 1).

Peter and John were going to the house of worship. They were friends who were mutual complements—each having that which the other lacked. This fellowship was according to the Lord's own arrangment and was most fitting. They were going up to Jerusalem to worship, though they knew full well the corruption of Judaism.

2. The Place (v. 2).

It was at the gate which leads from the outer to the inner court of the temple. It was called beautiful because of its magnificent bronze doors. This man was placed at the entrance to the place of worship because when a man comes closest to God he also comes closest to his fellowmen.

3. The Man (vv. 2-3).

This beggar was infirm from his birth. He was a familiar figure, known by the people for years. When he saw Peter and John he asked alms.

4. The Method (vv. 4-8).

(1) Gained the Man's Attention (v. 4). Peter and John commanded him to look on them. The sinner's attention must be secured before Christ can heal him. Having secured his attention they gave him more than he asked or expected. He asked for money and got healing.

(2) Peter Commanded Him in the Name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth to rise up and walk (v. 6). This was the very thing he was unable to do for so many years. Was not this mocking his very impoteney? No! No! for it was in the name of Jesus. With the command went the ability to do.

(3) Peter Took Him by the Right Hand (v. 7). This act was meant to give impetus to his faith, not strength to his ankles.

5. The Man's Response (v. 8).

Strength came to his feet and ankle bones at once. He stood; he walked; he leaped and shouted praises to God. He thoroughly advertised the miracle. He ascribed the honor to God for his healing, and walked into the house of God.

6. The Effect (vv. 9-11).

The people were filled with wonder and amazement. The multitude ran together to see this remarkable thing. There was no question as to the genuineness of the miracle for this man had been a familiar figure for many years. It was evident that something supernatural had occurred.

(1) The helpless beggar had to be carried to the temple gate. Men and women out of Christ are spiritually helpless. We should bring sinners to Christ.

(2) Taking him by the hand shows the manner of Christian help. Ministers of Christ may not have silver or gold, but have something infinitely better to give.

II. Peter Witnessed of Jesus Before the Multitude (vv. 12-26).

This miracle focused the attention of the people upon Peter and John. Peter immediately turned their attention from himself to Christ. Peter seized the opportunity to present Christ to the people who had assembled. He told them that it was by faith in Jesus Christ whom the God of their fathers had glorified, whom they had delivered up and denied before Pilate when he desired to set Him free, and had desired a murderer to be granted to them instead. He showed that the disciples were also witnesses that God had raised Jesus from the dead, and charged home upon them their awful guilt; for they had denied the Holy one and chosen Barabbas, a murderer, instead of Christ, and even killed the Prince of Life. Despite their crime he appealed to them to repent (v. 19). Since they had committed this awful crime in ignorance, God would pardon their sin if they would repent, and he assured them that they should yet enjoy refreshing seasons from the Lord when God would send back Jesus Christ to earth to consummate the work of redemption.

ADVANCING SMALL TOWNS

—o—

"Our small towns are being reborn. Electrical power is doing it—power of all servants of society.' It is starting long idle factory wheels, building new plants, bringing better roads, higher wages and a better way of life. High tension wires are putting the pleasant, happy small town of American tradition on its feet—to stay."

Commenting on that editorial, the Dixon Tribune says:

"Collier's is right. The small town is as well lighted as the city. It has the same advantageous power connection for manufacturing as the city. There was a time when the mill or factory seeking to utilize water power had to build its wheels on the site of stream—today the mill may be two or three hundred miles away. Give advantagous shipping facilities, small towns are now attractive to manufacturers because of less valuable sites, cheaper rents and less temptations for employes."

One more thought should be added to the foregoing comment. Advocates of public ownership have been attempting to show that state or government development of electric utilities is necessary to give the people service. No more misleading or erroneous statement could be made. So-called super-power projects, which are glibly talked about by politicians, are mere word phrases to catch the public fancy.

Long transmission lines stretched for hundreds of miles to small towns and farms far distant from the source of power, would not be a fact today and in common use if private utilities had not perfected so-called super power systems though interconnection of transmission-line resources and development of great hydro-electric and steam plants, long before the politicians ever invented the words supper power.

It is only fair to give industry credit for what it has done and not allow the political advocates of government ownership of industry to misrepresent or minimize results which have already been accomplished.

ARE YOU DOING YOUR PART

—o—

The development of electricity and the automobile have furnished engineers with many problems connected with safeguarding life and property. Electricity and the automobile are two of the greatest servants of mankind today. In spite of the unlimited power which these agencies represent, their application to the affairs of everyday life has been made so simple that their use is almost as universal and safe in the United States as is the family coffee pot. This condition of affairs has not developed accidentally. It has all been part of the life work of thousands of engineers and inventors.

Nowhere can one gain as vivid an impression of the testing work being done on all sorts of modern appliances to make them safe for the use of mankind as at the Underwriters' Laboratories in Chicago. At this remarkable institution, thousands of appliances are brought in every year by manufacturers who wish to have trained engineers find any possible flaws in the product which they plan to sell to the public. The tests carried on at the Laboratories have saved millions of dollars of property loss through finding imperfections in articles and corrections for the same, previous to their general manufacture and sale to the public.

Thus is the insurance business and industry doing more than its part to cut down the national fire and accident loss. If the public, in whose interest these tests are carried on, would do half as much, the saving in the thousands of lives lost annually by fire and accident and in the annual destruction of hundreds of millions of dollars worth of property would be astounding

MORE EVIDENCE

If you want to find opinion divided ask a number of Clanton men if they think the auto is putting the horse out of business. You will find them arguing on both sides of the question. But here comes new evidence to support those who contend that the auto is supplanting the horse—the U. S. Steel Corporation has quit manufacturing steel to be used in horse-shoes. The big corporation says that the demand for this kind of steel has declined to about 18,000 tons a and that it does not pay them to tie up part of their plant making this class of steel in such a small quantity when they could be making railroad or building steel at better prices. They intimate that delivery trucks are fast taking the place of the horse, and more and more from the farms and few less horseshoes, the demand and less from the cities and towns. We are not taking sides in the argument, however, because we want to go right on believing that the faithful old horse is going to be with us, and useful to us, for all time to

OLD FASHIONED REMEDY

For just about 20 years Clanton parents have been tring to bring up their children by scientific methods, by influence-in-the home methods by hygienic methods and by the keep-busy methods. They have coaxed, preached promised and rewarded their young offspring but seemingly only to find a little later on that their methods were not bearing the fruit they hoped for. So now, for their benefit, we want to offer a suggestion on raising children as given out by Dr. Rudolph Binder, a teacher in New York University and a practical man. He told a New York newspaper the other day exactly how to bring up children, and what is lacking in the present day-methods. And his suggestion is simply this: "Forget all these fangled methods and theories and when a child is in need of a spanking—see that it gets it and gets a good one."

The announced., platform of Mrs. Congressman Kahn, of California, is "just common sense." That might be understood on the Pacific coast but she'll have to make a diagram of it in Washington.

Life is full of happiness. Its not difficult to find it and redistribute it

THE WOODS ARE FULL OF GOOD MEN

—o—

If there ever was a time when there were more bad men than good, it is not now, and it probably never was, for nature will not allow the positive to be overcome by the negative, the good by the bad, light by darkness, heat by cold, life by death.

The tug-of-war between right and wrong grows fierce at times, but there is never a question as to the right ultimately succeeding. It may get the worst of it for a time, but not for long and certainly not forever.

In spite of the impression that there are more bad people than good ones for all emergencies. Of course there is business for more good ones, but there is a good one for every good and sensible woman.

One reason why so many women pick up bad sticks is because they don't know good ones. They are looking for snug, smooth, pretty ones And instead of searching in the open wood they seek for them in hot house pretty groves ad show places.

Instead of looking for those who come up in open, battling successfully for existence, and grew into hardy men, they look for the dainty, trim natty fellows who grow beneath protecting roofs, behind plate glass and under care of well- paid nurserymen. These are nice to look upon, their fine manners are agreable and their attentions are most pleasing.

Alongside of these the sturdier sons of nature look rough and rugged. Their strong hands are coarser, their sure feet larger, and their manner less dainty.

But, mind you, the grasp of their strong hand is more assuring, their standing firmer and their manner more determined.

There are plenty who are waiting to be found. But they are not much given to full dress, champagne suppers and petting parties.

Under the laws of Alabama a dog is property for injury to which damages may be recovered, but it is not the subject of larceny.

The first organizedeffort to protect the game and fish of the state was contained in the establishment of the department of game and fish in 1907. As early as 1819, however, the legislature prohibited the erection of fish dams on water courses whereby the entire stream would be obstructed.

Mineral Springs Pupils Show Talent on Educational Lines

Pupils of Mineral Springs school, of which Prof. R. B. Johnson of Jemison is principal, shows much talent and a source of information along the line of educational and the ability to apply that knowledge in writing.

Following are two compositions from two pupils of that school on the theme "The True Value of an Education and My Opportunities for securing the Same."

—o—

(Gladys Dobbs, 7th Grade)

To be counted in the modern world and recognized in the halls of fame, the civilized man requires an education. To locate a good position and hold it, to mingle in the best of society and to maintain and uphold the rights of good citizenship one must be efficiently trained. for no person without thorough training can render his or her best works to others. To have an education and fail to direct it rightly, no one, not even yourself can know the real value of it. The well known farmer who is blinded by the lack of an education may never merit the real worth of active training. When a person is seized with illness they need a physician who is educated and skillfully trained in order to administer the proper treatment and care.

Then again people naturally desire to listen to an educated person in all forms off service, one who is trained to express themselves in an apt and interesting style, and in order ta do such one must be intelligently informed and trained. We need educated men back of the plow that have the knowledge of planting, harvesting and marketing in order that they may secure the best results of their work.

Then when war is raging we need thoroughly trained and efficient men to direct and lead the mighty armies. To declare war and to bring peace to all the world requires a person with skill, knowledge, wisdom and training and to have these wonderful qualities one must be educated.

The world of today calls for educated men and women; in factories, on railroads, in government and in all the other various enterprises to help carry on the world's work.

An un-educated person has no showing in the best places of work. They must content themselves by working at odd jobs with no chances for advancement. They hold no rank in society, hence, they must step back and yield to the enlightened, when if they had been educated to modern ideals they would rise to prominence in all social affairs,

And again very little pleasure comes to the un-educated man or women for working at hard laborious work there is usually small pay, and this means that they must work day after day to supply the family needs, so little time and still less means, cannot possibly afford much joy and pleasure, but if the person were educated they no doubt would be in good standing financially, and socially.

Some of my opportunities for procuring an education are as follows:

The modern school building is equipped with patent desks thus making it much more comfortable and pleasing to work, and every one know that no child can do his or her best works while sitting in an uncomfortable position, then our school building is well lighted, properly hegted and conveniently located. All this has a tendency to arouse the keen interest of a child and make them much more desirious of an education. Then we have better trained teachers to instruct us than formerly. The present-day teacher has enough civic pride and community interests to want to up build the community and uphold the welfare of others.

The modern schools are much better equipped with labratories, libraries and other much needed facilities. This you see gives the boy and girl a better chance to fit themselves for some line of work, such as manuel arts, music, journalism and any other vocation in which they might wish to enter.

The day has arrived when most every parent sees the direct need of giving their children an education, the result being that our community, our town, our state and our country at large is making great strides of progress in every phase of work and is more and more becoming the leading nation on the globe in wealth, in health, in strength, in resourcefulness and above all in christianity, all because the people have determined to make it so; by setting up the great standard which is education and giving their children the benefit of it.

(Mattie Hilyer, 7th Grade.)

At the present time education is the most valuable and most essential thing a person may have except good health. But to have the very best of health a person must be educated to the facts of preserving their health.

Money, fine mansions, fine animals and other worldly goods would mean little to the person without a practical education, for in order to make these things count and be of worth-whileness to humanity one must be educated to make the best uses of such. An education solves many of lifes difficult problems. It helps in building a home, it helps in supplying the needs of the home, it helps in making the home life pleasant and ideal in every way, it protects people from treachery and deception, it gives one a broader outlook on life, it fits one to render better service to mankind, it helps to enforce our laws, it aids us in securing our places in the worlds work, and in the meantime gives us a deeper appreciation of what life really is.

Our great government has positions awaiting the man and woman with an education and proper training, hile a person without this education is incapable of fulfilling the duties enacted.

Without an education people are unable to do the best for each. Education helps people to think and act intelligently upon the questions that deals with their life. It givves them knowledges of their duties and aids them in the performance of such. How many of the criminals in our prisons are educated? Only 1.5 per cent. These are there because their nature and heritage put them there and not the training they received at school. Many people have escaped the horrible tradegy of being placed in jail because they had the opportunities and ambition to get an education which led them to enter into some usefull work and not idle their time on the streets, associating with a vile, wicked band of boys. This foregoing statement has been the foundation of many boys landing in the penitentiary.

An education helps boys and girls to become better men and women. It helps them to perceive the right from the wrong. So to become better citizens, more cultured and refined, more worthy of life, more aspirant and more zealous we must have the essentials of an education, which if we were without, our laws could not be made, our lives would be unsafe, our homes would be neglected and finally destroyed and our civilization would dwindle back iinto the savage state

My opportunities for having aneducation are very great. We now have better equipped schools than we had a few years ago. America is now a land affording wonderful opportunities to the boy or girl that wants an education.

We have good colleges and universities, so nothing lies in the way of a boy or girl who really desires an education. Some of these schools offer work to young men and young women who haven't the necessary funds to pay their expenses in order that both the rich and the poor may obtain a training for life. Then we have the consolidated schools which affords a truck to carry the pupils in the rural districts to the better equipped schools in the city. We have more competent and better trained teachers than we formerly had. So we boys and girls of modern times have a great many more advantages in getting an education than our parents and fore-fathers, so may each young man and young woman resolve to train themselves for service by going to school and applying themselves earnestly and diligently to the work and tasks.

"Training of Children"

The following article was written by Mrs. Van Derveer and read before the Ladies Aid Society at their fifth Sunday meeting.

(Mrs. John Van Derveer)

In assigning the subject of "Training of Children" to me it was suggested that I take as an examples the lives of Jochebed and Hanna,so first let us see what influence the teachings of Jochebed had on the lives of God's people.

In Hebrews 11-v24, we read: "By Faith, When He was Come to Years, refused to be called the son of Pharoah's daughter." He refused the honor of being a prince. The honor of an Egyptian prince, the pomp and pagantry at arms and the splendid decorations of an Egyptian court, had no charms for Moses. Egypt, the far famed among the nations for its wealth and grandeur, that supplied the gold of Ophir, the wealth of the Omen of Sheeba, which stood first and foremost among the nations for its influence and power, found no place in the heart of Moses. Egypt at that time was at the very zenith of its glory. A powerful people dwelt in the valley of the Nile. Foreigners visited the country from all parts. Its attractions brought Caesar and Aristotle to her shores. Yet all these made no impression upon Moses.

Did he seek literary fame. He wrote the pentateuch, the most remarkable history ever written. Did he seek military glory? He might have led Egypt's grand army. Did he seek earthly riches? The wealth of Egypt lay unlocked at his feet.

And when did Moses make this renunciation? Was it in his youth when he was incapable of appreciating it? Was it in the time of old age when he was stripped of all power to enjoy it? It was neither in inexperienced youth nor decrepit old age, but it was "when he had come to years" when he had spent such time amid these scenes as to create a thirst for them. He chose affliction, and that too with the despised people of God

And what made Moses choose as he did? This verse in Hebrews tells us"by faith." Yet there must have been some one to instill into him the principles of faith-honor-and justice. Was it Pharoah's, daughter do you think, was it the Hebrew mother who, seeing that her child might be killed by the wicked king, contrived a way to save him and then devised a plan whereby she might be his nurse. Did she accept her responsibility lightly or did she realize that she had only a few short years to instill into that child lessons of faith, honor and justice that would fit him to meet all conditions of life. Did she fail in her mission or did she like you or me, feel too lightly the blessing that was bestowed on her when the little one came into her home.

Then let us take as another example for this afternoon the the lesson as taught by Hannah. I am afraid we do not find many Hannah's today but find just the opposite. We find mothers who accept motherhood as a burden and with the desire to get the children up and out of the way just as quickly as possible. But Hannah's desire that a son be given her was so great that even that Eli noticing her accused her of being drunk, but when Eli realized her earnestness he assured her that God would answer her prayer. And after the child Samuel was born into this home Hannah did not forget that she had dedicated him to God. It was her purpose to carry out,just as she had promised, her desire that the child "might appear before the Lord and there abide forever.

And the child Samuel did his part beyond what could have been expected from one of his years-for of him that seems to be spoken-He worshipped the Lord there.

Little children must learn to minister to the Lord, parents must train them up to it, and God will accept them,particularly let them learn to pay respect to their teachers as Samuel to Eli. None can begin too young to be religious. Those young people that serve God as well as they can, he will enable to improve, that they may serve him better. In Psalms 92 c. 13 v. we read, "Those that be planted in the house of the Lord shall flourish in the courts of our God."

What is said about Samuel in the 26 v of the 2 ch. of 1 Samuel. "And the child Samuel grew on, and was in favor both with the Lord, and also with men." You will also find in the 52 v. of the 2 ch. of St. Luke as regards our blessed Savior, "And Jesus increased in wisdom, and stature and in favor with God and man.

So let mothers realize what it means to ask God for the children that are sent to them, and then let them pray that they may dedicate not only the children's but their own lives to the Lord until in the end our boys and girls will not be ashamed to answer as did Samuel, "Speak Lord for thy servant heareth."

Mr. Herbert Hoover in speaking of the movement for Better Homes in America, says that "it is in the home that character and high ideals are best developed. The right kind of home-life makes for true success in life and means progress for the nation as a whole. To own a home, and to make it convient and attractive, a home where helth and pappiness, affection and loyalty prevail, brings out the best that lies in every member of the family.

The child's whole future, his health vigor, power of resistance, happiness and usefulness as a citizen, hinges on the care you give it during the first 15 years of his life. Every day of the year he must have right food. Next in importance comes fresh air, then cleanliness, cheerful surroundings and healthful amusements. Nothing is a greater mistake than to "wait until the child is older" to begin his training.

He should, when very young be taught the essential manners at table. Like a little reflection in a mirror he will imitate your chewing with your lips tight closed and should be rule, when very young, to sit at the table and behave properly. Children should be taught that sitting at the big table is a ceremony that brings the punishment of banishment to one whose manners are found wanting.

It takes time, of course, not only time but tremendous patience; but remember you cannot let a child's training "go for today." It will tumble out of sight like a ball bounding down hill.

It is the living example of a parent's own behavior that preaches the only real sermon to the heart and mind of a child.

We hear a great deal about the troubles of parents coping with the modern generation, but children of today, that is the little ones, are exactly the same material that they have always been, and if the parents of young girls who are "out of hand" would honestly search their memories, they would perhaps find they did not bother too much about keeping them in hand when little.

"In hand" does not mean in strict and unsympathetic control. It means treating them as reasoning beings; it means infinite love and unflagging patience to develop qualities of honor, proper pride and self- respect. When a child has been equipped with these weapons, he or she is apt to be fairly safe, even today.

Many parents think that when they have provided food and shelter and clothing and sent their children to school; when they have said, "don't Johnny" or "stop that, Mary" and "I forbid you to do this" and "I order you to dothat" they have nothing with which to reproach themselves. When in later years, John and Mary are uncontrollable strangers.

It has been said that to neglect youth is the greatest social sin. Then what a colossal failure our generation has been! A recent newspaper caption read: "Doctors operate on lad's head to make a better boy of him." That isn't where our fathers operated to make better boys and girls off us, and the twentieth-century fathers must face the fact that discipline without example is disaster.

What do we owe youth? First of all our time. What is Wall street, or bridge, when compared with the baby who reaches out two chubby hands to hold you longer? What are ten operas or a dozen social afternoons worth, if purchased at the expense of a lonely little girl or a heart-hungry little boy?

The old fourteen hour day, and the twenty-four-hour shift, and seven-day week are wicked things, for they make fathers strangers to their children. But there is another menace worse than these-the menace of the twenty-four-hour day; the twenty-four hour day that substitutes nurses and butlers for parents, and robs the cradle of the hand that moves the world.

We owe youth our comradeship, our understanding comradeship. The father who is not the pal of his son may be a millionaire, but he is a pauper and to be pitied. He may win a fortune, but he has already lost his pearl of great price. Parents must help each other.A mother must not spare herself to help a father to understand and be understood, and a father must do not less for the mother of his children. Eternal issues are at stake. The weal or the woe of the nations are involved, and the future of the Kingdom of God on earth.

Booth Tarkington says:

"The real blame for the present-day wildness of young folks rests with us—the older generation." And he concludes: "I am inclined to think that when our grandchildren, our children's children come, we may look for an improvement. Then fathers and mothers will begin to say—'Let's don't have them run the risks and get into the mischief that we did.' They will have seen the disastrous results of their parents' loose upbringing and, then of their own." At any rate, the change will come whenever parents become enough disgusted with themselves to set their hearts on working a desided improvement in themselves and in their offspring! And, remember, with adolescence the power of example is irresistible.

Christian parents face a serious responsibility as they look abroad and see the lack of sons and daughters from christian families dedicate their lives to the service of God as Jochebed taught Moses. As Hannah dedicated Samuel, as Elizabeth dedicated John, as Mary dedicated Jesus, so christian mothers should dedicate their sons to the minjistry of the Word, God will be honored through such dedication, and the earnest prayers and desires of parents who wish their sons and daughters to live the right kind of lives will be heard and answered in due time.

ALABAMA'S SCHOOL CHILD

The greatest recent advance in educational conditions of Alabama was made possible by the Legislature of 1915, when a constitutional amendment allowing three mills of county and three mills of local district taxation was submitted to the people. This school amendment was adopted by the voters the following year. All the counties have taken full advantage of the county tax law except two, which have levied only two mills of the possible three. A large part of the State is covered also by the local district taxes.

Without this school amendment it is hard to conceive what would have been the fate of the schools during the recent period of tremendous growth and improvement. All taxation allowed by previous laws would hardly have provided a two months term in many agricultural counties.

The Legislature of 1919 made a small increase in the State appropriation and added largely to school revenues by installing a tax system that greatly increased receipts from all revenue acts.

The Legislature of 1923, elected after a campaign featuring retrenchment and during a period of financial depression, passed no measures to meet the demand for school growth; and the general spirit of the year brought reductions of assessments and decreases in school money which wrecked ambitious educational plans in many counties. The gradual rise of property values in some centers has brought no adequate compensation for the loss, and has utterly failed to keep pace with the growth of public education as expressed in general interest and in school attendance.

Alabama's school child has grown out of his clothes. Only action by wise and interested lawmakers can provide the necessities.

ROADS FOR TAXPAYYERS

An authority on road construction says: "The tax bill will soon be the largest single item of general local and state taxation assessed against the average taxpayer. For this reason a study into scientific and economical methods of hard surfacing highways will require a minimum of maintenance expense is most important.

"It would be difficult to find a county with better paved roads or better kept roads than Marion county, Oregon. The taxpayers have had as business administration in that county which has not experimented with untried types of road paving. Well packed gravel and macadam roads were used as a base for a wearing surface of asphaltic concrete. Thus were past investments of the taxpayers in gravel and rock utilized to the fullest extent and many more miles of hard surface roads were built than would have otherwise been possible. Practical experience should be a guide when expending public funds."

Cereal Plant Locates in South

The location of a large breakfast food cereal corporation south of the Mason Dixon line is one of the more recent indications of the sweep of industry to the southward and one of merit by its untouched field.

The Health Food Corporation, which has chosen a very favorable location for its first plant at Muscle Shoals, in the very center of the southern field, is to manufacture a new preparation on which such experts as Dr. J. B. Gault have been at work for years, in an endeavor to place upon the market a breakfast cereal which would have medicinal value as well as food value. It was only recently, that Dr. Gault concluded his experiments with a food to be known as "Grano" and a coffee substitute known as "Jero." These preparations have been thoroughly tested and have been pronounced by food experts to equal in deliciousness and food value any similar foods upon the market, as well as to have a medicinal value which none of the preparations now upon the market have.

The new corporation has established the first unit of its plant at Florence, Ala., on the Tennessee river near Wilson dam and the plant is now in active operation.

The growth of the breakfast corporations established in the north have been marvelous, but the south up to the present time, has not been favored with the establishment of a plant of this kind. A broad field has been opened for this industry by the development of hydro-electric power in the south at low rates and by the opportunity of equipping new plants with electric ovens, more sanitary, more efficient, and more desirable than the system heretofore in use.

The new southern plant will be modern in the highest sense. Its foods will be made from the finest cereals prepared in a sanitary manner by the very latest scientific methods.

INEFFICIENT

Do you know—

That municipally owned power plant are far less efficient than privately owned plants?

There are 2,000 municipally owned plants and 3,000 privately owned plants in the United States. Yet actual figures show that the 2,000 municipaly plants generate only 4 per cent of the total amount of electricity used by American homes and American industries.

BAPTISTS HAVE BIG GAIN OTHER LANDS

FOREIGN MISSIONS SHOW LARGE RESULTS IN PAST TEN YEARS UNDER DR. LOVE.

TAKE OFFERINGS IN APRIL

Every Church and Individual Will Be Asked to Share in Supporting Enlarged Program.—All Interests Will Be Pushed.

No department of Southern Baptist work has shown greater progress in recent years than that of foreign missions.

Dr. J. F. Love, corresponding secretary of the Foreign Mission Board, located at Richmond, Va., is just completing ten years of service in that capacity, and the survey conducted by Dr. Allredge shows that during that time the receipts of the board have been $16,149,994.64, whereas the receipts for the entire 78 years of the board's history have been $24,915,704.86, showing that two-thirds of the total receipts of the board since its organization in 1845 have come in during Dr. Love's administration.

DR. J. F. LOVE
Secretary Baptist Foreign Mission Board

Results on Foreign Fields Large

Indicating the results which these larger receipts have made possible on the foreign fields, it is pointed out that whereas the Foreign Mission Board was operating in only seven countries ten years ago, it is now a work in seventeen countries, representing Europe, Asia, Africa, North and South America. In that brief period of time the number of foreign churches has grown from 380 to 1905, the number of mission stations other than churches from 43 to 308, number of baptisms per year from 5,262 to 13,866, members of the churches from 29,991 to 111,872, number of houses of worship from 248 to 819, number of Sunday schools from 542 to 1,511, pupils enrolled in the Sunday schools from 22,032 to 76,504, contributions by the foreign churches from $91,159.69 per year to $444,568, number of American missionaries on the field from 278 to 544, number of native Christian workers employed from 634 to 2,494, number of mission residences owned by the board from 66 to 129, number of mission schools from 339 to 860, number of pupils in these schools from 339 to 860, number of pupils in these schools from which 50 per cent of all the converts won by the missionaries come, from 9,376 to 35,106, number of American medical missionaries employed from 12 to 19, and number of medical treatments given per year from 74,829 to 284,422.

So extensive has become the foreign mission work, as well as that of home missions, state missions, Christian education, hospitals, orphanages and the work of ministerial relief fostered by Southern Baptists, that the denomination has grouped all these interests into one general program known as the 1925 Program of Southern Baptists, and all the 28,000 local white Baptist churches of the South are being asked to put on a budget that will adequately provide for all these causes, the budget to be raised through an every-member canvass of the churches every year.

Take Special Offerings in April

Inasmuch as a number of the churches have not yet completed their canvass and many churches which put it on did not enlist every member, the Headquarters Committee of the 1925 Program, in co-operation with the various state secretaries, is asking that Sunday, April 19, be observed as a day of special offerings in the churches for all the objects embraced in this general Program. Where a church holds its regular services on some other Sunday than April 19, that congregation is asked to observe the day of its regular worship with special offerings for these causes. By reason of the recent rapid expansion of all the general causes of the denomination, and to enable the boards and other agencies to discharge their heavy obligations, an effort is being made to raise a minimum of $4,000,000 in cash during the first four months of 1925. It is with a view to enlisting as nearly as possible every one of the 3,500,000 white Baptists of the South in this undertaking that the special offerings for the month of April were suggested.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

A BROTHER'S SISTER

Mimmie's brother was devoted to her even though he was eight years older than she was.

He used to let her play with him and with his friends a great deal.

It had snowed the night before. Mimmie had gone to sleep while the snowstorm had kept up steadily. It was wonderful the way it had kept on while the whole world, almost, had gone to sleep.

The last thing Mimmie had heard was the great fog horn which was just outside the harbor. The bell on the buoy which told ships where the bad rocks were had clanged steadily. For as the buoy tossed about on the waves the bell at the top of the buoy rang.

It had been a "blinding" snowstorm they had said the next day and the ships along the coast had had a hard time of it. But with the day came sunshine, and when Mimmie awoke she thought for a moment why she felt so very happy.

It was really annoying to feel so happy and not to know just why. But in a few moments she remembered. It was a Saturday and they had planned the night before to build a snow fort if the snow didn't turn into rain during the night.

Mimmie got up and shook off some of the snow which had fallen on the big elderdown quilt.

Her sleeping room was at the top of the house and it was very cold. Its windows looked out over the harbor and her bed was near the windows so that often patches of snow were on the quilt. But she loved it. She loved moving the hot-water bottle about so that it warmed the sheets, and sometimes when the water in the bottle had frozen down at the end of the bed she had had to leave it until she was dressed and it was melted so she could pour it out.

She went downstairs to her playroom to dress, for she only used this room for sleeping. Sometimes people didn't believe the water in a water bottle could freeze in one corner of the bed while Mimmie was quite warm in another part of it. But she had shown it to her family and they had told people it was so.

"Hurry up, Mim, we want to get started soon."

The boys—eight of them—arrived a little later, and at each end of the yard a splendid snow fort was built. In one was a little special, protected room, where Mimmie was to sit when the snow battle got too fast for her.

She Did Not Spoil Their Fun.

In this way they were not worried for fear she would be hurt, and she did not spoil their fun.

The battle was a furious one. The snowballs were large ones.

But after a time they became smaller, as they had to be made and remade after throwing, and now there was no time allowed for snowball-making.

The boys had been invited to stay for lunch, and after lunch they played for awhile with trains in the house. The rain had come and spoiled the snow. Mimmie played with the Uncle Tom's Cabin and Noah's ark which had belonged to her brother when he was young and which now they owned together.

He was too old to play with them, but they still stayed in his room, so they owned them together.

Mimmie liked big boys better than she did big girls. Big girls told her she was young for her age, which was not true. She knew that.

Big boys called her a tomboy, and that was a great compliment, she thought.

She knew that was true. Her brother had taught her to ride in the express cart so she could be dashed around corners and she could balance without letting the cart upset. All the boys thought it fine the way she could do this. And she could climb up and stand on her brother's shoulders, and when he got down on the floor she knew how to stand on his chest so as not to hurt him.

Very few, except those whose business it was to do this, knew how. She could steer a sled and turn somersaults on the bed. Her brother had taught her to do all these great things. She could vault a fence, too, and in an old tree she loved to climb he had made seats for her where she sat—high above the earth.

These were the things her brother and his friends had taught her to do. Big boys could really be so nice. Why did some children think otherwise? Because they were cry-babies Mimmie's brother said, but Mimmie knew it was because these big boys taught but did not tease.

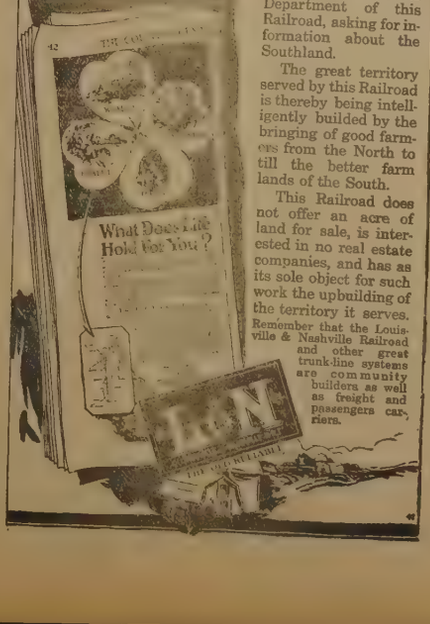
Mrs. Hayes, President



As the direct result of such advertising as is shown on the left, which is appearing in the larger farm, poultry and dairy journals of the Nation, more than 6,000 better-class farmers and cattlemen have written to the Immigration and Industrial Department of this Railroad, asking for information about the Southland.

The great territory served by this Railroad is thereby being intelligently builded by the bringing of good farmers from the North to till the better farm lands of the South.

This Railroad does not offer an acre of land for sale, is interested in no real estate companies, and has as its sole object for such work the upbuilding of the territory it serves.

Remember that the Louisville & Nashville Railroad and other great trunk-line systems are community builders as well as freight and passengers carriers.

ADA M. ATKINSON, Clerk of the Town of Clanton, Alabama.

Chevrolet Man Explains Function of Ammet

The ammeter, the least understood dial on the instrument board of a motor car, is in many ways the most important.

Few automobile owners, however, understand the story the ammeter tells as the miles fly by. The ammeter is the guardian of the whole electrical system of the car, particularly during extreme of winter cold and summer heat, and is connected to every bit of electrical appartus with the sole exception of the starting motor.

If you get acquainted with the ammeter it will tell you at a glance whether or not the whole system is functioning properly. I t will tell you if one of the headlights is out; it will tell you if there is a short circuit in the line; it will warn you in a moment if the generator fails to function. An understanding glance at the ammeter every 20 miles or so is a trouble saver of great importance.

When the motor is started, and everything is working properly, the little hand moves over to a certain spot on the charging side and there it invariably rests--varying in loction with the speed of the car--until something goes wrong with the electrical system. If one of the headlights goes out the ammeter shows a slight increase in the charging rate; if the generator fails to function for any reason, the hand swings away over to the discharge side and the driver knows that the whole load is being carried by the battery.

The ameter never shows the full flow of electricity that is flowing into or out of the battery, hence the importance of the tell-tale current indicator and its ability to tell what is going on all along the line.

The layman might ask why it is important to know the exact minute when the generator ceases to function as long as the car will keep on running with the current from the battery. One important reason is that if the generator fails due to broken leads in or outside, it should be given immediate attention or it will burn out and entail considerable [illegible]

If he also knew that a fully charged battery would turn his engine over for 15 minutes in summer, but for only 5 minutes or less when the temparature was at zero, the ammeter tip might also induce him to crank the car by hand and thus conserve the energy of the battery.

The generator is the whole source of supply of electric[illegible] and it keeps the entire system in operation but requires little, if any attention, from the driver. It is important to know the electrical output of the generator may be varied on Chevrolet cars, what is known as third brush adjustment, for the car consumes more electricity in cold weather than it does warm and the generator should be adjusted accordingly by one who is experienced in doing this kind of work.

It is easy to know when generator adjustment is required, for the battery will tell you all about it. Give your ammeter test every two weeks. If you find the battery full charged and requiring only a little distilled water everything is all right. If at the end of successive two week's period you find the battery persistently [illegible] either, it is an indication that the generator is supplying too much electricity and if allowed to continue will result in serious damage to the battery. If, on the other hand, you find the battery persistently undercharged the generator should be adjusted to supply more current.

It is important for the driver to follow instructions carefully when adjusting the gap on his spark plugs. A spark voltage is required to make the spark jump the gap and the wider the gap the higher the voltage. However, if the gap is widened the voltage is automatically increased, and if it goes too high enough will cause a failure in the ignition coil and will require a new one which is rather expensive.

Many drivers, and not a few mechanics, have found that an engine which will not run properly when idling, due to leaky valves or other [illegible] widened, but they are merely relieving the difficulty for a time at the expense of the electrical system, instead of finding the real cause of the trouble and correcting it at the source.

NOTICE

Lomax Citizens Trying to Get a Cotton Mill

Citizens Are Active In Effort to Land Factory

The little town of Lomax, just north of Clanton, has aroused itself to the extent of originating a movement for a cotton mill for that enterprising community.

The citizens of this community have enlisted the aid of several men who are working to get in touch with mills desiring to come south to locate in new fields.

In conversation with Mr. W. H. Killingsworth last Saturday the plans put forward by the progressive people of our neighboring community were outlined, and the Chilton County News is cooperating with them in finding a prospective mill.

Lomax people are not only willing to back a mill with their finance, but they offer a 60-acre site free of charge with sidetrack facilities and anything else that is neccessary to land an enterprise of this kind.

Not only the above do they offer but also, they will give a church site and a school site with as much ground as is needed.

Citizens are in touch with partie looking to the culmination of a deal for this manufacturing enterprise and they hope to be able to make a definite statement in the near future.

The Chilton County News congratulates these progressive people on their initiative, and pledges its full cooperation in putting over the deal.

"The Gypsy Rover" at High School Tonight

"The Gypsy Rover," a three act musical comedy will be the attraction at the high school audtorium Thursday evening, under the auspices of Circle No. 3 of Clanton Baptist church.

This is said to be one of the most interesting comedies yet staged, and being directed by Mrs. W. L. Longshore, whom all Clanton loves, bboth for her personal charm and her ability in this line of work, a crowded house is anticipated. Mrs. Longshore was formerly music directior in Clanton school and is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellis.

And aside from the splendid play, the local ladies of Circle Three will participate in the proceeds.

A short synopsis of the play, which follows gives some insight into the play:

The Gypsy Rover is in three acts built around the character of Rob, later know as Sir Gilbert Howe, of English nobility.

Rob is stolen when an intant, by his nurse, Meg, who later becomes the wife of Marto, a gypsy. Rob grows to manhood amongst the gypsies believing Meg and Marto to be his parents.

It happens one day while riding with her fiancee, Lord Craven, Lady Constance Martendale becomes lost in the woods. They wander into the gypsy camp where Constance and Rob meet and fall in love at first sight. Craven objects to Rob's attitude, but in a very funny comedy scene between Marto and Sinfo, gypsy robbers, he is made to sell Sir George Martindale, who later comes in search of Constance, that Rob is a very fine fellow.

In act two, Rob goes to the home of Constance and seranades her. They plan to elope but are overheard by Craven who informs Sir George, and plans are made to capture Rob. This is successfully accomplished and Rob is thrown into prison, but later escapes.

Two years elapse and Rob has come into his estate, his identity having been proven by Meg. He is now a successful composer, a friend of the Prince, and a social lion. Constance has remained true to her love for Rob and on his return to England he woes and wins her for his wife, as Rob says, "The good fairies have led me to the beautiful country after all and our story, Constance can end in the proper way, they lived happily ever after."

There are also pretty love affairs between Capt. Jerome and Nina, Sinfo and Zara, and many comedy scenes between Sinfo and Marto.

Air Mail Plane Passed Over Clanton Last Friday

The air mail plane passed over Clanton last Friday morning at 9:00 o'clock on schedule time. The plane was piloted by Capt. A. North Duncan of Sheffield.

The plane left New Orleans at 5:30 Friday morning, and landed in Chicago before night. It was a test flight looking toward the establishing of an air mail route.

Chicago, April 17.—The first air mail flight from the Gulf of Mexico to the Great Lakes was successfully completed here at 4:25 o'clock this afternoon when the 420-horsepower DeHaviland plane, which started from New Orleans at 5:39 o'clock in the morning, landed here with registered mail valued at more than $3,000,000.

The mail brought in the plane reached here in time to make connections with the regular trans-continental air mail service westward tonight, and mail which left New Orleans this morning was being rushed toward the Pacific coast tonight.

They were ahead of schedule most of the way, and landed at Maywood field here ahead of time by ten minutes.

Grant Vincent, J. Meloy and Captain Herbert Fox piloted the plane from Nashville to Chicago. Six mail bags, containing bank clearings for the most part, were brought here. The plane on arrival was met by city and postoffice officials.

The plane which, also brought a letter from Governor Brandon of Alabama to Mayor Dever of Chicago, made the flight as the result or the suggestion and support of business organizations along the route, the plan being suggested by the Birmingham Age-Herald on March 17.

The sky line, leaving New Orleans at 5:39 for Mobile with Lieut. R. D. Knapp piloting, passed over Mobile at 7 a. m., arriving at Montgomery at 8:39 o'clock, where the mail was transferred to a machine piloted by Capt. Asa N. Duncan. Captain Duncan reached Birmingham at 9:35 o'clock, departing 20 minutes later for Nashville.

Nashville saw the air mail drop from the clouds at 11:37 a. m., and at 12:01, in a drizzling rain, Lieutenant Meloy and Captain Fox hopped off for Louisville. The stop at Louisville consumed 19 minutes and the flyers were again in the air at 1:49, Chicago-bound. A plan to stop at Indianapolis was abandoned.

Birmingham, April 18.—Roaring his way from Maxwell Field, Montgomery to Roberts Field, Birmingham, approximately 90 miles, in 47 minutes, Captain Asa North Duncan, army instructor at Roberts Field, Friday morning landed at the field at 9:35 o'clock with the first air mail Birmingham ever has received from cities farther south. Twenty minutes later, his 420-horse power motor roaring like a cyclone, Capt. Duncan rose from the field and bored through the sunlight toward Nashville where he landed one hour and 55 minutes later.

Capt. Duncan was flying the second leg of the New Orleans-Chicago test flight, the culmination of efforts launched just one month ago by the Age-Herald when it took up the matter of having a test flight made to determine the possibilities of an air mail service from the south to connect with the transcontinental route at Chicago.

Capt. Duncan and Capt. James Simpson, flying as mechanics were waiting in another ship and at 8:48 after a "welcome" to Lieut. Knapp, and a "farewell" to Capt. Duncan, headed for Birmingham. Capt. Duncan did not fly the DeHaviland he flew to Montgomery Thursday, but piloted one of the newest DeHavilands, a plane built for speed and cruising radius.

Mr. J. Q. Wade Installs Electric Motor for Ice Plant

Mr. J. Q. Wade, owner of the Clanton ice plant, has been busy for some time in installing new machinery and making this one of the most modern plants in this section.

The latest improvement was made last week when an electric motor supplanted the old steam plant in keeping with the policy of Mr. Wade to keep pace with the growing town of Clanton, and with the electrifying of his plant throughout, he is in the best shape to render efficient service to the people whom he serves.

The plant as now arranged has a capacity of ten tons of ice daily, which is ample for this territory. Mr. Wade says he makes his money in Clanton and spends it in the same place, and he intends at all times to give the people the very best of service at all times.

The people of Clanton are always welcome to come out and inspect their local ice plant and acquaint themselves with the making of the ice which they use daily.

The motor connections for the above change were made with very little delay by Alabama Power Company men under the supervision of local manager, Leonard Williams.

Chilton Hi Beats Wetumpka Wednesday by Score of 8-2

Featured by some good hitting and some good pitching on the part of Vann, Chilton high added Wetumpka scalp to her belt Wednesday in what proved a very interesting game of baseball.

The game started by Vann striking out the three first men to face him. For three innings not a semblance of a hit was made, but in the fourth the visitors connected and shoved across 2 runs. Taylor doubled, Batten fouled out to catcher, Ingram struck out, but Lacy put a three-sacker in right, Batten scoring. Howell singled and DeBardeleben brought across the second and final run with a clean single to center. Only two other hits were made off Vann, one in the sixth, and one in the eight.

Thompsson caught a good game and led the attack with the willow.

In first inning after C. Jones singled and was forced by Littlejohn the latter scored on Thompson's single.

Ruffin got a three bagger in the second and scored on Rutland's sacrifice to left, with two down in the third Thompson put the timber against one that sailed out to right center and went under the fence while he circled the bases.

One score was made in the fourth and errors accounted for 3 in the fifth. Clanton was flanked in the seventh for the first time in the game. The last run was made in the eight.

THORSBY PLANING MILL DESTROYED BY FIRE

Fire of an unknown origin, destroyed the planing mill and sheds surrounding same of the Forest Lumber company at Thorsby about 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Heroic work by citizens of Thorsby, saved the big warehouses filled with high grade lumber. A strong wind blowing from the direction of this lumber saved it from destructon.

It is believed the plant caught from sparks from the mill and was not incendiary. No insurance was carried on the plant, and the loss is estimated around three thousand dollars. Mr. Wiggins of Clanton, owner of the plant could not be communicated with before going to press, and it is not known whether he will rebuild or not. Friends of his friends believe it will not be replaced.

Citizens of Thorsby are to be congratulated on the manner in which they fought the raging flames, for with lumber piles blowing and very inflammable material burning, they did splendid work in saving the other buildings near by.

LIFE IN THE EARLY CHURCH

LESSON TEXT—Acts 4:31-5:11.
GOLDEN TEXT—"The multitude of them that believed were of one heart and of one soul."—Acts 4:32.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Story About Giving.
JUNIOR TOPIC—How the First Christians Loved One Another.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How the Early Christians Lived Together.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Lesson From the Early Church.

I. Characteristics of the Primitive Church (vv. 31-35).

11. It Was a Praying Church (v. 31). These early Christians for every want and every need betook themselves to God in prayer.

2. It Was a Spirit-filled Church (v. 31).

When they prayed, the place was shaken wherein they were gathered together, and they were all filled with the Holy Spirit.

3. It Was a Church Which Had Great Boldness in Preaching the Word of God (v. 31).

The ministers of a Spirit-filled church will not offer any apology for the Bible, but will expend all their energy in fearlessly preaching it.

4. It Was a United Church (v. 32).

They were all of one heart and one soul. This shows that they had a unity of feeling and purpose.

5. It Was a Charitable and Generous Church (v. 32).

They held nothing back from those who had need. As needs arose, supplies were given from a common fund.

6. Its Ministers Had a Powerful Testimony (v. 33).

This shows that there must be a personal experience before there can be a powerful testimony.

7. It Was a Church Whose Membership Exhibited Unblemished Character (v. 33).

Great grace was upon them all.

II. Barnabas' Generous Act (vv. 36-37).

He sold a piece of land and turned over all the proceeds thereof to be used for the help of those in need. It should be borne in mind, however, that it is not said that Barnabas sold all the land he had.

III. The Sanctity of the Church Vindicated (5:1-11).

This new community is now for the first time called the church. The mention of the church in Acts 2:47 is spurious. They now have broken with Judaism so that their success depends upon their being recognized. Since this new community superseded the old, God was to make His dwelling place among them—the very sacredness of the tabernacle and temple was transferred to them. This lesson, the church itself must learn, as well as the Jewish mass surrounding it. The sacredness of God's dwelling place men are slow to learn. Moses did not take off his shoes until bidden by the Lord. Nadab and Abihu must be stricken down in the beginning of the Mosaic economy for their presumptuous offering of strange fire before the Lord. Achan was put to death for secreting a part of the booty soon after entering the promised land. So at the beginning of the church, this warning was needed on the part of the church to prevent the hypocrisy of double service.

1. The Occasion Which Brought This Dreadful Judgment on Ananias and Sapphira (vv. 1-4).

It was their hypocritical imitation of the generous act of Barnabas. He and his wife conspired together in this defiance of God. They wanted the honor without paying the price. The same love of praise is causing many in the church today to imitate their dreadful mistake. Peter told them they had not lied to men, but to God. So far as we know Ananias did not speak a word, but his actions spoke louder than his words. Such actions could only be accounted for by the fact that Satan filled their hearts. But that did not excuse them. They were responsible for allowing Satan a place in their hearts. We should learn from this that God and mammon cannot be served at the same time. People today are walking in the way of Ananias when they sit down at the Lord's table with unregenerate hearts.

2. The Judgment Which Fell (vv. 5-10).

Both Ananias and Sapphira fell down dead and the young men carried them away for burial.

3. Great Fear Came Upon the Church (v. 11).

This vindication caused the people to know that God was with them, and it also kept the hypocrites from joining with them (v. 13). Let us beware!

Presistence of Life

Strange, isn't it, that marvelous persistence of life! But that is a way that life has. We speak of it sometimes as very fleeting and transitory, and yet there are so many things about us, after all, that are very hard to kill.

EASTER

Easter always brings many pleasures. Among them we probably enjoy the Easter egg hunt most. This affords fun for all ages. Easter usually makes older folks feel young again. They take great interest in keeping alive the old myth that "bunnies lay eggs on Easter, and wants the little ones to find them." To many people this custom has a meaning similar to that of Santa Claus at Christmas time, and is faithfully observed. There is no age limit where Easter egg hunting is concerned. From six to sixteen years of age. Haskell Johnson, Roberta and Ladean DeSear, Cordelia Gulledge, Virginia Scott and Sara Pattello, had lots of fun finding eggs hidden at the found, the hostess, Mrs. R. L. DeSear, served sandwiches and hot chocolate to the young people. The enjoyments of the afternoon were ended by an automobile ride to Clanton.

G. A. ENTERTAINMENT.

The G A's were delightfully entertained by Miss Ida May Harris on last Tuesday afternoon, so there would be no conflict with the Clanton-Marbury base ball game scheduled for Wednesday afternoon,

An interesting program was executed by the girls. Among the numbers were the stories told by Misses Lurline Minor and Ida May Harris.

THE SENIOR'S PARTY.

When the records of the C. C. H. S. Senior class of '25 shall have been made, and their various social and literary affairs shall belong to the oblivious past, the entertainment of last Saturday evening will probably stand out clearly against the back-ground of memory's panorama.

Mrs. Joe Colloway and Miss Sara Cox were hostesses upon this occasion, and the pretty Cox home afforded an ideal setting for the delightful entertainment.

Following the evening's greetings, guests were conducted to the ivy-wreathed nectar bowl, where Clara May, Popwell and Mildred Hudson, as fairies, dispensed the drinks of the God's. Guests were then conducted to the memory-book, presided over by Lucile Cox, where each was registered.

A contest was next in order, the key-note of which was the leter "S." There were ten questions. Elizabeth won and was awarded an Easter rabbit.

An Easter game was played. Fortune favored and Elizabeth Duncan again came out victorious: An appropriate statuette was the reward.

Several other games were played.

The refreshments served on this occasion were delightful and unique cake accompanied ice-cream, representing a nest of eggs.

The guests were: Alma Robinson. Eva Mims, Gertie Baker, Leona Smith Elizabeth Duncan, Villodene Reynolds, Barbara Williams, Pearl Minor, Arthur Littlejohn, Crit Jones, Howell Vann, Ernest Arant, Thos. Gragg, Wallace Cox, the two hostesses; Sara Cox and Mrs. Joe Calloway and Sam Upchulch, who was an especially iinvited guest.

Whew! Ain't it hot?

Fishermen are on the alert to find the shadiest place.

Summer weather is with us at last Also the straw hat.

Crops are almost planted, and the grass is sticking up his nose. Cut him down, farmer. Don't let him get the best of you.

If you have a trouble of your own, bear it. If you've only got one hat, wear it. But if the weather gets too hot, there's no use to swear it.

Good program at high school Thursday night. Come and enjoy yourself and also help the ladies. It is worth the money.

THE PEOPLE RULE

The Birmingham News and the Age-Herald are hurting themselves with the reading public in their "holier than thou" attitude on everything that bobs up in Birmingham. They seem to think that what they believe is what the people want. The stir in their school board is just a common place affair, yet they have repeated the same story over and over in their news columns for the last two months.

The gist of one of their leading stories for the past month or more has been that three of the commissioners have pledged themselves to vote for the retention of Mr. Chadwick and one for Dr Gaines, who it is proposed to nominate to succeed the incumbent, and that Mr Harrison, who has been sick of smallpox hasn't given any statement and they couldn't place him anywhere. Over and over has this story been repeated until the people are tired of it. We don't know anything about the matter Mr. Chadwick is all right as far as we know, but we also know that in case an earthquake should come and take him away we believe the city of Birmingham could find somebody that would take his place

If they like Mr. Chadwick tenure in office commend him. If they don't like the man some one proposed to succeed him, go after him, but leave off that day after day stuff or how folks are going to vote.

It's all over now, but the Birmingham News has moved over into Bessemer trying to settle their school matters. Next they will be down in Chilton in our school board fight.

THE DOVE OF PEACE

Since the Armistice, in 1918, there have been six separate wars—the war between Russia and Poland, the Greco-Turkish war, the Civil war in Mexico during Obregon's term, the Civil war in China, the continuing war of Spain in Morocco and the bombardment of Corfu which amounted to a state of war between Italy and Greece. Indications now point to another war between the Kurds and the Turks. In this connection it was recently announced that there are nearly four millions of men under arms in the world—most of whom are in Europe. Of course that is a mere handfull compared to the millions that participated in the World War, but it goes to show that the dove of peace has about as much of a home in the world as the "wandering Jew." Meanwhile all Europe continues to prepare for another general mix-up. It seems to be in the blood.

GROW YOUR OWN VITAMINS

Closely associated in our minds with the vitamins they supply are the vegetables that can be grown in almost any home garden—spinach, cabbage, lettuce, sarrots, string beans, peas, rutabegas, tomatoes, all the leafy vegetable known as "greens", and many others. We also obtain necessary minerals from these vegetables—iron, calcium, phosphorus—and depend on them for bulk, or "roughage." But our first thought is apt to be—vegetables for vitamins!

The advantages of growing vitamins in our gardens are many and obvious. To begin with, there is the matter of freshness No matter how near the market may be to the home, it is usually a long way from the farmer who produced the vegetables. Garden products that have been carried over a dusty road, and perhaps exposed for hours before they are sold, can not be compared in desirability of flavor or condition with those just off the vine or out of the earth. The vitamin content of vegetables is also dependent to some extent upon freshness.

Again, when the vegetables are actually at hand in the garden, waiting to be gathered, the chances are that they will be used oftener, and in larger quantities, than when some one has to go to a store to get them. The price Often influences the quantity bought when the housekeeper goes to market but when she steps into her garden she is apt to bring in as much as she believe her family will consume.

The convenience of having a garden frequently leads to a beneficial change in the proportion of the family diet. Vegetables are served more abundantly because they are available, and they satisfy the craving for bulk, lessening the desire for other foods which may lack the necessary vitamins. Almost automatically the garden tends to increase the use of vegetables.

The garden must, of course, be carefully planned so that it will yield an adequate supply of the kinds of vegetables the family likes and needs, both for table use and for canning or storing. If some sort of record is kept from one year to the next to show the quanity of each vegetable grown and the use made of it, a garden budget can be eventually worked out.

Fresh fruits are also important sources of vitamins, and should be considered in connection with the garden plan. Many orchard fruits and berries grow well in all sections of the country, and others are best suited to certain localities. While the citrus fruits—oranges, lemons, grapefruit—are among the best sources of vitamins, hey are produced only in warm climates, and must be purchased in other sections; local fruits, however, may be depended on also to supply vitamins. Tomatoes are comparable with citrus fruits as sources of vitamins, and when the latter are lacking, tomato juice, either fresh or canned, may be used instead. It goes without saying, therefore, that it is a good thing to include tomatoes in every garden plan.

SUGGESTIONS FOR ACCIDENT PREVENTION

Secretary Hoover, in an address before the National Conference on street and Highway Safety, asked for the co-operation of all interest in an effort to reduce the now rapidly increasing number of deaths and injuries due to traffic accidents. He stated that there were 22,000 such deaths and 678,000 serious injuries last year and that nearly 80 percent of the highway accidents were due to the automobile.

Here is a suggestion for lessening accidents. In the old days, a road was rounded up like a railroad grade with deep ditches on each side. Probably two teams passed at a pace of three or four miles an hour on every five mile stretch. Today our modern highway grades are largely the same, with a strip of pavement in the center on which scores of automobiles pass in a mile traveling at a speed varying from 25 to 45 miles per hour. With good driving, there are no accidents. Mis-judgement one way or another, however, and an automobile crashes with another car or goes in the ditch.

Instead of digging ditches on each side of the road, use the same labor and extend the grade and the culvert coverings from the edge of the pavement at a gentle slope to the fence row on each side. In other words, have the curve of the road more like a street. This is possible along 90 per cent of the highways at no additional expense. Thus is the tendency for cars to crowd in the center relieved and consequently the danger of accidents is lessened.

All the rules, regulations and laws that can be passed will be of little or no avail so long as any man or woman can buy an automobile one minute, step into the state licensing department and get a permit to drive the next minute, regardless of his familiarity with the car, its operation or road rules. No other piece of machinery in the world is operated on such a haphazard basis. The marvel is that instead of 22,000 deaths a year, there are not 200,000 deaths.

Remove the cause and you remove the accidents. Intermediary measures will be useless. Compulsory automobile accident insurance, or worse yet, monopolistic state automobile accident insurance, as set forth in [illegible] only encourage recklessness for it will tend ot remove restraint from an already careless person.

DEXTER AND CIRCUS

If you asked little Dexter what he loved above everything in the world he would say: "The circus."

If you asked him why, he would say: "Because every year it is bigger and better than ever."

To be sure that was what the bill posters said before the circus came and it was what every one said, every time, about the circus after they had seen it.

There was something about Dexter that there is about every one—a real love of the circus.

Dexter, maybe, loves it more than anyone, though when I think about it I am sure there are just hundreds and hundreds of people—big, small and in-between people—who will say:

"He doesn't love it any more than I do."

Now, one night Dexter had a dream and as it was one of the loveliest dreams ever a lad had, and as Dexter loves to share with others, you will hear of this dream.

In his dream he thought he was in a beautiful field with soft, warm grass upon which to lie and, above was the blue sky with the sun shining brightly down.

As he sat down in his beautiful field he heard the sound of music and it sounded to him like a band.

And then he thought he heard the sound of tramping feet.

The music came nearer and nearer. Dexter pushed toward the direction from which it came.

And there, before him was a circus parade.

The elephants were there, swinging their trunks.

There were cages in which were seations, tigers, lions, leopards, a rhinoceros, a hippopotamus and her baby, and monkeys and many, many other animals.

They Bowed Before Dexter.

There were giraffes. There were beautiful ladies riding in handsome chariots and upon lovely ponies.

There were many, many clowns.

There was the band, and in front of all was the drum major very handsomely dressed and performing in a splendid manner.

As they approached Dexter they bowed. Even the animals bowed.

"Greetings, our best circus greetings, Dexter," they said.

Then they went into the field, with Dexter running along beside them.

First he went along by the members of the band, then by the animals, then by the clowns, then back to the band, then by the ladies.

They were all so wonderful.

"We're going to give you a private show," they said. "We are going to have a whole, three-ringed show, just for you."

So Dexter sat now at one end of the field and all the clowns and animals and horseback riders and trapeze performers set to work to fix everything right and then performed their tricks.

They bowed before Dexter and he clapped and clapped. Oh, it was so wonderful having a circus just for himself alone.

Yet, he did keep thinking how he wished his different friends could be with him. They would have enjoyed it so much!

The band kept playing all the time, all the time, all the time until just as the show was about to end the band seemed to be blowing whistles—then one whistle, one great long whistle!

Dexter found himself sitting up in bed. He had been dreaming. Now he was listening to the whistle of the circus train and it was early in the morning.

The circus was to be that afternoon, the parade that morning.

Dexter hurriedly got dressed.

Then he rushed up to the railway station. There was the circus train. They were unloading.

And every one would be seeing the circus in the afternoon. He had loved his private dream circus, but he was glad, after all, that the real circus which was to be bigger and better than ever, would be for every one!

STEPHEN, THE FIRST MARTYR

LESSON TEXT—Acts 6:1-7; 60.

GOLDEN TEXT—"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—Rev. 2:10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Brave Man.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Stephen, the First Martyr.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Stephen a Christian Hero.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Character and Message of Stephen.

I. Stephen the Deacon (6:1-8).

The early church was threatened with disruption over suspected partiality in the distribution of alms. Thus we see that as soon as the church had relief from external troubles, difficulties arose from within. A congregational meeting was called, and the case was pinced before the church, which was instructed to select seven Spirit-filled men of good reputation to administer the temporalities of the church, thus giving the apostles the necessary time for prayer and the ministry of God's word.

II. Stephen Before the Council (6:9-15).

The success of this movement soon came to be noted by the enemies of Christ.

1. Disputing With Stephen (vv. 9-10).

Certain foreign-speaking Jews took the lead in this controversy. Perhaps the fact that Stephen was a Greek Jew provoked them to act. He was more than a match for them while the debate was carried along the lines of reason and Scripture. Beaten along these lines they had him arrested and brought before the council.

2. Charged With Blasphemy (vv. 11-14).

They trumped up this charge and endeavored to support it by secretly finding and inducing men to perjure themselves in their testimony. Stephen showed in his preaching that God's purpose is progressive, and that the policy instituted by Moses should be superseded by the new faith since it was the culmination of what Moses began. He showed that the old dispensation would be superseded by the new, and that the church would come out into the liberty of Christ. Christianity did not destroy Judaism but caused it to blossom forth into the glory of the new order.

3. Stephen's Face Transfigured (v 15).

He was so completely filled with Christ that as he saw the angry mob and realized how soon he would be violently denit with and pass into the presence of the Lord, his face shone as the face of an angel. It was the glory of Christ shining through him.

III. Stephen's Defense (7:1-53).

In refuting their charge he showed by the history of God's dealing with the Jews that they had always resisted Him. Therefore their attitude was because of their unwillingness to move forward with the divine purpose. As indicated by Dr. Stifler, four points stand out in his defense:

1. God's dealing with the Jews showed progress. The end was not reached by a single leap, but by gradual stages.

2. The temple was not the only holy place. God appeared at different places and at different times.

3. Israel inveribly opposed God as He tried to lead them on.

4. He showed his loyalty to Moses by constantly referring to him.

IV. Stephen Stoned (7:54-60).

His words were too much for them so they gnashed upon him with their teeth.

1. He Looked Steadfastly Into Heaven (v. 55).

Instead of looking about upon his murderers in their raging fury, he looked up to heaven. This was the secret of his calm. If he had looked about him, he might have been afraid.

2. He Saw the Glory of God (v. 55).

A vision of God's glory can only be seen by those who are loyal to Him, even unto death.

3. He Saw Jesus Standing on the Right Hand of God (vv. 55-56).

The fact that Jesus was standing shows that He was actually interested in the suffering of His faithful witness.

4. They Cast Him Out of the City and Stoned Him (vv. 58-59).

5. His Prayer (v. 60).

He kneeled down, and cried with a loud voice, "Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." How like the prayer of Jesus on the cross! Christ so completely filled him that he could thus act.

6. He Fell Asleep (v. 60).

The Christian's death is only a sleep. This sublime scene must have vitally affected Saul, who was consenting unto his death.

Worth Remembering

Over and over again we need to comfort and strengthen ourselves with the remembrance that there is a very wonderful, enduring quality to the things that are good and clean and sound and honest.

Prayer for the Day

Let each new day bring to our lips the prayer: "Make me sane, and sweet, and strong for all the day holds of care and contradiction, of toil and trouble."

NOTED LECTURERS

These young people in three summers can earn the same amount of college credits as regular college year.

"All teachers in the state," Prof. Judd added, "who hold a second class pre-normal certificate which was issued [illegible] may secure a renewal of such certificate on the basis of summer session work at Auburn may convert these certificates into first class pre-normal certificates by attending a second session at Auburn. All certificates of every grade and class, even though they have already been extended may be extended or renewed by attending the Auburn summer session. CHEVROLET COMPANY MAKING NEW RECORD

Detroit, Mich., April 23.—The Chevrolet Motor companyy is producing [illegible] month as a record of 55 motor cars and trucks, or more than 2,000 for each working day.

This monthly schedule, planned also for May and June, has been exceeded only twice in the company's history.

At the present rate Chevrolet will produce its "two millionth" car early this fall. It will be the first three-speed gear shift type of car to reach that total.

Of the cars being made this month, 43,556 are destined for domestic sale, 5,234 are to be exposted and 3,580 will be built at the Chevrolet plant in Canada.

Accelerated by the demand for the improved new series with refinements previously obtainable only in cars of much higher price, the Chevrolet production has mounted rapidly since January 1.

The capacity program requires approximately 17,545 workers at the twelve Chevrolet factory and assembly plants throughout this country.

The popularity of the new Chevrolet models has developed a unique situation in which sales and production figures practically are identical. Unfilled orders on hand indicate that production for the next three months, even at the high pace set, will be absorbed at once.

NIGHT FLYING IS HERE TO STAY

Night flying as a regular part of the everthrobbing modern life of America appears to have come to stay, like many other things that have finally arrived within recent years. The practical success of the night air mail seems to leave no room for doubt. [illegible] developing intensive lighting units are interested accordingly, since light is the prime requisite in establishing night [illegible] communication or transportation.

If night flying from the point of view of passenger service becomes popular in this country, it will mean increased research in the field of illumination to improve if possible, the already efficient methods of lighting landing fields as well as the making of route.

At the present time there are over five hundred main landing fields and more than two thousand emergency field in the United States. How many there may be within another few decades, when America follows and travels by air as well as by train with twenty four hour schedules, it is impossible to gauge. But most aviation men believe that such a development will come in the course of time.

DELIGHTFUL MOTORBOAT TRIP ON THE COOSA

Complimentary to Miss Julia Boyd, sister of Mrs. Willis Lyman, was the delightful motorboat trip and picnic planned for last Friday afternoon and evening.

Invitations were extended to a very congenial number of friends of the honoree.

The party left Clanton for Mitchel Dam about two-thirty.

Upon arrival at their destination the party was received by representatives of the Alabama Power Company and all repaired to the wharf for a motorboat trip.

Up stream, was the party motored, until it came within a short distance of Lock 12.

The river trip in its entirety, was all that could be desired. The beautiful scenery of the Coosa was greatly admired by the appreciative party. The glory of the georgeous sunset, against which nature had placed her wonderful frieze, excited to demonstration, the latent artistic spirit of the beholders.

Returning to Mitchell Dam, the party of care-free pleasure seekers went to the Mitchell memorial and by the light radiating from many incandescent bulbs, spread their delectable viands, of which all freely partook. Their appetites whettened by the trips of the afternoon and the sight of attractively presented food, the party agreed that a more satisfying feast could not have been spread for Epicurus himself.

MRS. JNO. Q. WADE TAKES REST CURE

Mrs. Jno. Q. Wade left several days ago for Stafford Springs, Miss., to take the rest cure.

Rest cure, with its impenetrable quiet, is a bad dose for Mrs. Wade, who has always led a very active life. The patient is doing well, but recovery would probably be hastened if friends over Chilton county would write a cheerful letter occasionally.

Our best wishes for Mrs. Wade's complete recovery and return home.

N. Y. PREACHER VIEWS PROTESTANTS

New York—A common work rather than a common belief is the basic interest in the community church in New York, which its minister, the Rev. John Haynes, believes is a type of the religious organization of the future.

"We have no limitations of belief or class," says Dr. Haynes. "Our constituency includes Catholics, Protestants, atheists, rich, poor, white and black. One-third of our members are Jews. In a sectarian sense we are not a christian church, although of course our background is that of christian tradition."

Even the most firmly rooted Fundamentalists may find interest in this harmonious group of heterogeneous elements and in the man who is their leader. Keen brown eyes are the dominating feature of his lengthened face, a face of quick perception and bold action. And although he is considered by many churchmen to be a dangerous radical, he yet retains the clerical manner, brotherly, sympathetic dignified and, withal, magnetic.

"The reason I am in the church is that I believe in religion, and that the church at present is facing the most critical period in centuries of its history," Dr. Haynes says.

"I believe the Protestant church as we know it is to be changed just as decisively as the Mediaeval church was changed by the Lutheran Reformation. Religions as we know them are for the most part based upon theological ideas. These are almost as numerous as the people thinking on the subject. Consequently, we have denominations, endlessly multiplied.

"In the community church our bond of interest is the community, the common welfare. It attracts persons of all beliefs. In practice, organization upon the basis of belief tends to disintegration, while upon the basis of work it leads to unity.

"Many religious liberals place their emphasis upon 'a deed, not a creed' and upon 'a life, not a faith. But a deed is purely a personal matter, and a life is the life of the individual. We are trying here to assemble and direct the effort of the mass on a social basis for the benefit of all.

"Our emphasis upon common work for the common welfare amounts actually to ideals on the job. It is trying to make real the dreams and visions of the soul. We are trying to eliminate war, ignorance and poverty and to make individuals better. We seek that improvement in the lives and conditions of men which the creeds call the coming of the Kingdom of God on earth.

"The essence of religion is fellowship of men in the life and love of God.

"The community church is an educational institution. Its preaching is designed to enlighten and stimulate the minds of the congregation. There is an open forum for discussion of important questions. It fosters a group of players who seek dramatic development and expression. It supports extensive social service work. It lacks the emotional attraction of orthodox Fundamentalism and of the revival campaign."

SOME WRITERS SAY HOUSE BILL NOT GOOD LAW

At the last session of congress, a bill was introduced(HR11072) which practically excludes Mexican common laborers from the United States.

This bill was pending and did not pass when congress adjourned but is likely to come up at the new session.

Employers of common labor and practically every industry where Mexican labor is extensively employed, would be injured by some legislation.

Many important industries at some season of the year require more labor than at others. Much of this labor obtained from Mexico, and ability to plan it promptly is of importance.

Passage of HR11072 would prohibit such labor with the result that when needed to plant our harvest our grent fruit, vegetable or grain crops, or perform common labor on our roads, railroads, branches, farms or in our mines, it could not be obtained.

There is the virus of industrial disaster in such legislation. It is detrimental to the industries of many states which need seasonable labor or labor which will do the hard work the Mexicans perform and which is not congenial or agreeable to white labor.

LIVING MEMORIALS

Each recurring memorial day, to commemorate the fortitude and heroism of the men and women who made history for the South and for the entire civilized world, should be a stimulant for life as well as a memory of death. The boys and girls, the young men and young women of the South—these valiant soldiers in the strife for better and finer citizenship, who knew not the privations, the sufferings either of the body or of the spirit of those who have gone and of those few who remain—can, by their strength of character and nobility of action, assuage the sorrow and become living memorials to the everlasting glory of the Southland.

Truly, the dead can not hear our eulogy. It is to the living that we must address our appeal. The memory of the soldiers who fell in battle and of the mothers who fell in sorrow and want, now finds its finest expression in the youth of our land, in the South's great and growing institutions, her schools and universities, her great highways and arteries of travel, her splendid citizenship, her commerce and general economic advancement.

In a spirit of reverence these institutions and the people who have made them possible now strew the flowers upon the tombs of the departed whom we honor and from whose sacrifices the inspiration for noble achievements has arisen.

Among the more recent telephone accomplishments are ship to shore wireless conversations, trans-atlantic radio telephoning, broadcasting a presidential message to the whole nation and photographs sent by telephone circuit almost instantaneously.

Conditioning the Farm Horse

Thousands of farm horses have been idle or roughing it during the winter months and are not ready for hard, steady work. It is now the season when the program of many a farm horse is suddenly changed without the preparation that is necessary for efficient service.

On many farms the horses have obtained their winter feed from stalk fields and the straw stack. They come through in a thin condition and need to be put in better flesh before ready for hard work. This is best done by gradually giving the horses in advance a portion of the same ration that is to be fed during the work season.

Whether the horse has been out in the open or standing idly in the barn, a moderate amount of light work preceding the rush season is advisable. The hardening process may be accomplished by changing horses each half day in doing the necessary hauling about the farm preparatory to working in the fields. This will exercise and strengthen the muscles without tiring them.

The horse will not perform efficiently in an ill-fitting harness. The raw sores that develop are due, in most instances, to plunging an idle horse suddenly into heavy work or to the fact that the harness is not properly adjusted. It is especially important that the horse collar be of the right kind, shape and size. A well-fitted collar does not choke and distributes the draft over the entire shoulder.

During the winter months most farm horses are groomed very little and the long hair of the winter coats is a handicap when spring comes. It is best to remove the old hair at once, by clipping. This is important as it increases the efficiency of the horse. It prevents the extreme sweating and lathering that would otherwise take place as the heavy work goes on and the weather becomes warm.

Due to the fact that the direct farm income is mainly from cattle, hogs, or sheep, the care of the farm horse and mule is generally neglected. It should be remembered that the income from the other classes of live stock depends upon the crops that the farm produces; and the horse furnishes the power that makes farm operations possible. More care for the work horse will in the end effect a saving and increase the efficiency on many farms. Be fair to the horse, by doing the things that will give him a good chance to give his best during the present season.

The community's plans of testing out new crops, dairying, fruit and vegetable growing in this section where cotton has been the one crop is being watched with much interest.

Wherever state insurance has gained a foothold politics has entered to play havoc with the system. Favoritism in rates, favoritism in settlements, inefficiency due to political appointments and all the other customary weaknesses have crept in. I do not believe in government ownership of insurance of insurance business. I do believe in the principal that advancement in the future must come from private initiative.

READ THE NEWS, THE PEOPLE'S PAPER. $1 A YEAR.

State School News of Interest to People

The latest substantil relief to Alabama public schools was provided by the constitutional amendement permitted county and district Three-mill taxes, adopted in 1916. The legislature of 1919 made an increase of $150,000 in the special state appropriation for schools, less than 25 cents per child attending, but greatly increased the funds by a stricter system of tax-gathering. The legislature of 1923 made no increase in the general school fund.

Most counties have voted for taxes allowed and still cannot run adequate schools.

School Building

The constructon of improved school buildings has been one of the most noteworthy movements in Alabama during the past ten years, evrey county in the state is dotted with attractive, modern schools houses constructed generally with the aid and supervision of the state and embodying the latest principles of school archeitecture.

The building program may be checked now by the fact that no improveed building can insure a adequate school term and a trained adequate force. The people are willing to pay for buildings, but only legislation can provide the permanent funds for maintenance.

Reduction in School Facilities

Eighteen Alabama counties out of thirty-six reporting have been forced to cut school terms this year below the term of 1923-24 accodring to the Better Education Committee. Montgomery, Marion county reduced the term two days, leaving a 93-day term, while Bullock County in the Black Belt suffered a reduction of three months, slipping back from a nine-nths term to six months. Between these extremes are Macon County with a two-month reduction, Randolph County with six weeks loss, Conecht County with one month cut, and then Chambers, Jackson, Dale, Cleburne Washington, Marngo, Barbour, Clay, Lawrence, Morgan, and Cullman with from two weeks to a month of reduction. Eight of the eighteen counties have five months or less of open schools. Even Montgomery County, whose consolidated school system is the pride of educators is faced with a considerable deficit, and unless additional money is found a one month reduction will be necessary.

School officials report the elimination of subjects and departments to reduce expense; eleveen counties have reduced teachers salaries; six have reduced or eliminated pupil transportation by trucks or wagons; thirteen counties have stopped their building programs; the number of teachers is being reduced and many other devices of curtailment are reported.

This report does not cover all counties of the state; but it reppresents every section and every type of county and city; and the reports from all [illegible] driven up their limits until legislative relief is afforded.

STORY WRITING

[illegible] never has there been such a quantity of [illegible] those accepted the author seldom receives more than $100 as his part of the profits from sales.

One of the leading publishers of the country said that last year his firm received 1,345 manu-scripts from unknown writers, out of which they accepted four. Another firm, received in 1924, 1,304 manuscripts, of which they accepted but three. Five magazines, to whom a majority of budding writers send their stories, do not buy any of them. This group employs four men who write all they use.

It is a hard and discouraging business. The average first novel sells for less than 500 copies netting the author about $100. A novel that sells 5,000 copies is unusual. There is no harder road to fame and those who take it must be prepared for disappointment again and again. Writing is a game of chance with 99 chances of every 100 against the beginner.

The Railroads Are Not Making A Lot of Money

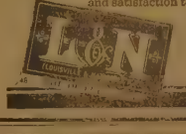
Figures taken from the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission show that, treating the Class-1 railroads as a whole, the rate of return (percentage of net railway operating income to property investment) for the four years ending with 1924 was 3.92 percent.

The average return earned by the carriers in the four years ending with 1909 was 5.42 percent. In the four years ending with 1913 it was 4.92 percent, and in the four years ending with 1917 it was 4.74 percent.

How many industries or private businesses show such a record of diminishing rate of return on property investments? Does such a statement (compiled by a Government bureau) indicate that existing railroad rates are too high? During the year of 1924, the rate of return was but 4.35 percent, and yet a record for efficient transportation and satisfaction to the shipping and traveling public was established by this and other great trunk lines.

Such records are made [illegible] you appreciate [illegible] finest transportation service in all the world, lower cost than is enjoyed in any other country?



For the good of your community, the Nation, and of general business conditions, it is well to keep this in mind.

THORSBY INSTITUTE BURNS MONDAY

Thorsby suffered her second disastrous fire within a week when Bates hall, the main building of Thorsby Institute was destroyed by fire Monday night, entailing a total loss. The building was valued at $12,000. Insurance was carried to the amount of $6,000 it is understood. Also $2,000 was carried on the fixtures which were a total loss.

Temporary arrangements have been made to finish the school term, and it is believed that the building will be replaced before another school term

On Tuesday of last week the planing mill of the Forest Lumber company at Thorsby was destroyed, fire evidently catching from sparks from the engine.

Judge Adams Asks That Correction Be Made

Editor Chilton County News:

I notice in your last week's issue in the advertisement referring to sanitary taxes against S. M. Adams, which property was sold to J. A. Maddox. I desire to say that I paid all the taxes up to time I sold the place to Mr. J. A. Maddox. That tax was deducted from the purchase price of the place. I don't think that I owe any tax or any other debt to anyone that has not been paid.

SUMMER BASEBALL ASSURED FOR CLANTON

At a meeting of baseball fans at the court house Tuesday evening, it was definitely decided that Clanton should be represented this season by a strong independent ball team, made up of local boys andenough outside help to make it equal to any in the state.

A committee appointed Tuesday night of last week to see if $1,500 could not be raised to help finance the team, startled the crowd with the announcement that over $1,100 of the amount was already pledged, and urging that the remainder be raised by next Tuesday night, To expediate this work a ladies' comittee was to be appointed to help in this work.

A committee looking toward the purchase of uniforms was appointed, also a publicit committee. The finance committee apointed last week was elected as a permanent one, being composed of Dewey Rockett and Cecil Smith.

It was stated that several boys off at college had written to the temporary organization, stating that they wanted to come to Clanton and play ball with the team, Some of these boys will likely be taken on if suitable positions can be found for them.

With the plans carried out as outlined at Tuesday's meeting there is no reason why Clanton will not be represented by a first class ball team. one that will be a big advertisement for the town, as well as a source of enjoyment for the people of this section.

Mr. Boutell was elected as official scorer.

Refreshment privileges will be discussed at a later meeting.

With the finance committee of ladies and men working and the uniform committee busy it is believed that all the finance and uniforms will be in sight when the next meeting is held on Tuesday night.

FORESTRY WEEK APRIL 27 TO MAY 3

By presidential proclamation April 27 to May 3 has been set apart as Forestry Week throughout the United States. This is a matter of national interest. Every man, woman and child is a victim of the economic loss through forest depletion, in which the forest fire is the greatest factor.

Forestry Week, or Forest Preservation Week, should be dedicated not alone to education in fire prevention, but to constructive action. Many schools and civic organizations through out the land are planning to combine Arbor Day exercises with Forestry Week, thus focusing public attention to the necessity of measures to perpetuate forest growth, forest protection and the great lumbering industry. To do this, it is necessary to give attention to the human element—to the "man" as well as to the "tree."

Taking the state of California as an illustration of the direful effects of carelessness, we find that of the 265 forest and brush fires during the year 1924, 29 per cent were man-caused, and 21 per cent were started by lightning. As a result of intensive study made by the state board of forestry, it is found that 258 fires were caused by campers, 609 by smokers, 135 by brush burning, and 249 of incendiary origin. In spite of laws of states and nation, in spite of the millions spent by the government in regulations scouting and other protective measures through the forestry department, the frightful toll continues. It is more or less authoritively estimated that unless the present rate of forest diminution is checked, both through protection from physical destruction and substitutes for lumber in the building trades, the present supply of timber in the United States will not last more than 25 years.

Some of the alarming effects resulting from forest fires are damage to watersheds, fire scars on standing trees which seriously affects the merchantable value of the lumber, direct threat killing, prevalence of insects and wood-destroying fungi, increase in logging costs, the killing of seed trees which needs to wipe out reproduction, and the fact that each succeeding forest fire leaves ready fuel for the next one.

Trees, which are nature's great sanctuaries, also have their sentimental values. Trees have ever been the subject of the poet's song, the shelter from the falling mists and shade from the burning sun, the home of the birds, and an untiring beauty for all mankind. "To know a tree," says a current author, "we must climb its trunk, taste its bark and shake its branches." To know trees and love them we first must protect them.

BAPTIST GAIN MANY MEMBERS

Nashville, April 20—During the past year the churches affiliated with the Southern Baptist conference reported baptisms to the number of 209,676 and made a net gain in membership for the year of 269,673, breaking all previous records in this last respect, it is revealed by the annual statistical report of the Southern Baptist convention, just completed by Dr. E. P. Aldredge, the statistical secretary. The report in full will be presented to the convention at its session beginning in Memphis May 13.

Other marked gains for year include the organization of 424 churches and 969 Sunday schools with 255,236 pupils, 4,416 young people's unions with 162,202 new members, and increase in the value of local church property in the sum of $14,616,031, and an increase in the contributions of the churches to all objects in the sum of 3,020,178.54.

With the year's gains the convention now has a constituency of 3,763,862, exclusive of the churches on the foreign fields. Its Sunday schools have an enrollment of 2,563,953.

FORESTRY WEEK FROM APRIL 27 TO MAY 3

Montgomery, April 16.—American Forestry week has been set aside by the President of the United States and the Governor of Alabama. The week designated is from April 27 to May 3, inclusive, and takes the place of what was formerly known as Forestry Protection Week.

Although forest protection is at present the main problem of forestry in the United States, there are various other branches of the art of timber growing which must be given important places in any sound forestry policy. After protection has been adequately provided for, the practice of silviculture or the most suitable means of growing the maximum stand of timber upon a given area becomes extremely important. As timber growing upon any tract becomes further advanced, forest management, or the proper application of forestry methods as a business enterprise, becomes a leading problem. When the timber or any considerable part of it matures utilization or the harvesting and marketing of the forest crop, becomes paramount. Thus, while in the beginning protection is the prime essential, this alone is not the sum total of forestry practice, although it must always remain as the foundation upon which the remainder of the art and science of growing trees for profit must be based.

The forests are for the use of our people and should be utilized in every way compatible with their perpetuation. In establishing American Forest Week to take the place of Forest protection Week, one of the purposes is to remind the timber land owner and the general public that, although protection comes first, there are many other things to be done in order to reap the full benefits from our forest resources. Timber is getting scarce, and the owner of forest land who gives thought to the possibilities lying in his timber tract can well afford to consider in detail the means and methods of securing the greatest benefit from his holdings.

Chilton High Takes Two Games From A. M. I. Tea

Chilton county high school baseball team added two more victories to its string Friday and Saturday when it took the games from Alabama Military Institute by the score of 4 to 3 and 16 to 0.

The game Friday was one of the prettiest games of the season, neither side could get away to a lead, and both pitchers were working fine.

With E. Steine in the box, the Anniston team put up a good ball game but in the second game Davidson, although he did his best, was not able to stand off the batters of the Clanton team.

Hobbs, the Anniston catcher, over anxious to get the third out, threw wild to third in the ninth, the winning run coming over.

First Game

The first run was scored in second inning by Clanton. After Hays was out second to first, B. Jones singled to center, Hammel struck out and Rutland knocked a three-bagger to left that bounded over the fielders head.

A. M. I. scored two in the fourth. E. Stiene and M. Stiens singled in succession. J. Walter flew out to third and Hayes was out second to first, runners advancing. C. Hanney scored, both with a hit to left.

Clanton tied the score in the half when Conatser hit [illegible] to left. Hayes was out at first and J. Jones uncorked a 3-ply swat to center. The visitors came back with one in the sixth. M. Stiene flew out to third. J. Walter connected for his second hit of the game. Harper followed with a 2-ply swat to center, scoring Walter.

The local players made it 3-all in the last of the eight, through some exceptional base running by Hayes. After being hit by the pitcher he proceeded to steal second an scored on an error by pitcher who throws to center trying to catch runner.

The Anniston boys got one on in the ninth, but could not score.

With an extra inning seemingly inevitable, Vance went to bat to open ninth. He swung at one and [illegible] ly called out on strikes. Thomas [illegible] to bat and [illegible] Hobbs attempted to catch him [illegible] ond and threw to center field, [illegible] son going to third. Jemison Merchant Sees B'ham Fire

Mr. J. D. Cooper, one of Jemison's leading merchants, gives an interesting account of the fire which burned the city hall in Birmingham last Wednesday.

Mr. Cooper was in Birmingham that day on business. He says he was over at the terminal station when the alarm was turned in. Like all the rest he started for the fire, and he describes that crowd; it seemed that everybody beat him there.

Squeezing through the crowd, he got to a vantage point where he could get a good view of the burning structure. The roof was of slate and the firemen were handicapped in reaching the fire with the water until the heat burst the slate covering.

Mr. Cooper says one of the most remarkable part of the disaster was that no one was hurt with the motley crowd surging about the streets and ambulances circling about at full speed. It seemed to him that everybody in Birmingham was there and that the Magic City newspapers had extra papers on the streets almost by the time the firemen got water to the building.

MR. ROGERS AND GOOD ROADS

A great stir has been raised over the state as a result of the invitation of Mr. John a Rogers to the members of the legislature of Alabaa to a banquet tendered by him in Montgomery on May 4.

Not taking sides either in defense of Mr. Rogers or condeming his administration as head of our department of roads, we can see nothing wrong in the calling of this meeting. It seems to the News as the wisest thing he could have thought out to get the views of the representatives of the people on the idea of determining whether the people are desirous of having a road bond issue, and if so, to talk over plans of putting the question in shape.

If Mr. Rogers had followed the usual game, he would have invited a few of his political friends from each county and had a "representative" meeting of citizens from all parts of the state "de-nding" a call of the legislature to ass on to the people the question of whether they want a bond issue.

FARM PAPER NO COMPETITOR OF LOCAL PAPER

Many country weekly newspapers have a lot to say at times with reference to the farm paper and its entering and competing in the same field. The editor of the Chilton County News looks at this matter in a different light and we have almost invariably found that the man who is a subscriber to a farm paper is a fairly intelligent farmer trying to use the advise of those who know by actual experience.

It will also be found that those same people who take the farm paper are the very ones who subscribe for and cherish their home paper.

This question l and put in the ver the leading farm journals of the south. It says:

"Somebody is the joy out of life. There are those who would even pick a fuss between the country weekly and the agricultural press, if they could, admonishing the country publisher in fatherly tones to beware lest he lose hi we don't know. Immediately following the address President Dowell will present diplomas and honors to members of the graduating class, concluding the commencement exercises.

average holding was above 100 acres. Many of the first holders worked themselves into the poorhouse or the grave trying to pay up on so much land. But every year the average holding has decreased, until it is now under 20 acres—and they are properous instead of broke. The Okanogan project in Washington, where the holdings have receded in size to only 12 acres, is producing an average of $300 an acre a year, according to the federal figures.

Smaller farms, better crops and business judgement is the sure foundation of farm prosperity. It is not a matter of legislation or federal or state aid. —The Manufacturer.

SEED CORN SHOWS MORE DEFICIENCY

Only 75 per cent of the seed corn in the cribs of the Alabama farmers this year is fit for use, according to the Sears-Roebuck agricultural foundation. The figure is based on germination tests to seed corn from 69 farms in 42 counties in the state that were entered in the National Seed Corn Show held in Chicago last week.

Fully 25 per cent of the Alabama Seed corn tested showed poor germination according to J. S. Naylor, the expert in charge of the testing. Presumably they are the best ears that these farmers could find, and yet this large precentage of them will grow when planted. Unless farmers test their seed corn before planting time, there will be a prodious amount of replanting necessary, he says.

"The big lesson of the National Seed Corn Show can be learned by each Alabama corn grower in his cribs," says Mr. Naylor. "Take the dozen best ears. Then the poorest dozen ears. Each dozen ears will plant an acre of ground. The land is the same—work is same; same weather, same overhead cost. At the end of the season the best dozen ears will yield perhaps 28 bushels of corn on the acre; the poorest dozen ears will yield 14 bushels. The 12 good ears will yield twice the crop of the 11 poor ears.

This is the season that every farmer should take to heart."

The Ala state sweepstakes of the National Seed Corn Show was won by W. C. Naftel, of Naftel, Montgomery county, but was later defeated for national championship by Mrs. Elsie M. Paluska, of Wavely, Ill., who was awarded the thousand dollar C. M. Kittle trophy, the big attraction of the show.

WILL PREACH AT CONCORD NEXT SUNDAY

Rev. R. L. Conner, a student at Howard college, Birmingham, will preach at Concord church the first Sunday in May.

This is Mr. Bonner's first sermon a Concord and a large audience will likely turn out to hear him.

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, MAY 7, 1925. NO. 35.

ROGERS BANQUET WELL ATTENDED

The banquet given by John Rogers as head of the highway commission of Alabama Monday night to the senators and representatives of Aalbama and several hundred other invited guests, was well attended by both the representatves and the general public.

The banquet was given to find out the sentiment of the legislators and the people generally as to whether an extra session of the legislature should be called in an effort to pass on a bond issue to finish carrying out the road and highway plan as planned several years ago, or whether it should be left until a new legislature meets in 1927.

It was consenses of opinion at the banquet that Governor Brandon should be asked to call a session of the legislature to pass on this question, so that there might be no delay in the road building pending the next general election and the next session of the legislature.

The assembly voted by large majority to appeal to the governor to call an extra session, and Senator Craft of Mobile headed the committe to call on Governor Brandon Tuesday for that purpose. Governor Brandon agreed to take the matter under advisement, and will likely give his answer in a short time. Mr. Brandon had promised that if a majority of the legislature want an extra session for the purpose outlined he would call an extra session.

Eighty-five members of the house and senate were present at the banquet. Chilton county was represented by her only representative, Senator S. M. Adams, who made a plea to include in the call, if one should be called, the subject of education. He made an appeal at the banquet, but it seemed the concensus of opinion at the meeting that the good roads question should be put on its merits, and the question was so carried.

Over 300 attended Mr Rogers' banquet, and Mr. E. F. Allison of Bellamy, was selected as toastmaster.

KLINNER-GILES WEDDING AT MAPLESVILLE SUNDAY

A wedding of interest to their many friends was that of Mr Enzo Klinner and Miss Josie Giles, which took place at the home of the bride's mother Sunday morning at ten o'clock.

Cut flowers were used in decorating the home. The bride was lovely in satin and georgette, with accessories to match.

Rev. Stamps of Brent performed the ceremony.

Mr Clarence Evans of Birmingham spent the week end with his mother's family and other relatives.

CEDAR GROVE SINGING SUNDAY GREATLY ENJOYED

The two days' singing at Cedar Grove church near Thorsby last Saturday and Sunday was attended by large crowds. On Sunday morning the church was over-filled and all during the day the crowd increased, over a thousand people being present.

The next convention will be held at Baker school house, west of Clanton.

The music rendered was of the highest order, the Harp and Harmony and [illegible] Harp being used.

Features of the Sunday program were the singing of Misses Bertie Honeycutt and Bertie Jackson, both of Birmingham, and Miss Eva Sanders.

The meeting Sunday was opened by [illegible] President T. J. Jackson by singing one song, after which prayer was offered by Rev. T. J. Deason.

E. B. Ingram led three songs, also W. A. Jackson, J. W. Hayes, A. A. Jackson and T. J. Baker.

[illegible] Cobb and H. E. Duer of Birmingham led 15 minute lessons, after which a recess of 10 minutes was had.

President Z. T. Jones then called the convention to order and T. J. Jackson led one song, after which 15 minute lessons were led by W. L. Sanders, Miss Bertie Honeycutt, Miss Bertie Jackson and Miss Eva Sanders, former secretary of the convention.

A business session was had and songs sung in memory of several members who have died since the last session. "Angel Band" was sung in remembrance of Mr. Mores by M. V. Lawley of Shelby county. No. 290 in the Harp was sung by T. J. Jackson in remembrance of W. J. Lawley. A song was sung by Miss Eva Culver in remembrance of Prof. B. F. White. The number was 288. J. W. Hayes led song 298 in the harmony in remembrance of Prof. W. M. Walker. No. 324 was then led by M. V. Lawley after which recess was taken for one hour.

Dinner was spread about the church by the women of the community had provided a tempting meal, and all present enjoyed a good feast.

After the noon meal, the singing was called to order and good music was enjoyed until about 3:30 o'clock. Following is the order in which it was had:

Chilton Co. News Now 7-Column, 8-Page Paper

The Chilton County News Prides Itself in the Paper and the News Features We Are Planning for Our Readers. We Want to Place the News in as Near Every Home in Chilton County as It Is Possible. Lose Your Neighbor Your Paper And Ask Him to Become a Subscriber

With pardonable pride the Chilton County News announces to its readers this week the appearance of the News in a brand new seven-column eight page paper, trimmed in some of the best reading matter carried by any paper in the state.

It is part of a plan of the present owners of the News to make it the best weekly paper in central Alabama. Of course, we may fall short of that we feel able physically to do the job, and the financial part of it is up to our subscribers, already on the books. So if you feel so disposed when you are in Clanton drop in and give us the good word and a glad hand, and if you haven't got the dollar, we'll wait till the first of the next month any how.

So far as we are able to learn, an eight page seven-column paper is the largest as a regular weekly edition ever sent out to the people of this county. Of course this paper has printed more pages at times, but as a regular week after week enterprise, we believe the people will recognize the effort put forth by the News to make itself indispensable in the home next to salt, soda, meat and lard and bread, to the daily meals.

In the make up of this paper each week you will find the new serial "So Big," which commences this week. This story recently won a large cash prize as the best story produced last year. Don't fail to start with the first installment. You will appreciate the News for giving you this story. It will appeal directly to our country girls and boys, as well as to the grown ups.

Other features to satisfy the household is a comic section, up-to-the-minute news pictures of the day, poultry and farm news, and a cross-word puzzle to keep the whole family busy. If you can't figure it out, some other member of the family will.

Mrs. Julia Boltomley, who edits the woman's department each week, is an authority in this line. She doesn't cater to the sensational in dress, but to the every day fashions which are in reach of all and which will make every woman look well dressed in goods that can be made from materals found in every store in Clanton, [illegible], Maplesville, Verbena, Mountain Creek, Stanton, Billingsley, or any other country stores who sell dry goods and clothing. The women will be especially interested in this department.

But the best feature is the International Sunday school lesson. We say best for it is. You may love your Sunday school quarterly and not know where the lesson is. In most any community there is enough Chilton County News' circulating to start a real Sunday school. If you have not already at your church organize a club of subscribers to bring their News'. You don't have to do without a Sunday school from lack of funds.

It is our plan to put 500 new names on our subscription books between now and July first. This we can do with just a little effort on your part. If your neighbor doesn't take the News lean this week's paper to them and ask the children and the whole family to read the different features.

Can we depend on you? We believe we can and we are going to trust you.

MOATTS BROS. MOVE MARKET AND GROCERY

Moatts Bros., one of the leading grocery and market establishments in Clanton, have moved their store one door west of where they have been in business for the past few years. They are now on the corner of second street at the railroad. This new location gives them a much better place for their market. They have an abundance of light and several feet more floor space.

The refrigerating part of the market has been made right up-to-date, and the market equipment is as good as can be found anywhere.

The display shelves are well arranged, and the various lines of goods which they carry show off to good advantage. They handle a full line of Stokeley Bros. canned goods and also Heinz's line of pickles.

This firm recently took the agency for Airy Fairy flour, and Mr. E. G. Moatts stated Wednesday morning that since taking it they had sold out two shipments.

This firm is composed of Messrs. E. J. and R. Moatts.

On Tuesday, the twenty-eighth, Mary Courtney Jones was six years old. The day was an epoch in Mary Courtney's life, for her mother had the young daughter to invite a number of her playmates to come and assist in the celebration in fact, the day's pleasure began when Mary Courtney dispensed treats to her little schoolmates at the morning recess.

The porch was made into fairylike loveliness with gay colored streamers, balloons in various shades, colorful garden flowers and Japanese lanterns. Here the little hostess greeted her playmates, and fruit nectar was served. After the games the little guests were led into the dining room which was converted into a flowerland. Here the birthday cake was enjoyed. Each little place was marked with a gaily bedecked lolypop doll, which with the balloons served as favors.

POULTRY FACTS

POULTRY DAMAGED BY DISINFECTANTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of the widespread use of cheap coal tar products with a strong carbolic acid odor for disinfecting poultry houses and coops, large quantities of poultry contaminated with the odor have been received at some of the big markets. The bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, has received complaints from handlers of market poultry who have suffered heavy losses because of the unsalability of tainted fowl, one large firm reporting a loss of $10,000 on four cars.

Because of the appearance of European fowl pests in certain parts of the country, farmers throughout the East and Middle West, through fear of this disease, have been doing much more disinfecting than usual. In many instances chemicals with strong and offensive odors have been used, many of them not in the list approved by the department, and in some cases the results have been aggravated by the failure to dilute the product. Birds kept in houses so treated, or shipped in crates reeking with the odors, absorb them into their bodies, where they remain after the birds have been killed and dressed. It is thought that another source of the contamination in dressed birds may have been feed on which the chemicals have been sprayed. When such penetrating odors are present in the disinfectant used the birds should not be marketed within less than two weeks of the time it was used and then not in crates recently so treated.

Coops and poultry houses should always be thoroughly cleansed before disinfecting. A good job is where possible to scrub the interior with hot lye solution or scalding hot water. Such cleaning solutions are themselves good disinfectants. If scalding hot water is not available, the coops may be disinfected with a 4 per cent solution of formaldehyde. While this disinfectant has a very pungent disagreeable smell, the odor soon disappears. If the poultry are marketed for several weeks a three per cent solution of compound solution of creosol or a product of similar composition may be employed. Any coal tar disinfectant is apt to leave an odor which will gradually disappear.

Many cheap products are now being sold in response to the unusual demand which has arisen since the appearance of the fowl pest. In certain sections peddlers are taking advantage of the situation and are going to the farms with a great variety of cheap disinfectants, sometimes doing the work for the farmer. Some of them are selling strong smelling by-products from local gas plants.

The department wishes to encourage efforts at disease prevention, even though much of this work is being done in regions far removed from any point where fowl pest has been found, but urges farmers to use the above-mentioned methods, which will not leave a taint in the fowls when offered to the consumer.

Sodium Fluorid Useful in Treating Poultry

Sodium fluorid is an insecticide used in treating poultry for lice by placing just a small bit of it at different points in the feathers of the fowl where lice are usually found. Although it is a poisonous substance, the poultry do not seem to get enough of it into their digestive system to cause trouble. If used on cattle there would be more danger of poisoning, because cattle would be more likely to get it into their digestive system by licking themselves.

For cattle a mixture of one-half powdered subadilla seed and one-half sulphur is favored. This can be spread along the backs and necks of cattle where the lice are most likely to be, and will be found quite effective in keeping them in check so that they will cause very little trouble to the cattle.

Poultry Facts

Caponize the cockerels.

Goslings never eat much during the first few days.

Chicks given the right kind of start in life have many advantages over those receiving only indifferent care.

It is very important not to feed the poults too heavily, especially the first few weeks. Keep them just a little hungry.

Buttermilk is an almost indispensable feed for growing chicks and may be given in any one of a number of forms.

Pullets which are well grown and matured are the ones which make profitable layers during the coming winter.

Young turkeys seem to have a great fondness for new corn when it is just past the milk stage, and they probably would not get anything that is worse for them if they wanted to.

AFTER HER BABY CAME

Mrs. Hollister Unable To Do Her Work for Six Months

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health

MRS. HENRY HOLLISTER
WYANDOTTE, MICHIGAN

Wyandotte, Michigan.—"After my baby was born I did not do my own work for six months and could hardly take care of my own baby. I always had a pain in my side and it was so bad I was getting regular soldiers. I would feel well one day and then feel so bad for three or four days that I would be in bed. One day my mother came to see how I was, and she said a friend of hers told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So the next day I got a bottle and before it was half taken I got relief. After I was well again I went to the doctor and he asked me how I was getting along. I told him I was taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and he said it was what hurt anyone to take it. I am still using it and always recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends and always have a good word to say for it."—Mrs. HENRY HOLLISTER, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 7, Wyandotte, Michigan.

Another Woman's Case

St. Paul, Minnesota.—"I have a little girl three years old and ever since her birth I have suffered with my back so it was breaking in two, and I could get no relief all the time. I also had a general upset. I had read several letters of women in the newspapers, and the one great testimonial Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my husband for me. As a result of taking it my back has stopped aching and I am well. I can't express my feeling to you. I feel so grateful and could tell you more, but I must not take up your time."—Mrs. PRICE, 1 West Belmont Avenue, St. Paul, Minnesota.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fit the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

"Honest John" Found That He Had to Live Up to His Reputation

A certain man who was a liar and a petty thief, and whose promise was not worth the breath expended to make it audible, took stock of his possessions and discovered that he had not prospered very well.

"My trouble," said he to himself, "is that nobody trusts me. I am handicapped by my reputation. The thing for me to do is to move to another town; fool the boobs, and then clean up big."

More or another town he did, and within a fortnight he had established a little shop on a side street and had begun to curry favor and establish a reputation. His method was very simple.

He would borrow a pencil, fountain pen, stamp or small coin, promising to return it at a given time, and always he appeared on the minute to redeem his promise. He would purchase small articles on credit, promising to make payment at a given time on the morrow, and invariably he kept his word.

Within a year people were calling him Honest John. His business prospered, of course; but its success interested him but little. He had bigger game afoot. The obvious prosperity of the business, however, served him in one particular. It enabled him to borrow ever larger sums and stretch his credit to ever greater proportions without occasioning surprise or comment.

Two years passed, and Honest John had the town in the hollow of his hand. He had borrowed money from 473 wealthy men, who thus had learned that he would pay it back when he promised to pay it back. His credit was good for any amount at every store in town. Every bank in town honored his simple note. The time was ripe for a clean-up and a departure between days for a distant [illegible], where he might enjoy his gains. On the fourteenth of the month he owed a great sum from each of 473 wealthy men on similar [illegible] and purchased great quantities of jewelry and other valuables easily portable, promising to return them or make payment on the morrow. Then he was ready.

How much trouble we make for ourselves! On the fifteenth of the month Honest John wore himself to a frazzle returning goods and borrowed money. You see, habit had claimed him fast and in spite of dreams and plans he had become an honest man. He couldn't break his word.—Baltimore Sun.

Festival of Hallowe'en Instituted by Pagans

Hallowe'en, Halloween, or All Hallow even or the eve of vigil of All Hallows or All Saints' day, November 1. This festival, however, antedates Christian times. On November 1 the Romans had a feast of Pomona, goddess of fruits and seeds. On the same date, or thereabouts, the Druids held their autumn festival to the sun giving thanks for the season's harvest. And they taught that, the night before Saman, lord of death, called together the wicked souls he had condemned to occupy animals' bodies during the year. It was then that, by gifts and incantations, he might be induced to release these captives. November, too, was one of the times for these Druids to rekindle their supposedly sacred fires. However, the superstitions of pagans and Christians alike agreed that the night of October 31, of all nights in the year, was the time when supernatural influences were strongest. Hence, of all nights, it was the night for divination, and particularly for unmarried young people to learn whom their future husbands or wives were to be.

Furniture Made From Weed

For many years the natural seeding known as the "bakain" which grows in the Punjab of India was destroyed as a weed, being cut out to protect other growths. Economic development has caused this weed to be used commercially for light furniture, packing cases and shelving.

PHILIP AND THE ETHIOPIAN TREASURER

LESSON TEXT—Acts 8:26-39.
GOLDEN TEXT—"The entrance of Thy words giveth light."—Ps. 119:130.
PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Did What God Told Him.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Philip and the Ethiopian Treasurer.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Philip Won the Ethiopian.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Use of the Bible in Evangelism.

I. Philip Meeting the Ethiopian (vv. 26-30a).

1. Leaving Work by Divine Direction (v. 26).

The Lord called Philip away from a great work in Samaria and specifically directed him to this man. Abrahamlike, he obeyed the divine command not knowing why he should leave the work in Samaria and go into a desert place. As he journeyed on by faith he espied the state chariot of the Ethiopian treasurer. The Spirit of God directed him to go near and join himself to the chariot. The tactful question put to the treasurer gained him a seat by the side of this dignified officer. The mission which at first seemed so unpromising was now clear.

2. An Officer of State Seeking the Way of Salvation (vv. 27-28).

The Ethiopian had been to Jerusalem to worship. Despite his high official position he was not ashamed of the worship of God. The journey from that far off country required much hardship and expense, but to the one whose soul yearns after God, this is all joy.

3. A Providential Meeting in the Desert (vv. 29-30).

The coming together of these two men was clearly the predetermined way of God.

II. Philip Preaching to the Ethiopian (vv. 30b-35).

1. The Ethiopian's Employment on the Way (v. 30).

His occupation at the time of this meeting was reading the Word of God. At the invitation of the Ethiopian Philip joined himself to the chariot and found him reading from the 53d chapter of Isaiah. This is a most excellent way to spend one's time while traveling.

2. The Absolute Need of a Preacher (v. 31).

The Ethiopian was reading one of the clearest testimonies to the Messiah in the Old Testament, yet he was unable to get anything out of it. The fact that the Ethiopian, a great statesman, needed an interpreter of the Scriptures, even such a plain passage as the 53d chapter of Isaiah, shows the absolute need of a preacher. The gospel must be experienced before one can be a witness to its saving power. The human mind is blind to spiritual things, making the work of an evangelist indispensable. If a statesman of this rank was unable to grasp the meaning of such a clear passage, it should not shock anyone that for the rank and file of men a guide is needed. God has designed that through the foolishness of preaching the world should be saved. Preaching the Word of God will always be necessary.

3. Philip's Message (vv. 32-35).

He began at the Scriptures which the Ethiopian was reading and preached unto him Jesus. This shows us that the person represented in the 53d chapter of Isaiah as suffering instead of others was Jesus instead of Israel, also that the central theme of the preacher's message should be Jesus. He did not preach Jesus as a great teacher, but as a Savior who had suffered and died instead of sinners. He preached Him as the one who had offered Himself as a ransom.

III. Philip Baptized the Ethiopian (vv. 36-38).

As a result of Philip's preaching the eunuch proposed baptism. When Christ is truly preached, men naturally desire to confess Him in baptism. Where this feeling is lacking, the gospel in its fullness is evidently not preached. The Ethiopian might have offered many excuses for neglecting this important ordinance, but like every man who is honest before God, he was willing at any cost to render obedience. The proof that men really believe in Jesus is their willingness to render obedience to His Word. It is faith in Christ that saves, but those who have genuine faith desire to seal it in baptism. Having secured from the Ethiopian the proper confession, Philip baptized him.

IV. The Ethiopian Rejoicing (v. 39).

Confession of Christ always brings joy. Those who obey the commandment of the Lord can go on their way rejoicing.

Truth is as impossible to be soiled by any outward touch as the sunbeam.—Milton.

PARTY FROCK THAT IS IN FAVOR; STAMP BLOUSE WITH GAY COLOR

IF THE crystal globe of fashion-destiny reveals the future truly to those who peer into its depths to learn of "styles to be," then assuredly this summer will see chiffon enthroned as the reigning fabric for evening frocks. At this very moment dance and party dresses are unfolding a continuous and fascinating story of diaphanous georgette crepes and chiffons, always with the shoulder bouquet playing its part of coquetry and loveliness. It is peach-colored georgette, touched with the magic of the stylist's art which accounts for the charm of the party dress in the picture. Even our party dresses flaunt a flowing necktie, for necktles are a very important trimming item this season. Artificial orchids are worn on the shoulder.

Use Chiffon and Shoulder Bouquet.

Sheer materials reign supreme throughout advance costume collections. Billowy masses of chiffon manifest in tiered circular ruffles on evening frocks, in insets of circular portions that make the skirt measure yards around the bottom; in voluminous bows of chiffon at the left hipline and in countless other entrancing ways. Notwithstanding all this superfluity of transparent fabric, the effect as a whole is of extreme simplicity, for there is little or no trimming save for the inevitable never-to-be-omitted shoulder bouquet. Another item, very important is the satin costume slip over which these frocks of transparency are posed. It must be nothing less than perfect, both as to color and fit.

Very many of the new chiffon frocks are trimmed in lace dyed an accurate match. Not only are airy-fairy delicately meshed silk laces used, but those of the heavier sort are employed for yokes, bandings and insets.

So pronounced is the vogue for sheer materials, that even our daytime dresses are being made of georgette crepe. New wood tones are especially emphasized, also beige in these exquisite frocks. A new note is sounded in the chiffon shawl which accompanies this sleeveless dress of like material. These scarf-like shawls use the full width of the georgette or chiffon. They are fringed on three sides with hand-tied floss, the selfsame color.

Perhaps the tunic blouse is indebted to the ensemble suit for the honors showered upon it this season. This much is sure, the blouse and the tunic are topics supreme in the season's modes. Paris is content to keep coats and matching skirts severely simple, letting the blouse receive the full force of lavish touches and decorative features.

The French couturier has the gift of saying much in little. That is why the woman of fashion takes joy in owning a blouse "from Paris." It is sure to have a cunning touch here and there which stamps its artistic origin. Even the simplest tailored blouse is not immune from a delightful appeal of subtle detail. Per example, note the blouse to the right in this picture. In this model the artist resorts to tiny horizontal plaitings for molding the blouse to the figure. It is an excellent suggestion to carry out in one's tailored blouse, that is if one is not so favored as to be in a position to indulge in the purchase of the "original model." The thought is particularly valuable as it illustrates the tendency to get away from the short hip-band effect. The high turnover collar, with its plaitings, likewise the box plait down the front and the cuffs, are tailored-looking without being severe.

The dressier blouse to the left shows the inevitable touch of embroidery. It also has a graceful way of evading the now passe high hip band, by means of an abbreviated skirt effect buttoned at the side.

Color is a subject of vital importance when it comes to the blouse or tunic. There is no such thing, this season, as overindulgence in gay hues. The solid shades may be yellow, scarlet or startling green, or they may be conveyed in prints, which qualify as the mode only when they are bizarre.

The woman who knows how to dress well, without extravagance, will acquire a handsome topcoat and skirt to match, supplementing these with a collection of blouses both tailored and fanciful, selected with a view point of creating ensemble effects.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1935, Western Newspaper Union.)

There is so little rest! There is such an unreasoning passion for activity. And so we skim the surface of all things; we never look down into their depths and see the power of help and culture which they might contain.—Phillips Brooks.

EVERYDAY FOODS

Nearly everybody will eat and enjoy a good meat pie, if it is well seasoned and properly baked. In a small family there are always left-over meats that may be used in such a pie. For chicken add the gravy, a little thin cream or milk to the bits of meat, cover with baking powder biscuit and bake. Be sure that the chicken is boiling hot when putting on the biscuit, as this will insure them from being soggy, or soaked.

A bit of chopped onion, parsley or a bit of a clove of garlic may be added to a meat pie, making it more appetizing.

Dutch Pot Pie.—Cut into dice one-half pound of smoked ham, cook slowly until well-heated, then add six sliced potatoes, three onions sliced; cook a few minutes with the ham, then add three pints of boiling water. Cover with biscuits made from buttermilk and baking powder, as they are especially light and fluffy.

California Eggs.—Have eight hard cooked eggs cut lengthwise. Parboil the tips of a bunch of asparagus. Butter a baking dish, put the eggs into it cut-side up, cover with the asparagus, then add the remaining eggs, yolks down. Prepare a white sauce, using cream and the liquor from the asparagus. Pour this over the dish, sprinkle with seasoning and well-buttered crumbs and bake fifteen minutes.

Breakfast Tomato.—Hollow out small tomatoes and fill with the following: Drop a raw egg into each tomato, season with salt and pepper and cover with two slices of bacon. Add a bit of worcestershire sauce to each, skewer the bacon with toothpicks and bake in a hot oven twenty minutes.

If you have a little ginger bread left over, or any plain cake, steam it and serve with a lemon or vinegar sauce, for dessert. Use one cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of flour, one-half cupful of boiling water, a grating of nutmeg and two tablespoonfuls of videgar or lemon juice. Add a teaspoonful of butter, just before serving.

Add a teaspoonful of sugar to peas, or roast or stewed meats; it adds to the flavor.

Variety of Good Things.

Every little while some one asks for a recipe for Scotch short bread. It is too rich for daily food, but will be enjoyed occasionally; it is nice served with a cup of tea.

Scotch Short Bread.—Take two pounds of flour, one pound of butter, one pound of sugar and two beaten eggs, a grating of nutmeg and a teaspoonful of grated lemon peel. Mix and roll one-half inch thick. Prick with a fork and bake in a hot oven.

Breakfast Toast.—Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan. Cut bread into one-fourth-inch slices and cut each into squares. Lay these in melted butter. Beat four eggs well; add salt, paprika and pepper to season with one-half cupful of milk; pour over the bread. Cook until well-browned on the bottom, then turn each piece with a spatula and brown on the other side. Serve hot.

Arabian Ambrosia.—This sounds good enough for any occasion, but is a most simple and easy-to-prepare dessert. Measure two cupfuls of choice dates, wipe them carefully and remove the pits. Cut the dates into quarters and combine with one cupful of walnut meats coarsely chopped; add one tablespoonful of lemon juice and arrange the mixture in sherbet glasses; top with a spoonful of whipped cream, or marshmallow cream.

Fruitines.—Beat two eggs and add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of softened butter and a teaspoonful of salt. Soak one cupful of raisins in two tablespoonfuls of orange or any fruit juice for an hour, then put through the meat grinder. Mix and sift three and one-half cupfuls of pastry flour; add the fruit juice, one teaspoonful of soda, two tablespoonfuls of milk, one teaspoonful of cinnamon and one-half teaspoonful of cloves. Mix all together and beat well; add the raisins and drop by teaspoonfuls on a baking sheet, two inches apart. Bake eight to ten minutes. This recipe makes about fifty cookies.

Chop Suey.—Take one-half pound of lean veal, cut into pieces, two cupfuls of celery, one-half cupful of onions cut fine, one can of bean sprouts and three tablespoonfuls of Chinese sauce. Heat the mazola, cook the meat in it until done but not brown, add the celery and onions and cook until well-heated through, but not soft. Add meat stock or water from the bean sprouts to cook the vegetables. To one cupful of broth add two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch to make the gravy; season well, add the chop suey sauce and serve hot.

All Day Singing and Home-Coming

As I am a reader of the Chilton County News I would like to say a few words about the home coming and the all-day singing at Green Hill last Sunday in Coosa county. As we started on our way Sunday morning and come to the river, it put me in mind of a camp meeting.

As we went along through the old Coosa county hills, it made us think about how we would like to live among these old Coosa county friends. As we viewed the place where the singing was going to be, and as we drove up the sweet singing we heard made our hearts feel glad, and when we began to shake hands with sisters and friends we love so well, it made us rejoice in our hearts and we was glad the good Lord had spared our lives to meet these good people once more. We are glad to say that we had some good singing and Brother J. D. Hughes made a wonderful talk after which we adjourned for dinner. After dinner was spread everybody was invited, and it looked like old times.

It makes no difference where people are raised up at they never can forget it. It may be a little log cabin in the hills but it always seems near and dear to us. So let us remember that some good day the Lord will call for his children to come home and then there will be a reunion in heaven.

May the love of God and his sweet communion rest with us all until we meet in that sweet by and by.

ROAD ETHICS

Common sense should regulate all conduct on the public highway. It seems there is neither code of road ethics nor morals. Custom in America has established the unwritten law of turning to the right. The common or established custom of any country or people is usually right. But no common law or moral law is alright because there are right exceptions to all rules of human conduct. The following may usually be observed:

1. Turn to the right.
2. Give half of the road in passing.
3. Do not stop or leave a vehicle so as to obstruct traffic on a busy road or street.
4. Do not expect the other driver to anticipate or know what mistakes you may make.
5. Always look before you back or suddenly stop.
6. Never overload a car or horse.
7. Keep the lines and the brakes in good order for emergencies.
8. Do not race or speed on public highways.
9. Draft horses should never or rarely go faster than a walk, especially when pulling a load.
10. The load must be determined by the grade and condition of the road.
11. Always stop, look and listen in crossing railroad tracks.
12. Safety comes before speed in the law of life.
13. Remember the golden rule

B'HAM-SOUTHERN JOINS ORGANIZATION

Birmingham-Southern college has been admitted to national membership in the American Association of University Women, it is announced by President Guy E. Snavely, on receipt of information this week from the national meeting in session in Indianapolis. This is said to be a significant mark in the progress of the institution for the past four years.

Special advantages to women graduates of Birmingham-Southern will result, it is stated, from the new status of the College. A director of physical education for women students of the freshmen class, beginning next fall, is also announced.—Miss Barbara Ransome, Birmingham, graduate of the Sargent School, Boston.

What has been an objective of the administration of the college [illegible] several years is thus gained it is said. Other significant landmarks for the past several years are: Admission to approved membership in the American Association and the Southern Association of Colleges affiliation with the Carnegie Foundation, [illegible] and donations from the General Education Board of the Rockefeller Foundation, establishment of chapters of four national honorary fraternities, and increase in enrollment of over 400 per cent.

U. S. SENATOR SAYS WAY TO DISARM IS TO DISARM

The way to disarm is to disarm, and one way to reduce government expenses is to limit the available supply of money in the treasury. So says Senator King, of Utah, who is drafting a bill to reduce taxes one half billions of dollars for introduction in congress next winter. As a cold proposition that by cutting revenues there would be no money to spend except for the actual essentials of government, the proposed bill rings clear with common sense. But will it prevent the evils it seeks against? American statesmen and budget makers have a peculiar aptitude for denting 'in futures. Cutting off the source of ready money will mean the borrowing against the future—mortgaging the coming generation for all they are worth—unless along with the curtailment of revenue comes the reality of needing less money to administer the affair of [illegible] and peaceful nation.

If we could stop crime tomorrow, the government and the states could [illegible] night be relieved of their highest costs. If the next day we would stop commercial greed, dishonesty, unfair and undue speculation, with all the economic ills, we would have reduced another great need for expenditure. Education must take the place of taxation

DON'T HAMPER RADIO AND ITS DEVELOPMENT

In more and more instances American listeners have been able to hear British, Italian and other European stations as well as the Mexican, Cuban, Porto Rican and other Latin-American stations to the south of us, not to mention the numerous times during which our programs were picked up abroad.

"Broadcasting, nationally and internationally is developing an indispensable service in present day life," declares General Harbord, President of the Radio Corporation of America. "In the rural home and the city home alike, it has come to fill an important role, namely, keeping in touch with the outside world. In the rural home especially radio has meant a new outlook on life. It has brought entertainment, the speeches of prominent men, the latest news weather forecasts, crop reports and other items direct to the farming and his family no matter where he be located. It has given in a large measure, made rural life much more attractive."

MUSLE SHOALS HAS GREAT FUTURE

Before the war, Germany was a heavy importer of Chilian nitrates, supplying her own demand as well as a large part of that of Austria-Hungary, Russia, Holland, France, Sweden and Denmark. During the world war these imports were completely shut off; it was during this period that Germany, finding herself confronted with a shortage of materials for the manufacture of high explosives, entered upon her program of air nitrates production. Great nitrogen plants were constructed and the Harbor process of nitrogen fixation put to work. Now that country in these great war time [illegible] nitrogen supplies.

In 1913 Germany imported 770,000 tons of nitrate of soda from Chile. In 1923 she imported only 11,000 tons. Even so the consumption of pure nitrogen in Germany was by 45,000 tons greater in 1923-24 than it was back in 1913! Every part of the 11,000 tons imported during 1923 were sold to other countries. Indeed, during 1923 Germany sold her neighbors a total of 273,388 tons of fertilizers composed largely of sulphate of ammonia. In other words, these nitrate plants in Germany are meeting the needs of industry and agriculture there. War or no war, she has freed herself of the necessity of depending on sources beyond her own control.

As we have argued before, if Germany with her nitrogen plants can [illegible] the most American [illegible] there were the same [illegible] table results. There is more power available for the [illegible] than is used in all Germany. It uses only 150,000 horse power and yet it produces 65 per cent of all the nitrate needs of the country. At Muscle Shoals there are several times 150,000 horse power available and it geared to air nitrate production machinery can and will produce more than 65 per cent of the total need of this country. Moreover a production of [illegible] per centage would absolutely control all nitrate prices and for all time make us free, even in time of war as well as in time of peace, of dependance upon countries far removed from our own shores.

We shall never understand why the President's agriculture [illegible] failed so completely to embody anything in his report about this great project. We always [illegible] could have recommended could possibly benefit American agriculture more, nor could it have been more patriotic. All that it needed to have done of should have done would have been to urge Congress to go ahead and carry out the provisions of the Act that made the Muscle Shoals development possible. That Act states in specific language that the great enterprise there was established for the purpose of manufacturing fertilizers in time of peace. But they overlooked this as they did a great many other things that to us [illegible]

Muscle Shoals is not dead, but what [illegible] Powerful influences are at work to [illegible] it over to the big power companies. Just the other day we ran across a statement in the daily press that [illegible] Bankers Devise super-Combine for Birmingham" as a headline. It went on to say that "Negotiations have been started which may lead definitely to a consolidation in the Birmingham district of Alabama that will embrace steel, iron ore, and coal properties, and that certain chemical and fertilizer companies will be embraced in the combine." Further, "According to one report the plan is being worked out by the Morgan interests, or Banking groups associated with them, and means the largest merger plan entered into by the Morgan interests since they assisted the Van Sweringens to develop the enlarged Nickel Plate railroad system." On down in the statement the article goes on, "Added to all this, there is the outlook for a great development of cheap hydro-electric power at Muscle Shoals in northern Alabama. There is the opinion in some important circles that electricity is to play more and more important position in coming years in the northern part of Alabama, and will be able to develop probably the cheapest electrical power in the country." And then it suggests, "The Birmingham district could easily be served with power by transmission lines from the Muscle Shoals district at a very cheap rate for the manufacture of various lines of steel products." Moreover, "Two of the companies named above [illegible] hours for the super-combine have plants at Florence, which is very close to Muscle Shoals."

After reading this statement can any one wonder why this paper feels apprehensive or why we wonder what the outcome will be? That one thing I fear to all by now. That one thing that the purpose for which the Muscle Shoals enterprise was created has been defeated up to the present time. Another thing is equally clear, that unless the representatives from the agricultural districts of this country join hands for is agriculture will go down to ignominous defeat again the victims of organized greed. Our watchword must be. They shall not [illegible]—Southern Ruralist.

HOW TO LIVE LONG

Here are three hints that will help, if living long is what you want:

1. Make sure a street car is not coming when you are starting your car from the curb.
2. Do not trail the car too closely. Air brakes respond more quickly than automobile brake bands.
3. Be watchful of a street car making a curve, so as not to be struck by the swing of the rear end.

"O' WAD SOME POWER."

It pains us as it pains millions upon millions of home-loving, God-fearing men and women, boys and girls, to see many newspapers, many of them in our home-loving southland, ridicule every statement uttered by that matchless William Jennings Bryan.

Mr. Bryan has thought it fit to make a statement concerning the illuminating press dispatches that he was a millionaire. His enmies have sought by every means at their command to make it appear that an honest man connot accumulate wealth. Mr. Bryan has given out at length a statement that he was not a millionaire and never would be; that he has never sought wealth any more than the average man's natural desire to live in peace and have a sufficiency of this world's goods. He further sets forth that he and his wife are tithers, and that they have contributed more than $10,000 to the churches in Miami, Fla., where they have made their home recently.

Listen to this aspersion from the editor of the Birmingham News, seeking, to create the impression that Mr. Bryan's statement was ill-advised, adroitly out of place, and mirth-provoking. Listen to what it says:

"Like Abou ben Adhem, William Jennings Bryan should be written down as one who loves his fellowman. But if some angel should appear "in a great light" with a scroll and a flame-tipped pen seeking the names of those who have reached their heart's desire in the way of money-making, let him head the list with the Commoner, formerly of Nebraska, but now of Florida.

"Mr. Bryan has not made a million dollars, and will never make a million, according to a statement made to a Florida editor. He says he has gained all of this world's goods he needs. He is at peace with the world, outwardly at least, and perhaps will continue to be for a while or until such time as national political questions recur. But in issuing his "God's in heaven, all's right with the world" proclamation after the manner of Pippa, he is certainly laying a predicate for much bedevilment from heaps of folks who need the money.

"He may be expected within the next few days, after issuing this remarkable statement about the security and soundness of his economical affairs to have a flood of suggestions from cranks, uplifters, inventers of altruistic and charitable schemes big enough to swamp the Miami mail carrier."

We fear our Birmingham neighbor remembers too well the thorn in the flesh which Mr. Bryan has never allowed to fester on the body-politics of the political henchmen of the News. The people remember too well the political lineup of the News, and the side it has always championed. The crowd it champions are dead so far as national elections are concerned, and to Mr. Bryan more than to any others, goes the credit for the station reached, and the future hopes for him, even in his declining years, to still be its bulwark in the maelstrom of parties for some years to come.

Regardless of what the Birmingham News and all othrs may believe, either in their hearts or for political experience, so long as they antagonize all that is pure, and what should be uppermost in the minds of democrats, just so long will the republican machine ride smoothly on the political seas of America. Would that they could see the lighthouse and help steer the good ship Democracy to her landing place in the htarts of her champions.

OUR MOTHERS

On Sunday, May 10, the entire nation will join in paying its annual tribute to mothers. Whether it be thru special programs in the churches, schools of public halls, it matters not. Mother will not be forgotten. The busy man who has much to engross his mind, even on Sunday, will not be too busy to breath a silent prayer for the happiness, the peace and the contentment of mankind's greatest earthly friend—Mother. If she has passed on then it will be a prayer for peaceful sleep throughout eternity. If she is living, it should be a prayer spoken aloud, and to her, either by lip or letter.

At any rate, mothers will not be forgotten on this one day dedicated to them. Residents of this section and throughout the entire commonwealth will join with their brothers and sisters in the other 47 states of the union in paying a fitting tribute to Mother. White flowers will be worn in memory of her, and thoughts will turn to the days, now sweet in memory, when we nestled close beside her, basked in her smiles, and learned those lessons which have helped us over the rough places in life's pathway.

We live in a busy world, a world in which the struggle for existence seems to grow more difficult as the years roll on. We have our tasks to perform, and our worries to contend with. But we are unfit to hold even the smallest space in this world if we forget on next Sunday to pay in some kind of tribute to the one who made it possible for us to have a place in the world—Mother.—Exchange.

SAVE THE WILD FLOWERS

Summer will soon be here with her charm of flowers and foliage. Few there are who can remain unmoved by the beauty of field and wood, or by that delectable combination of mountain, forest and stream. For love for nature is an elemental thing that will not be denied. But sometimes this love for nature takes strange forms in its indulgence, and in its name are committed many thoughtless depredations. The loveliness and fragrance of the wild flowers and scrubs that crowd the country lanes, or that lighten up the dim recesses under the trees, or that soften the rugged masses of rock, tempt visitors to pluck them, and the knowledge that they can be theirs for the plucking makes them forget their obligation to preserve such beauty.

Many of the choicest wild flowers, some of them the rare orchards, are gone forever, due to this unthinking passion for their possession. The trailing arbus, the mountain laurel and the flowering dogwood, not to mention others, no longer are to be found in many localities where formerly they flourished. The conservation of wild flowers is no less important than the conservation of forest trees.

Automobiles make it possible to go such great distances that many places can now be reached where the wild flowers and scrubs grow in profusion. These same great distances, however, make it difficult to preserve the freshness of the flowers until the end of the return trip. So, huge quantities are gathered only to wither shortly afterward.

If it is felt that bouquets of wild flowers are necessary for the full enjoyment of a trip, much damage can be avoided by taking to the country a pair of scissors and cutting the blooms just as would be done at home. This leaves the root unmolested and the plant will bloom again next season. Wild flowers as a rule have tough wiry stems and this fact makes it almost impossible to avoid pulling up the entire plant when gathering the flowers by hand. Also, by taking a box in which to put the flowers and covering the stems with wet sand or moss, they can be kept for a reasonable length of time. And a bit of the out-of-doors is captured to be enjoyed later on.

Or better yet, Why not build a wild flower garden? This can be done by imitating as closely as possible the natural environment of the flower before they were transplanted, noticing the kind of soil in which they grew, whether sandy or loamy, and the drainage, whether the moisture was retained or if it drained away quickly. Also, it should be noticed if they grew in the sun, or if partially or entirely in the shade. If these precautions are taken there is no reason why the wild flowers cannot be successfully transplanted. It is better, too, to do the transplanting when the plants are young, as then they will be more likely to take root and thrive in their new environment.

Remember always that the true lover of nature never destroys but always protect its treasures.—Christian Science Monitor.

THE DIFFERENCE

Summer School at Montevallo

Several unusual features are announced by the Alabama College for the summer of 1925. There are specially designed courses for high school graduates who desire to secure the second pre-normal certificate.

Miss Tullye Borden, who has been a most successful rural school supervisor of Marshal county, will conduct the classes for the pre-normal certificate work. In addition to this, the students will be allowed to do observation work in the demonstration school, which is a part of the summer school program.

A total of eighty-five courses are offered for those who desire college credit work. In addition to this the upper two years of high school work in mathematics, english and history are offered.

Perhaps the special work in public school music will make a more general appeal than the courses just mentioned. The State Department has recently issued instructions that all teachers should have Public School music training. Alabama College has an unusually well organized department of public chool music. Miss May Andrus, who conducts this work, is a graduate of Yale University and has had years of experience in public school music. Perhaps there is no more efficient public scool music teacher in the entire south than Miss Andrus.

Another special feature is announced by the music department. Mr. Walter Spry, associate director and master teacher in the Columbia School of Music of Chicago, has been secured to give a master class at Alabama College from June 17 to June 22. He is nationally known as a concert artist and teacher of piano. Students can secure instructions from him at Alabama college for the same cost as in his studio in Chicago; thus Alabama college is bringing within reach of pianists of Alabama the advantages that are offered to one who lives in Chicago. His class is rapidly filling up according to Director O. C. Carmichael, and those who desire to take work under him in the summer are asked to send in their applications at once.

The enrollment for the Alabama College Summer School, according to the director, is the most gratifying in the history of the college. More thana twice the number of students are enrolled to date as were enrolled at the same time last year. This is evidence of the general appeal which the courses offered by the college are making to teachers of the state.

Mrs. Edwina Faulkner, of the class of 1913, has accepted the invitation to deliver the alumnae address on June 6, 1925, at Alabama College. Mrs. Faulkner is now the efficient assistant attorney general of Alabama. She is the first woman who has held such a prominent position among the state's attorneys.

Europe will have bought 8,000,000 bales of American cotton before the new crop begins in July, says Col. H. G. Hestor, secretary of New Orleans cotton exchange. While last year's production exceeded expectations larger consumption will leave little carry-over. England is expected to use 40 per cent above last year's buying and French, German and Italian mills are working to normal capacity. Acreage of 1925 crop not yet known. Betterment of industrial conditions in continental Europe is bringing demand for sheets for bedding, which have been unreachable luxuries for over 10 years. Only about 3,700,000 bales of unsold cotton left in sight in America.

SO BIG

By EDNA FERBER

(©, Doubleday, Page & Co.)
WNU Service.

SELINA PEAKE

Well, here's a story by Edna Ferber. That settles the quality question. Probably there is no more popular writer of fiction in the whole country. As to short stories she's the woman O. Henry." And as to novels—why, she has ten or a dozen to her credit and they are very much to her credit. Anyone who has not read "Buttered Side Down," "Roast Beef Medium" and "Fanny Herself" has missed a lot of good reading. All her stories and novels are worth while—clever in plot, well-written, clean, wholesome, glimpses of real life. Edna Ferber is called a "good scout" by both men and women, whether among the peaks of the Colorado Rockies or in the canyons of New York and Chicago. "So Big" is perhaps the best of all her novels. Anyway, it was one of the biggest successes of 1924—possibly the biggest. And that success was deserved; it's a real story of real people, you would say.

"How big is my baby?" Selina would demand senselessly. 'How big is my man?'

"Then little Dirk DeJong, standing before his mother, would stretch his arms wide and squeal, 'So-o-o-o big!' in dutiful solo.'

When he grew to be one of the most correct young men of Chicago's fashionable North Shore, he returned to his apartment one night, from visiting his mother, and questioned himself: "How big?" His answer is the story.

Chapter I

—1—

Until he was almost ten the name suck to him. He had literally to fight his way free of it. From So Big (of fond and infantile derivation) it had been condensed into Sobig. And Sobig DeJong, in all its consonantal disharmony, he had remained until he was a ten-year-old schoolboy in that incredibly Dutch district southwest of Chicago known first as New Holland and later as High Prairie. At ten, by dint of fists, teeth, copper-toed boots, and temper, Dirk DeJong.

The nickname had sprung up from the early and idiotic question invariably put to babies and answered by them, with infinite patience, through the years of their infancy.

Selina DeJong, darting expertly about her kitchen, from washtub to baking board, from stove to table, or, if at work in the fields of the truck farm, straightening the numbed back for a moment's respite from the close-set rows of carrots, turnips, spinach, or beets over which she was laboring, would wipe the sweat beads from nose and forehead with a quick duck of her head in the crook of her bent arm. Those great fine dark eyes of hers would regard the child perched impermanently on a little heap of empty potato sacks, one of which comprised his costume. Selina DeJong had little time for the expression of affection. The work was always hot at her heels. You saw a young woman in a blue calico dress, faded and earth-grimed. Between her eyes was a driven look as of one who walks always a little ahead of herself in her haste. Her dark abundant hair was skewered into a utilitarian knob from which soft loops and strands were constantly escaping, to be pushed back by that same harried ducking gesture of head and bent arm. Her hands, for such use, were usually too crusted and inground with the soil into which she was delving. You saw a child of perhaps two years, dirt-streaked, sunburned, and generally otherwise defaced by those bumps, bites, scratches, and contusions that are the common lot of the farm child of a mother harried by work. Yet, in that moment, as the woman looked at the child there in the warm moist spring of the Illinois prairie land, or in the cluttered kitchen of the farmhouse, there quivered and vibrated between them and all about them an aura, a glow, that imparted to them and their surroundings a mystery, a beauty, a radiance.

"How big is baby?" Selina would demand, senselessly. "How big is my man?"

The child would momentarily cease to poke plump fingers into the rich black loam. He would smile a gummy though slightly weary smile and stretch wide his arms. She, too, would open her tired arms wide, wide. Then they would say in a duet, his mouth a puckered pink petal, hers quivering with tenderness and a certain amusement, "So-o-o big!" with the voice soaring on the prolonged vowel and dropping suddenly with the second word. Part of the game. She would run to him, and swoop down upon him, and bury her flushed face in the warm moist creases of his neck, and make as though to devour him. "So big!"

But of course he wasn't. He wasn't as big as that. In fact, he never became as big as the wide-stretched arms of her love and imagination would have had him. You would have thought she should have been satisfied when, in later years, he was the Dirk DeJong whose name you saw (engraved) at the top of heavy cream linen paper, so rich and thick and stiff as to have the effect of being starched and ironed by sense, costly American business processes; whose clothes were made by Peter Peal, the English tailor; whose road ster ran on a French chassis; whose wants were served by a Japanese houseman; whose life, in short, was that of a successful citizen of the republic. But she wasn't. Not only was she dissatisfied; she was at once remorseful and indignant, as though she, Selina DeJong, the vegetable peddler, had been partly to blame for this success of his, and partly cheated by it.

When Selina DeJong had been Selina Peake she had lived in Chicago with her father. They had lived in many other cities as well. In Denver during the rampant '80s. In New York when Selina was twelve. In Milwaukee briefly. There was even a San Francisco interlude which was always a little sketchy in Selina's mind and which had ended in a departure so hurried as to bewilder even Selina who had learned to accept sudden comings and abrupt goings without question. "Business," her father always said. "Little deal." She never knew until the day of his death how literally the word deal was applicable to his business transactions. Simeon Peake, traveling the country with his little daughter, was a gambler by profession, temperament, and natural talents. When in luck they lived royally, stopping at the best hotels, eating strange, succulent seavinands, going to the play, driving in hired rigs (always with two horses. If Simeon Peake had not enough money for a two-horse equipage he walked). When fortune hid her face they lived in boarding houses, ate boarding-house meals, wore the clothes brought when fortune's breath was balmy. During all this time Selina attended schools, good, bad, private, public, with surprising regularity considering her nomadic existence. She had a beautiful time. Except for three years, to recall which was to her like entering a sombre ivy room on leaving a warm and glowing one, her life was free, interesting, varied. She made decisions usually devolving upon the adult mind. She selected clothes. She ruled her father. She read absorbedly books found in boarding-house parlors, in hotels, in such public libraries as the times afforded. She was alone for hours a day, daily. Frequently her father, fearful of loneliness for her, brought her an armful of books and she had an orgy, dipping and swooping about among them in a sort of gourmand's ecstasy of indecision. In this way, at fifteen, she knew the writings of Byron, Jane Austen, Dickens, Charlotte Bronte, Felicia Hemans.

Her three dark years—from nine to twelve—were spent with her two maiden aunts, the Misses Sarah and Abbie Peake, in the dim, prim Vermont Peake house from which her father, the black sheep, had run away when a boy. After her mother's death Simeon Peake had sent his little daughter back east in a fit of remorse and temporary helplessness on his part and a spurt of forgiveness and churchly charity on the part of his two sisters. The two women were incredibly drawn in the pattern of the New England spinster of fiction. Mitts, preserves, Bible, chilly best room, solemn and kittenless cat, order, little-girls-mustn't. They smelled of apples—of withered apples that have rotted at the core.

Something of this she must have conveyed, in her desperation, to her father in an uncensored letter. Without warning he had come for her, and at sight of him she had been guilty of the only fit of hysteria that marked her life, before or after the episode.

So, then, from twelve to nineteen she was happy. They had come to Chicago in 1885, when she was sixteen. There they remained. Selina attended Miss Fister's Select School for Young Ladies. When her father brought her there he had raised quite a flutter in the Fister breast—so soft-spoken was he, so gentle, so sad-appearing, so winning as to smile. In the investment business, he explained. Stocks and bat kind of thing. A widower. Miss Fister said, yes, she understood.

Simeon Peake had had nothing of the look of the professional gambler of the day. The wide slouch hat, the flowing moustache, the glittering eye, the too-bright boots, the gay cravat, all were missing in Simeon Peake's makeup. True, he did sport a singularly clear white diamond pin in his shirt front; and his hat he wore just a little on one side. But then, these both were in the male mode and quite commonly seen. For the rest he seemed a mild and suave man, slim, a trifle diffident, speaking seldom and then with a New England drawl by which he had come honestly enough, Vermont Peake that he was.

Chicago was his meat. It was booming, prosperous. He played in good luck and bad, but he managed somehow to see to it that there was always the money to pay for the Fister schooling. Selina was happy. She knew only such young people—girls—as she met at Miss Fister's school.

Her chum was Julie Hempel, daughter of August Hempel, the Clark street butcher. You probably now own some Hempel stock, if you're lucky; and eat Hempel bacon and Hempel hams cured in the hickory, for in Chicago the distance from butcher of 1885 to packer of 1890 was only a five-year leap.

Being so much alone developed in her a gift for the make-believe. In a comfortable, well-dressed way she was a sort of mixture of Dick Swiveller's Marchioness and Sarah Crewe. Even in her childhood she extracted from life the double enjoyment that comes usually only to the creative mind. "Now I'm doing this. Now I'm doing that," she told herself while she was doing it. Looking on while she participated. Perhaps her theater-going had something to do with this. At an age when most little girls were not only unheard but practically unseen, she occupied a grown-up seat at the play, her rapt face, with its dark serious eyes, glowing in a sort of luminous pallor as she sat proudly next her father.

In this way Selina, half-hidden in the depths of an orchestra seat, wriggled in ecstatic anticipation when the curtain ascended on the grotesque opening of Waverly's minstrels. She witnessed that startling innovation, a Jewish play, called "Sam'l of Posen." She saw Fannie Davenport in "Pique." Simeon even took her to a performance of that shocking and delightful form of new entertainment, the Extravaganza.

"The thing I like about plays and books is that anything can happen. Anything! You never know," Selina said.

"No different from life," Simeon Peake assured her. "You've no idea the things that happen to you if you just relax and take them as they come."

Curiously enough, Simeon Peake said this, not through ignorance, but deliberately and with reason. In his way and day he was a very modern father. "I want you to see all kinds," he would say to her. "I want you to realize that this whole thing is just a grand adventure. A fine show. The trick is to play in it and look at it at the same time."

"What whole thing?"

"Living. All mixed up. The more kinds of people you see, and the more things you do, and the more things that happen to you, the richer you are. Even if they're not pleasant things. That's living. Remember, no matter what happens, good or bad, it's just so much"—he used the gambler's term, unconsciously—"just so much velvet."

But Selina, somehow understood. "You mean that anything's better than being Aunt Sarah and Aunt Abbie."

"Well—yes. There are only two kinds of people in the world that really count. One kind's wheat and the other kind's emeralds."

"Fanny Davenport's an emerald," said Selina, quickly, and rather surprised to find herself saying it.

"Yes. That's it."

"And—and Julie Hempel's father—he's wheat."

"By golly, Sele!" shouted Simeon Peake, "you're a shrewd little tyke!"

Julie Hempel and Selina Peake, both finished products of Miss Fister's school, were of an age—nineteen. Selina, on this September day, had been spending the afternoon with Julie, and now, adjusting her hat preparatory to leaving, she clapped her hands over her ears to shut out the sounds of Julie's importunings that she stay to supper. Certainly the prospect of the usual Monday evening meal in Mrs. Tebbitt's boarding house did not present sufficient excuse for Selina's refusal. Indeed, the Hempel supper as sketched dish for dish by the urgent Julie brought little greedy groans from Selina.

"It's prairie chickens—three of them —that a farmer west of town brought Father. Mother fixes them with stuffing, and there's currant jell. Creamed onions and baked tomatoes. And for dessert, apple roll."

Selina snapped the elastic holding her high-crowned hat under her chignon of hair in the back. She uttered a final and quavering groan. "On Monday nights we have cold mutton and cabbage at Mrs. Tebbitt's. This is Monday."

"Well then, silly, why not stay?"

"Father comes home at six. If I'm not there he's disappointed."

Julie, plump, blonde, placid, forsook her soft white banishments and tried steel against the steel of Selina's decision.

"He leaves you right after supper. And you're alone every night until twelve and after."

"I don't see what that has to do with it." Selina said stiffly. "If I'm not there he's disappointed. And that terrible Mrs. Tebbitt makes eyes at him. He hates it there."

"Then I don't see why you stay. I never could see. You've been there four months now, and I think it's horrid and stuffy, and 'ohcioh on the stairs'."

"Father has had some temporary business setbacks."

Julie, fond though defented, kissed her friend good-by.

Selina walked quickly the short distance from the Hempel house to Tebbitt's, on Dearborn avenue. Up in her second-floor room she took off her hat and called to her father, but he had not yet come in. She was glad of that. She had been fearful of being late. She regarded her hat with some distaste, decided to rip off the faded spring roses, did rip a stitch or two, only to discover that the hat material was more faded than the roses, and that the uncovered surface showed up a dark splotch like a wash spot when a picture, long hung, is removed. So she got a needle and prepared to tack the offending rose in its accustomed place.

Perched on the arm of a chair near the window, taking quick deft stitches, she heard a sound she had never heard before, and yet, hearing it, recognized it by one of those pangs, centuries old, called woman's instinct. Thud—shuffle —thud shuffle—up the narrow stairway, along the passage. She stood up, the needle poised in her hand. The hat fell to the floor. Her eyes were wide, fixed. Her lips slightly parted. The listening look. She knew.

She knew even before she heard the hoarse man's voice saying, "Lift 'er up, there a little on the corner, now. Easy —e-e-easy." And Mrs. Tebbitt's high shrill clamor: "You can't bring it in there! You hadn't ought to bring it in here like this!"

Selina's suspended breath came back. She was panting now. She had flung open the door. A hat still burden, partially covered with an overcoat carelessly flung over the face. The feet, in their square-toed boots, wobbled listlessly. Selina noticed how shiny the boots were. He was always very finicking about such things.

Simeon Peake had been shot in Jeff Hankins' place at five in the afternoon. The irony of it was that the bullet had not been intended for him at all. The derelict course had been due to feminine aim. Sped by one of those overdramatic ladies who, armed with horsewhip or pistol in tardy defense of their honor, spangled Chicago's dull '80s with their doings, it had been meant for a well-known newspaper publisher usually mentioned (in papers other than his own) as a town wivant. The lady's leaden remonstrance was to have been proof of the fact that he had been more vivacious than bon.

Well, that's the end of her little world for Selina. What next for the orphan girl?

Greeting Cancels Stamp

One of the most original stamp cancellations ever put on a piece of United States mail was that used by the postmaster at Cassville, Wis., June 25, 1852, when he wrote "Good Morning, Edward" across the stamp when he recognized the name of the addressee as that of one of his personal friends.

Results Expected From Pure Breds

Information Based on Average Experience of Many Owners of Stock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A report just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture on the progress of the better sires, better stock campaign for the improvement of domestic animals states briefly why pure bred animals excel other kinds. The information is based on the average experience of hundreds of stock owners who have been in a position to make comparisons. It thus points to the results which other farmers who are considering the improvement of their live stock may expect from pure bred sires and also from the combined use of pure bred sires and pure bred dams.

Summary of Points.

Following is a summary of the points in which pure breds excel:

Based on utility alone, pure bred live stock has an earning power from a third to one-half greater than scrub stock. Pure breds excel other stock in: Superiority and uniformity in conformation and type, greater sale value, easy maturity, and economy in the conversion of feed into meat, milk, wool and work.

Surplus pure breds are salable at satisfactory prices in a majority of cases.

The progeny of pure bred sires has practically a 50 per cent greater sale value than the progeny of sires not pure bred.

Better breeding, combined with proper and adequate feed, practically prevents runty live stock, of which the average farm has about 7 per cent.

Well bred beef cattle, sheep, and swine yield from 5 to 10 per cent more meat than inferior animals of the same live weight, and the meat is of better quality.

Improved live stock makes about 40 per cent more profitable use of feed than common stock. Pure breds excel grades, and grades excel scrubs.

The use of pure bred sires leads to the ownership and use of fully six times as many pure bred female animals.

Points of Pure Breds.

The foregoing brief conclusions are based on thorough analyses of large numbers of reports. The movement for better live stock which the department is conducting, in co-operation with the various states, has resulted in a gradually increasing recognition of the many points in which well bred animals are superior to ordinary live stock. The study and control of animal breeding are among the most important and practical means of making live stock enterprises more profitable to farmers and also of improving the quality of meats.

Good Varieties of Trees to Plant in an Orchard

Much disappointment has resulted in many sections from the planting of inferior or second-grade trees, often because stock of that kind could be bought cheaply. Trees have been misrepresented by unscrupulous fruit-tree peddlers who had no other interest than to dispose of a bunch of cull trees. Considerable misinformation as to how trees should be grown is current.

First-grade nursery trees suitable for average planting will consist of well-grown, trees of sufficient size for their age, free from disease and insect pests. Trees which are considerably undersized or extremely oversized should be rejected. Gnarly, misshapen stock seldom develops into satisfactory trees.

These are varieties of apples, peaches, cherries, plums and grapes recommended by the Kansas State Agricultural college for planting an acre orchard:

Apple—One Livland Raspberry, one Oldenburg or Yellow Transparent, five Jonathan, five Grimes Golden, four Delicious, four Winesap; four Champion or York Imperial, four Stayman Winesap.

Peach—Two Belle of Georgia, two Champion, two Elebarta.

Cherry—Three Early Richmond, eight Montmorency.

Plum—Two Wild Goose, two Abundance or Burbank.

Grape—Six Moore Early, six Concord or three Worden and three Concord, six Niagara, six Catawba or Delaware or Brighton.

Root Crops for Poultry Reduce Feed Expenses

By feeding more roots and vegetables the average poultry raiser can reduce his feeding expenses very much and also increase the egg yield. The cheapest feed is that which will make hens lay and the way to make hens lay is to keep them in good health. It is quite impossible to have the flock in good laying condition when only grain is given.

Such foods as carrots, turnips and potatoes are not rich in egg-producing elements. Yet they perform a service which renders all the other foods used considerably more valuable. Let the farmer or dairyman give his cows nothing but corn and his supply of milk would soon be reduced. It is the same with hens, and the egg yield as well. From a standpoint of dietary principles the use of roots is recommended and this will enable one to feed more hens and get a greater egg yield with little or no extra cost.

Bulletin on Caring for Farm Woodlands

Knowledge of Forestry Is Profitable in Farming.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"A knowledge of farm forestry, applied along simple lines, should make farming more profitable," according to the bulletin "Forestry Lessons on Home Woodlands," just revised by the United States Department of Agriculture for general distribution.

The bulletin gives the farm woodland a distinctive place in the management of the farm and in the development of the community. The various chapters take up the important local kinds of trees and their uses, the proper location of woodlands on farms, their economic value, the different farm timber products, measuring and marketing timber, utilizing timber correctly, protecting and improving woodlands, and planting young timber.

This bulletin has been prepared to give to the organized school work in elementary and secondary agriculture additional impetus in forestry. It provides material for instruction and furnishes a topic for home projects in forestry that may be worked out profitably in many communities. The bulletin contains subject matter material and a plan of study which should be of real educational value to the pupils themselves.

"Forestry Lessons on Home Woodlands" may be secured on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., free of charge as long as the supply lasts. After that it may be secured from the government printing office, Washington, D. C., for 15 cents a copy.

Powdery Mildew Disease Often Very Troublesome

Powdery mildew is another disease which occasionally is troublesome, although it is not usually so. As the name would indicate, when leaves are attacked by this disease, they take on a white, powdery appearance. Generally bordeaux mixture, such as one would use for leaf blight, will control this disease.

There are other diseases which attack the strawberry from time to time but they are not universal enough to need special mention at this time, and where they are largely local in character, the county agents or the state agricultural experiment stations are generally equipped to give the desired information on such insects and diseases.

Pollination of Cherry in Northwest Sections

Studies of sweet cherry pollination in the Northwest have revealed that some of the best varieties, such as Bing, Lambert and Napoleon, are not only self-sterile but are inter-sterile with each other. Two of the best varieties with which to pollinate the above are Long Stem Waterhouse and Black Tartarian. C. L. Long of Oregon and Mr. D. Armstrong of Washington are demonstrating the top working of some of the commercial plantings to these pollen-producing varieties. H. B. Tukey of the Hudson valley section of New York reports results which agree pretty closely with western results. Considering these results, it does not seem advisable for growers to maintain solid plantings of the Bing, Lambert and Napoleon cherries.

Mineral Supplements Is Subject of a Bulletin

"Mineral elements are not to be regarded as medicines to be fed in doses, but as foods to be supplied daily," says L. S. Palmer of the Minnesota agricultural experiment station in special bulletin No. 94 entitled "Minerals for Farm Animals."

Five mineral elements are ever likely to be lacking in farm rations—sodium, chlorine, iodine, phosphorus and calcium. Common salt supplies the first two. Iodine can be supplied by feeding sodium or potassium iodide, or as sea salt from which the iodine has not been removed by refining, or as commercially iodized common salt. For phosphorus and calcium deficiency the mineral supplements must be bonemeal, spent bone black, or raw rock phosphate floats. Spent bone black is not a uniform product; only that which has been used by the sugar refineries should be fed. Fertilizer bonemeal is not recommended.

SCHOOL BOARDS RIGHTS UPHELD

SUPREME COURT SAYS REVENUES TO BE RECEIVED MAY BE PLEDGED AS SECURITY

Montgomery. — The Montgomery County Board of Education has authority to borrow money for the expenses of the current year, to be secured by a pledge of revenues for the succeeding year, under a decision by the supreme court, which affirmed the Montgomery circuit court in the case of J. W. Heustess against the Montgomery County Board of Education. This case involving the power of county boards of education to make loans is of interest to a number of other counties.

The case involving interpretations of section 104 of the school code was brought by Heustess in the lower court, seeking an injunction to restrain the county board of education from borrowing money for current expenses and securing the loan by a pledge of revenue for the school year beginning October 1, 1925. Circuit Judge Walter B. Jones decided in favor of the county board, holding that the board had authority to incur indebtedness for current expenses and as evidence of such indebtedness to give to the creditor an interest bearing warrant upon the treasurer of the county schools funds to be paid out of the proceeds of the county three-mill tax available after October 1, 1925. This decision was affirmed by the supreme court.

The supreme court in its opinion in the case state: "The wisdom or expediency of conferring power to draw on future revenues is a legislative and not a judicial question. That such power is liable to abuse by an improvident board evidently suggested the limit of outstanding loans fixed in the final sentence of section 104. It is fair to say this record shows no improvidence or abuse of the power conferred. It appears there was an accumulated deficit charged against the revenues of the present year greater than the sum to be borrowed, and that a large part of the county tax is now charged with carrying and retiring warrants issued to erect public school buildings in Montgomery County."

STATE NEWS

One hundred gallons of milk were condemned by Birmingham health authorities in their campaign to remedy conditions which developed while daily inspection was temporarily halted on account of the city hall fire. Samples of milk collected by inspectors on orders of L. C. Bulmer, chief of dairy inspection, were shown by standard. Since this milk had been analysis to be below the required delivered to pasteurization plants, action against the producers was confined to condemnation proceedings. "We ascertained," Bulmer said, "that some of the milk supply was watered immediately after the fire, but our inspectors now are on the job again and the supply is normal.

Twelve cattle dipping vats in Mobile County have been blown up during the past few days, according to a report filed with the board of county commissioners. All the vats were charged with dipping fluid at the time and were blown to pieces by the charges of dynamite. According to county officials, the explosions resulted from some of the rural inhabitants being against tick eradication work.

The Barred Rock is owned by Mrs. D. T. Tatum, of LaFayette, Ala. She has 155 eggs to her credit in 25 weeks or 175 days, compared with 140 eggs for the Rhode Island Red owned by Oscar Reinhart, of Birmingham.

The value of the present site of Birmingham's city hall has increased 1,000 per cent since the city bought it in 1873. Records of the probate court show that on Dec. 22 of that year the city bought from the Elyton Land Company the quarter block for $1,000. Now that same site is valued at $1,000,000, less than 52 years later.

At a joint meeting of the Dallas County Board of Education and the city school board of Selma it was decided after weeks of looking into the question, to circulate a petition in Dallas County and also in Selma asking that an election be called for the purpose of levying a one-mill school tax to be levied on all property in Dallas County, including Selma, the proceeds to be available for financing the schools for next year. Only 250 signatures are necessary to call an election, but it is hoped by the school boards to have the expression of opinion of a large number of voters and free holders as shown by their signature.

Leonard's dog is a collie. He is a very handsome, very intelligent, very playful collie.

He loves to play and romp and skip and jump. He looks so happy when he is playing that he really does smile!

Sometimes he barks in such a jolly fashion that anyone hearing him knows quite well that it is laughter.

The collie doesn't laugh and play all the time. Sometimes he is very busy.

But he thoroughly enjoys being busy.

Leonard is the superintendent of a city apartment house. That means that he looks after everything and sees that all is in good order.

The collie helps in this. When Leonard is ready to begin work, the collie is ready, too, and thumps his tail on the ground and looks at Leonard as much as to say:

"I'm ready, master. I'm all ready."

First of all the collie takes a morning newspaper to every apartment door. Leonard gives him the papers in the order of the way they are to be delivered and the collie has a route laid out. First he goes to all the apartments on the street floor beginning with the one on the left, going around to the right.

Then he goes up to the next flight.

Then the third.

Then the fourth.

Then the fifth.

Then the sixth.

Then the seventh.

And then the top floor of all, which is the eighth. And at each apartment on each of these floors the collie leaves a morning paper.

He does this every evening, too, with the evening papers. There are some apartments where they always want to say a good-morning to the collie, so he lets them know he is outside by thumping his tail against the door which is his way of knocking, and also by giving a low bark.

Then they open the door and thank the collie for their paper and pat him, and now and again give him some nice present such as a delightful bone.

"I'm Ready, Master."

Later the collie delivers the mail.

He is very careful not to hurt the letters and not to get anything wet, and he carries the letters so carefully. Of course, Leonard helps him with this, as there are so many letters and the collie wants to be so careful that he doesn't carry many at a time.

Leonard is so proud of the way his dog helps him and whenever you see the collie you know that Leonard is not far off.

Whenever you see Leonard you know that the collie is not far off.

When Leonard goes to the apartments to mend broken chairs or fix the electric lights or stop a leak, the collie goes, too.

If the people in an apartment where Leonard goes do not care particularly for dogs, the collie stays outside, but if they like dogs, the collie sits just inside the door and waits for Leonard.

Almost everyone in these apartments likes the collie, for they know what a wonderful dog he is.

He is so intelligent and so friendly.

The whole truth is that everyone thinks a lot of Leonard. And everyone thinks a lot of Leonard's dog.

But Leonard simply thinks all the world of his dog and his dog thinks all the world of him.

He is known as Leonard's dog. Leonard calls him "Pup," which is the name he has always called him since he was a little pup.

But everyone else says "Leonard's dog."

How Should He Know?

"Where were you yesterday, Tommy Cribbs?" asked the teacher.

"Please, mum, I had a toothache," answered Tommy.

"Has it stopped?" asked the teacher sympathetically.

"I don't know," said Tommy.

"What do you mean, boy? You don't know if your tooth has stopped aching?"

"No, mum, the dentist kept it."—Los Angeles Times.

CHILD'S BEST LAXATIVE IS CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

MOTHER! Even constipated, bilious, feverish, or sick, colic Babies and Children love to take genuine "California Fig Syrup." No other laxative regulates the tender little bowels so nicely. It sweetens the stomach and starts the liver and bowels without griping. Contains no narcotics or soothing drugs. Say "California" to your druggist and avoid counterfeits. Her Own Business

A woman, charged with assault upon a neighbor, pleaded not guilty.

The prosecutor leaned forward, shook his finger in her face and shouted: "If we prove you guilty, which we will do, will you tell us why you committed this offense?"

"I will not!" retorted the defendant, hotly. "I had my own reasons."

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.

A committee is appointed so that one man can do the work and divide the responsibility.

CATCHES FINE STRING OF FISH LAST FRIDAY

Mr. Hugh Foshee, one of Clanton's fishermen, but one on whose word you can depend when it comes to fishing stories, caught a large string of fish last Friday, using his reel. He brought the fish back as proof of his success and besides, loaded them in a large basket and with ice packed around them caught No. 3 south for Montgomery, where he enjoyed a fish supper with his daughter.

Robert Sessions Oratorical Winner

Robert Sessions of Birmingham, last Friday night won the national oratorial contest with six competitors chosen in regional contests from among about 1,400,000 starters.

The finals which were held in Washington's new auditorium with an opening address by President Coolidge, were judged by Chief Justice Taft, Justices Van DeVanter, Butler and Sanford of the supreme court, and Attorney General Sargent. All of the orations dealt with the federal constitution.

The winner, who is 15 years old, was the youngest of the seven contestants. Eugene P. McElmeel of Los Angeles, aged 16, was rated second; Max N. Kroloff of Sioux City, Ia., third; Miss Flora Longnecker of Ilion, N. Y. fourth; Miss Asenath Graves of Washington, D. C., fifth; George Stansell of Chicago, sixth and Phillip Glatfelter of Columbia, Pa., seventh. Both of the girls were 16 years old and all of the boys except Sessions and McElmeel, were 17.

Mr. R. E. Sessions, Sr., was a former principal of our city school. To make the story more interesting, he wooed and won his assistant, Miss Lula Strickland right here in Clanton.

We are not surprised that so high an honor should be conferred upon R. E. Sessions, Junior, for God blessed him with superior parents.

Our congratulations are extended to Robt., we have our eyes on him, and we predict that life holds many other successes for him.

Don't miss one of the big Dolls at Tom Kemp's. Come and see them.

People Very Appreciative of News' New Features

We are indeed appreciative of the kind expressions of the people on the enlargement of the News to an eight-page 7-column paper.

This is the largest paper as a regular every-week edition attempted by any paper ever published in Clanton, and the management of the News wishes to thank each and every one for the hearty cooperation extended. We promise value received as long as we are among you, and will even be watchful for anything that will better the paper.

We are continually changing our machinery and equipment so as to give you the best paper possible.

The features we are carrying from week to week would cost you several dollars to buy, but they are yours gratis if you are a subscriber to the News.

The News is now running a regular department devoted to foods and their preparation in addition to the many other features. Women readers know it as "The Kitchen Cabinet," written by Miss Nellie Maxwell. We don't know how other recipes are created, but we do know something about Miss Maxwell's.

Nellie Maxwell likes to cook. When she was a young girl she helped in her mother's kitchen in their home at Neenah, Wis. Entering high school, she took up domestic science and tried out on the family cook stove the things she learned in the schoolroom.

Any recipe appearing in The kitchen Cabinet can be relied upon to produce a successful and palatable dish for your table. Your task will be free of experiment; Miss Maxwell has done all of that in her own kitchen laboratory. Freak concoctions and those calling for ingredients not easily obtainable in small communites are absent from her column.

Good housekeepers are always glad to surprise their family and friends with new dishes prepared from sound recipes. Experiments often cost time and money, not to mention the embarassment which results when a new dish goes wrong.

Women readers who are following Kitchen Cabinet suggestions are introducing to their tables the variety demanded of the good housekeeper. They will tell you that Miss Maxwell's advice is dependable and sound. Read what she offers today and then watch the folks sit up and take notice.

Clanton Boy Weds at Shrine Circus

The feature of the recent Shrine circus put on in Birmingham was [illegible] proved to be none other than a Clanton boy, Mr. Willis Reuben Lowe. His bride was Miss Salome Hawkins of Birmingham. Here is the way one of the Birmingham papers carried the story

The time: 9:24, Wednesday evening, April 29, 1925

The place: City auditorium.

Principal characters: Miss Salome Hawkins, Willis Reuben [illegible] Jr., George R. Etuart, wedding attendants audience of 5,000

These are the introductory remarks in the drama of married life begun Wednesday night by the young Birmingham people who were married in a public wedding ceremony as a feature of the Zamora Shrine circus.

Municipal auditorium filled rapidly through the 7:30 performance of the circus. As the final act was finished, seats were added in every possible space. A white cloth was spread leading to the stage and the wedding was begun.

Charles H. Locke, brother-in-law of the bride, gave the bride away. The matron of honor was Mrs. Charles S. Locke and the bridesmaids, Miss Rachael Jaxon, Miss Magarette Hawkins and Miss Texie Mae Nolen.

The best man was H. G. Candle and these were in the wedding party Robert T. Carlysle, Albert Warnock and Julian Wesley. Flower girls were Beatrice Downey and Margaret Boarman, and the ring bearer was Kenneth Brooks, age 3.

As the party came from the rear entrance to the auditorium, a spot light was thrown from the rear and followed them to the stage. When the wedding party had assembled, Dr. George R. Stuart, pastor of the First Methodist church, read the service.

On the completion of the ceremony, the bridegroom kissed the bride and a loud burst of applause came from the audience which occupied every available seat in the auditorium and crowded all possible standing room in the aisles.

The party posed for pictures and then dispersed, the bride and bridegroom running to the exit and making a hasty departure.

There was only a small group who knew who the bridal couple was to be, before the actual ceremony was performed. Extreme secrecy had prevailed and those in charge of the affair had announced only that a public wedding would be solemnized. This proved to be enough of an attraction, however, for the large throng of curiosity seekers

Y. W. A's ENTERTAIN BASE BALL TEAM.

On Tuesday evening the Y. W. A's entertained the high school base ball team in the home of Misses Jewell and Pearl Minor.

The hospitable Minor home had been prettily arranged for the occasion with cut flowers, ferns and streamers of the school colors, blue and gold, draped tastefully here and there.

Contests that were interesting and ppropriate, music, fragments of popular songs and light conversation were mediums for entertaining throughout the evening.

The color scheme was accentuated in the delightful ice course.

The large embossed cake was also in blue and gold. The cutting of the cake evoked much laughter for it contained the various luck symbols.

TOUR OF INSPECTION.

Mesdames. Beauchamp and Annie Wynn Dillard of Montgomery came up from Montgomery on last Thursday evening and attended the Clanton O. E. S. in the evening as inspectors.

After the meeting a tempting ice course was served.

MOTOR BOAT RIDE.

By special invitation of Dr. and Mrs. Gowan the following guests enjoyed a thoroughly delightful motor boat ride on Sunday afternoon: Mr. and Mrs. V J. Heard, Mary Heard, Mr. and Mrs. P. D. Wilson, Arthur Johnson, Jr., two Armstrong children, Mrs. Curry Dr. Gowan and family.

The party left the city about 1:30 o'clock and motored directly to the site of Dr. Gowan's mill, about four miles above Mitchell Dam.

Mr. Blalock, who operates the tug-boat, "Ruth" was already at the steering-wheel. The Clanton party with the Blalock family, boarded the vessel and then full two or three hours were spent in riding and regaling ourselves with the Coosa's beautiful scenery.

Down stream to Mitchell Dam then up stream to where "Bee branch flows into Coosa. We proceded for about three or four miles up "Bee Branch" to Dr. Gowan's logging camp, and landed.

We plucked the brilliant colored flowers and slacked our thirst with ice cold water from nature's fountain.

The trip in its entirety was wholly enjoyable. The party returned to the city in the early evening, wonderfully refreshed from the afternoon's trip.

In the country around Frankfort-on-the-Main in Germany, young men are advertising for wives, but are specifying that "they must not be too modern." Some of the advertisers use the name of relatives who have been engaged to do the negotiating for them and the weeding out of the unsuitable so that the young men who want to marry will not be embarrassed by turning down any applicant for sufficient but hard-to-explain reasons.

Maniac's Frolic

An escaped lunatic at Binghamton, N. Y., drove a Lackawanna flagman from his station, then filled his pipe and sat down to take things easy until he found he had no match. A train whistled. Flagging the train he asked the engineer for a "light." That was more fun than he had counted on, so every train was stopped after that while engineers and trainmen tried to make out what the "new flagman" was up to. But hospital attendants found their missing ward and his vacation was short-lived.—Capper's Weekly.

WILD TURKEY FAMILY

Wild turkeys are we,
Wild turkeys are we.
So shy, but so free.
So shy, but so free.
We strut and we gobble,
We strut and we gobble;
We strut and are hobble.
We walk and we hobble.
Wild turkeys are we,
So shy, but so free.
Gobble, gobble, gobble.
Gobble, gobble, gobble.

So gobbled the wild turkeys as they strutted about by themselves.

Billie Brownie had come to see them, and they were not afraid of Billie Brownie.

Mother Nature had told them that Billie Brownie was coming to visit them.

She had told them that Billie Brownie had been given special permission by her to understand the language of all her children, and that he liked to hear what her children did, and what were their ways.

Then he went back and told these stories of their ways to the Brownies and Elves and Fairies and Gnomes, Old Witty Witch, Old Mr. Giant, and the members of the Oaf and Bogey families.

Also he sent these stories by his messengers, the Breeze Brothers, so that others would know them too.

She had told the turkeys that Billie Brownie would never hurt any one or anything.

So they had plucked up their courage and had sung this song. They were too shy to have a new line every time, as they knew they would have to get used to one before having the nerve to go on to another. That was the reason why they sung every line twice.

They greeted Billie Brownie, gobble-gobbling in their best fashion, and Billie Brownie greeted them by a beautiful, low bow.

"The ladies in the family," said old Mr. Wild Turkey, "are smaller than the gentlemen, nor do they wear such gay plumage.

"We live in the woods, but we always like to have running water near our home. A stream is something we like to have near by.

"We've heard that people liked to have running water in their houses. Well, we like to have it near at hand.

"We hunt for our food by day and we sleep in the highest of high trees at night. Lots of us roost in a row.

"Our plumage is more beautiful than the plumage of our domestic cousins, though you couldn't mistake us if you had seen them.

"You'd know we were related.

"Our eggs are laid upon the soft,

Billie Brownie Greeted Them.

leafy, wooded earth, and they are tan-white in color with brown spots upon them.

"We are very much like our domestic cousins except we're larger and a bit finer.

"We strut in the same fashion. We gobble in the same fashion.

"But we want to keep away from people.

"They hunt us and we don't want to be hunted.

"It may be all right for our domestic cousins.

"Get all the food they can, and then give themselves us food. That's their way.

"But our way is different.

"So you don't find us in the East where the people have crowded us out and hunted us until we've moved away from them.

"Oh, we're very shy.

"But why not?

"We want to keep away from people as we've found we're safe then.

"People have made us shy. People who have hunted us. Really you can hardly blame us for being shy.

"Gobble, gobble, gobble.

"We're wild, wild, and free!"

TOGS FOR THE FLOWER GIRL; BRIDE'S SUMMER TROUSSEAU

FROM the pictorial viewpoint, almost as important as the bride herself is the little flower girl who attends her. Since the mission of this adorable miss is to "add to the picture" not only must she be befrocked in charming fashion, but she must contribute in her costuming a harmonious note to the color symphony expressed in the wedding scene.

In the fashioning of a winsome frock for the little flower maiden, as with the artist who produces a lovely picture, it is not the medium used to produce the masterpiece, but is genius that counts. Which applied to the styling of picturesque costume for the tiny flower attendant means that the modest home dressmaker who has the fire of imagination within her and the cunning to do will create a frock of as enchanting grace for the wee flower girl from inexpensive yet colorful cotton voile or organdie as will Mademoiselle-of-renown who insists on using only fabrics most costly.

This is especially true in regard to the exquisitely colorful voiles shown this season. They come in lovelicst flower colorings, sheer unto the point of transparency. Best of all they are washable, they cost but a few cents a yard. As to effectiveness, not even the most expensive silks can surpass them. While the beautiful little dress in the picture was fashioned of peach-colored silk crepe, it would be just as attractive developed of sheer voile or organdie. It is the clever placement of the narrow valenciennes lace ruffings which gives it charm, together with an inset of wider lace.

A unique collar effect forming streamers at the back of the neck, which float out like butterfly wings adds charm to the flower-girl frock.

Carrying a large leghorn hat filled with roses adds a picturesque feature to the tiny tot's costumes.

The season of the bride and her trousseau is upon us. Therefore are the ateliers of the most famous couturiers, likewise the workrooms of the humblest seamstress and home dressmaker buzzing with pleasurable excitement. Under the magic spell of radiant brides-to-be, who flutter in and out giving their joyous orders, genius becomes inspired to create raiment of transcendent loveliness.

Assuming that the hope chest is filled to overflowing with dainty lingerie and lovely bits of finery, and that the bridal gown and veil are safely reposing ready for the supreme moment midst orange blossoms and tissue paper wrappings the next logical number on the trousseau program is the "going away" costume. What shall it be? An ensemble of course consisting of frock and coat to match. Since it solves, not only a dress problem, but that of a wrap as well, it behooves the bride-to-be to give most careful forethought to this all-important ensemble costume.

Material? That depends—of course if one is going to motor across country or indulge in outdoor sports then flannel, kasha cloth, fine wool twill or things knitted are the proper thing and the two-piece jumper-suit superbly tailored is recommended, with a long coat to match. If, however, one wishes to begin the journey in a costume of simple elegance, yet of more formal aspect, why not choose one of the new stylish silk weaves? The mode enthusiastically endorses crepe faille, crepe satin and bengaline.

The model in the picture suggests a delightsome honeymoon costume. The fact that it is crepe faille silk makes it ideal for summer time wear. In either wood-brown or navy blue, one might tastefully develop this ensemble. The simplicity of the coat insures a practical wrap with other frocks as well as with the one it complements. The manner in which the embroidered pocket-like panel holds the fullness of the skirt in place, is unique.

If great matters men show themselves as they wish to be seen: in small matters, as they are.

SUMMERY FOODS

Jellied meats, vegetables and fruits are always best enjoyed in the hot weather.

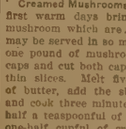
Jellied Veal and Ham.—Take a shank of veal that has not been trimmed, wash and place in a kettle, pouring over it a pint of boiling water for each pound of shank. Add one-fourth cupful each of chopped carrots, minced onion and sliced celery, a few sprigs of parsley, a bay leaf, eight peppercorns, one-eighth teaspoonful of thyme and two teaspoonfuls of salt. Cook slowly until the meat falls from the bones, cool under weight, then it may be cut into slices. Strain the liquor through a fine sieve, cool, and remove all of the fat. Clarify the stock, using two eggs and crushed shells for each pint of stock, boil ten minutes, strain through a cheesecloth, add one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of cayenne. Into a cold, wet mold or bread pan, pour a little of the clarified veal broth and allow it to stiffen. On this lay thin slices of the veal and very thinly sliced cooked ham. Cover with broth, cool until stiff, repeat until all the broth is used. Chill for several hours and turn from the mold. If the weather is very hot and there seems to be danger of the broth not stiffening add two tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been softened in cold water.

Stuffed Celery. Mix chopped nuts with cream cheese and fill the hollows of tender celery stalks, adding a bit of mayonnaise to moisten the cream cheese. If filled carefully the stalks may be eaten from the fingers as one does plain celery.

When currants are plentiful can some fresh with sugar for winter. They are delicious. Crush every currant, using a potato masher; use an equal measure of sugar, stir and let stand until the sugar has been dissolved, then put into chilled sterilized jars and seal. Keep in a cool place; on a cellar floor or in the back part of the ice chest a row of small cans will be out of the way. Strawberries, raspberries, blackberries and all such soft fruits may be canned in this way and used as fresh fruit in winter for shortcakes.

Food for the Family.

There are so many ways of serving potatoes that we should endeavor to vary the method from day to day.



O'Brien Potatoes.—Fry three cupfuls of cubed potatoes in deep fat, drain and sprinkle with salt. Cook one slice of onion in one-half tablespoonful of butter three minutes, remove the onion add three canned pimentoes finely minced. When well-heated, add the potatoes; stir until well-mixed, turn into a serving dish and sprinkle with chopped parsley.

Creamed Mushrooms on Toast.—The first warm days bring up the field mushroom which are so delicious and may be served in so many ways. Clean one pound of mushrooms, remove the caps and cut both caps and stems into thin slices. Melt five tablespoonfuls of butter, add the sliced mushrooms and cook three minutes. Sprinkle with half a teaspoonful of flour; pour over one-half cupful of cream. Cook five minutes, stirring constantly. Serve on oblong pieces of toast and garnish with toast points and parsley.

Onion Puree.—Cook onions until tender, drain and put through a sieve—there should be two cupfuls. Melt two and one-half tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour, stir until well blended, then pour on one-half cupful of milk. Bring to the boiling point, add the onion puree, a well-beaten egg and season with salt and cayenne.

Bread and Butter Pudding.—Spread slices of bread generously with butter and arrange in a baking dish, butter side down. Beat three eggs slightly, add one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt and one quart of milk, pour over the bread and let stand thirty minutes. Bake one hour in a slow oven, covering the first half of the baking. Serve with hard sauce. Cream one-half cupful of sugar with one-quarter cupful of butter slightly softened and flavor with nutmeg.

Maple Cream Layer Cake.—Cream one cupful of butter, add one and one-half cupfuls of powdered sugar, and then add gradually one-half cupful of milk with one cupful each of flour and cornstarch sifted with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat well, add ten drops of bitter almond, two tablespoonfuls of orange flower water, then the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs, folding in lightly. For the filling put one and one-half cupfuls of shaved maple sugar in a saucepan, add a teaspoonful of butter and one-half cupful of thin cream; boil slowly until it spins a thread. Take off, add one teaspoonful of vanilla and beat until thick, then spread on the layers.

Chopped candied cherries, cream cheese with a bit of cream to soften, makes another delicious filling for sandwiches.

Mrs. Saunders Tells how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieved Troubles of Change of Life

Knoxville, Tenn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while going through the Change of Life. I was very nervous, could not sleep and had melancholy spells. In fact, I was nearly insane at times and my memory was almost a blank. I was so weak I could not do my housework half of the time and suffereddreadfully with my back. My doctor said I would have to worry it out and I went through this for three years before I began taking the Vegetable Compound which I saw advertised. I think it was eight bottles that I took. It has been two years since I took any and I haven't had a doctor since for that trouble. I do all my washing and ironing and I have gained from 115 to 138 pounds. I feel as well I think I do not need any medicine now, but I advise all women who suffer physically and mentally as I did to give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. I hope it will do as much for them as it did for me."—Mrs. T. A. SAUNDERS, 711 E. Depot Street, Knoxville, Tenn.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Item Shows Advance Since the Pioneer Days

"He contracted to do all the work and to furnish everything except lights for the sum of $50. It was considered a very high price, and the taxpayers made a protest against it." This information handed down to the present generation regarding the construction of an early Indiana schoolhouse indicates the change in the cost of our public buildings since pioneer days. Fifty dollars nowadays would hardly pay for the front steps of one of the big township consolidated school buildings scattered all over Indiana. But, of course, the pioneer schoolhouse was humble and simple in the extreme. The earliest ones of logs had glazed paper instead of glass for windows, the heat was furnished by fireplaces, seats were made of split logs without backs, a board supported by long wooden pins driven in the wall served as a common writing desk. Blackboards at first were very small and ware used mainly by the "master," as the teacher was called. There were no crayons, only chalk in the bulk kept in a box. What few books there were had to be used over and over again. The master often had a key book in his desk which supplied the answers to the problems in arithmetic. Instead of ringing a bell the teacher would appear at the door and summon the children from their play by calling, "Books, books," or by pounding the side of the building with a board. In addition to his other duties, the schoolmaster was required to open the building early in the morning, to build fires, to sweep out and close in the evening. A three-months' subscription school often netted the teacher not more than $30 in cash all told, but he saved his living expenses by boarding round among the families represented. One teacher, on record as being unusually provident, tapped the sugar and maple trees in the school ground and boiled down the sugar water before the fire in the schoolhouse, during school hours, thus furnishing himself with a good supply of sirup.—Indianapolis News.

Preserve the Surface

Billy, age three and a half, had been taught by his father to bring his little garden tools into the garage every evening, so they would not be left out in the dew and rain and rust.

Shortly after this habit had been established, his mother heard a commotion at the back door. She went to the door and there found Billy dragging and pulling his little brother Bobby up the steps and out of the rain which had begun to fall.

"What are you doing, Billy?" said his mother.

"I'm trying to get Bobby out of the rain, so he won't rust," said Billy.

Senatorial Quandary

Senator Swanson of Virginia was staying at a little mountain inn. The proprietor was a kindly disposed person, and before the senatorial guest retired he brought a pitcher of milk to his bed-chamber in case he got hungry before turning in.

The next morning before sunrise Senator Swanson was awakened by a great pounding on the door.

"Have you drunk that milk yet?" asked the host excitedly. "You have! Aw, mercy on us! The cow that give that milk has done swelled up and died!"

"What did you say?" The senator was now thoroughly aroused. "Where should I go, to a doctor or a vet erinary?"—Philadelphia Ledger.

To "Jump Over" Atlantic

A giant British airship, the largest in the world, a vessel of five million cubic feet capacity—more than twice as large as the German-built Z R-3 which recently crossed the Atlantic—is to be constructed for the British government by Messrs. Vickers. The vice-chairman of the firm, announcing the contract, stated, "The commercial success of airships depends much on obtaining a satisfactory engine which will enable people even to visit the United States for a week end. When we are finished we expect to do the journey within two days and to come back in perhaps quicker time."

Popular System for Sanitation

Plan Originated Few Years Ago Is Saving Hog Raisers Much Money.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the system of swine sanitation originated in the United States Department of Agriculture a few years ago is saving hog raisers large numbers of pigs and much money is shown by reports coming in continuously from various parts of the Middle West. Illinois, where the system was first tried out in McLean county, has been taking up this new method of handling sows and young pigs with a great deal of energy, and the results obtained no doubt will stimulate increasing numbers of farmers to raise pigs under sanitary precautions which will keep them free of worms.

Pigs Given Good Start.

This spring 500 farmers in 57 Illinois counties gave all the pigs farrowed a good start by having them come to clean farrowing houses after the sows had been thoroughly scrubbed. The live stock extension specialist of the University of Illinois considers that with this start half the battle in the economical production of pork has been won. He says the other half consists merely in keeping the pigs away from worm eggs until they are at least four months of age, and to do that does not require skill, but merely determination and persistence.

Reports indicate that farmers who have raised pigs the sanitation way will not go back to the old careless method. They saved more pigs, the pigs grew faster, and gain costs less, the pigs were ready for market sooner, and the profit was greater. At the experiment station farm at Urbana, Ill., a lot of sanitation pigs gained 35 pounds each while others allowed to run in old hog lots where they picked up worm eggs gained only 18 pounds. Dr. H. B. Raffensperger, of Bloomington, Ill., representative of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, reports a lot of sanitation hogs that reached a weight of 218 pounds, while others frequenting an old hog lot grew to only 182 pounds. In this case the sanitation method increased the size of the pigs 35 per cent. Hundreds of farmers in various parts of the state have reported similar and even greater gains. One man raised sanitation hogs to a weight of 300 pounds in the same time that his hogs formerly grew to only 200 pounds; another reported a ton litter of sanitation pigs averaging 272 pounds when others in the old hog pastures weighed only 150 pounds, a gain of 80 per cent. A farmer who adopted the sanitation system last year had two sows which raised 13 pigs on a half-acre of old pasture land which had been plowed and sowed to oats and rape. As this man expressed it, he had the best "luck" with these pigs that he had had in ten years.

Easiest Way to Raise Pigs.

With such enthusiasts as these men scattered throughout the state, it is highly probable that the sanitation method of hog raising will be the common method in a few years. The method is not complicated and, as one Illinois farmer expressed it, once you are fixed for handling hogs in this way, it is the easiest way to raise pigs. Briefly, all that is necessary is to have the pigs farrowed in a pen that has been thoroughly cleaned with lye and hot water, from sows that have been thoroughly scrubbed before the pigs are born. From this point on the pigs must be handled so as not to be brought in contact with old hog-lot soil polluted with worm eggs. They should be moved to clean pastures and kept away from contact with other hogs until they are four months of age, and have a good enough start to resist any worm infection that may come later.

Find Rape Superior as Pasture Crop for Pigs

When compared with other pasture crops for pigs, rape demonstrates itself the equal of any and the superior of most of them. Feeding trials at the Iowa and Ohio stations with fattening pigs on corn and tankage on pasture have shown the gains produced, feed requirements and carrying capacities of rape and alfalfa to be practically identical. Alfalfa, of course, enriches the soil as a legume and also has the ability to produce hay, neither of which is true of rape. When neither alfalfa or clover is available for the pigs, however, rape should not be omitted. It is of course, much superior to bluegrass pasture, particularly after July 1.

Orchards Need Repairs

In every fruit region there are orchards that need to be rejuvenated, made over, or repaired. These are not always old orchards. Some have not reached their prime, and some have never borne a barrel of fruit. Many such orchards have not had a chance through neglect, and others have suffered at the hands of ignorant owners.

Sweet Clover Helps

Sweet clover prepares land for alfalfa. This is especially true on any of the poorer types of soil where it is desired to grow alfalfa. The large roots of the sweet clover plants open up the subsoil and the plants inoculate soil with the proper bacteria for alfalfa. Follow the sweet clover with a cultivated crop.

Prevent Cows From Eating Garlic Tops

Disagreeable Flavor and Odor Spread Quickly.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One minute after garlic is eaten by a cow the disagreeable flavor and odor of this pungent plant may be detected in the milk. This is one of the facts brought out in an investigation carried on by the bureau of dairying, United States Department of Agriculture, and reported in Department Bulletin 1328, Effect of Garlic on the Flavor of Milk, by C. J. Babcock. The only practical way to prevent the appearance of this flavor and odor in milk in regions where the weed infests pastures is to keep the cows from eating the plant.

In the tests, which were made by giving to several persons samples of milk from cows milked at different periods after having been fed garlic and from check cows, it was found that the intensity of the bad flavor and odor increased until it reached a maximum at ten minutes after feeding the odorous ration. Bad flavor and odor were present to an objectionable degree when the cows ate one-half pound of garlic tops four hours before milking. As the time between the eating of the garlic and milking time increased, the bad flavor and odor diminished and in seven hours practically disappeared.

Not only were the garlic flavor and odor taken in by eating, but it was shown that inhaling garlic for ten minutes gives strong flavor and odor to the milk. Milk drawn 90 minutes after inhalation of garlic was practically free from objectionable flavors and odors.

Copies of the bulletin may be obtained free, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington.

Bordeaux Mixture Spray Will Protect Potatoes

When the potato plants are six inches high, spray with bordeaux mixture. See that every part of the plant, leaves, upper and under sides of the leaves, and stems are reached with the spray to protect them from blights and rust.

This spraying is very important, as it reaches the heart of the cluster of stems and leaves—which is hardest to reach as the plant grows.

Just as important is spraying to kill insect enemies. Use one-half pound of pure paris green in 50 gallons of the bordeaux mixture. Spray with the poison just as the eggs of the Colorado beetle first show signs of hatching. Make one or two more applications of the poison three to five days apart, as required.

Spray with bordeaux at least four times. Spray every ten days or two weeks until the potato tops get large enough to meet in the rows, or until they are as large as they ever will be. If you can't get in four sprayings ten days or two weeks apart while the plants are making this growth, spray oftener.

That is, do this if you are planting potatoes for profit. Careful tests in New Jersey show a profit of $40 an acre of potatoes by spraying, and similar results have been arrived at elsewhere. People who make a business of growing them for the market would never think of omitting the spraying. They know their business.

Trapping and Poisoning for Control of Gophers

Trapping and poisoning are methods recommended for the control of gophers, according to Fred D. Butcher, extension entomologist at Iowa State college. Traps set in runways should always be used to supplement other control measures. Special pocket gopher traps are advised.

For poisoning gophers, use a bait made by cutting sweet potatoes, carrots or parsnips into pieces about one inch long and about one-half inch in diameter. Wash and drain the pieces as soon as they are cut. Over one gallon of the bait sprinkle one-eighth of an ounce of powdered strychnine. Stir one or two pieces of bait into the gopher runways one or two feet from each mound. The runways may be located by means of a sharp stick or wagonbox endgate rod used as a probe and the bait dropped through the holes thus made. Close the holes after inserting the bait.

POULTRY

FACTS OF POULTRY WORTH REMEMBERING

The poultry producers who do not give their flocks the run of the farm have a problem of yard management to consider in the handling of their flocks. Where the poultry have the run of the farm this problem is not so important, but, instead, the producer has the problem of keeping the ground immediately adjacent to the houses in a sanitary condition.

It has been demonstrated in all classes of live stock that rotation of pastures is an important means of lessening disease. This has been recognized for many years in the management of sheep and is becoming more recognized in the handling of hogs under the system which is known as the McClean county system.

In the handling of poultry it is well to have double yards so that one might rotate green crops. The yards may be sown to rye, oats, wheat or any quick-growing crop and while the fowls are using one yard the green feed in the other is getting a fresh start.

If the yards are only on one side of the house it is preferable that they be on the south side in order that the birds get the benefit of the dry ground and the warm sun in the early spring.

If the yards are in permanent sod it usually requires from 70 to 80 square feet for each bird. If part of the green feed is supplied in other forms half of this amount will be sufficient.

Shade of some type is needed in the poultry yards. Fruit trees are often used for this purpose. If trees are not available then some type of artificial shade should be supplied.

Select the best eggs for hatching.

Use the mother hen when possible or hatch early chicks with incubators.

Care for early hatched baby chicks well.

Feed early baby chicks properly to give them a good start.

It is always well to clean and disinfect the houses and pens thoroughly where the pullets are to live. This is especially true if the birds formerly occupying the building have been diseased or have had worms.

Artificial lights should not be used on pullets until they have had a chance to respond to normal conditions. If they do not respond quickly enough, or if neck molt starts, then lights can be used with good effect.

Lack of ventilation causes dampness in the houses and this in turn results in colds and roup.

Sunlight a Panacea for All Kansas Hen Flocks

"Why use the ultra-violet ray machine or cod-liver oil to stimulate egg production when Kansas sunlight is so available?" asks Prof. L. F. Payne, head of the department of poultry husbandry at the Kansas State Agricultural college.

Experiments at the college have indicated that a vital element for egg production and for general vigor of poultry is provided by sunlight, by the ultra-violet ray, or by the vitamine contained in cod liver oil, and that if this element is lacking improper development results.

Professor Payne has conducted experiments which indicate that direct sunlight is more beneficial than that which comes through ordinary window glass. In an experiment contrasting egg production of pullets grown in an open house with those grown in a glass-front house the ones grown in the open house were heavier producers and had no trouble with colds or molting, while those in the glass-front house suffered from colds and from molting.

Palatability of Feeds Appreciated by Fowls

A hen does not have a keen sense of taste, but she does dislike certain feeds, and if they make up an appreciable part of the mash she will reduce the quantity eaten. Linseed meal, bean meals and ground hulls must be used only to a limited extent. Blood meals, millet are probably the best-liked nitrous feeds. Light colored mashes are usually eaten more readily than dark ones.

Undoubtedly hens or flocks develop individual likes and dislikes. Birds raised on kafir, for instance, may like it, while another flock to which it is newly introduced may practically refuse to eat it. Hens do not enjoy feed or eat as heartily when it must be dug out of a filthy litter.—O. C. Krum, Colorado Agricultural College, in Extension Bulletin 234-A, "Feeding for Commercial Egg Production."

Feed for Young Chicks

The young chicks should not be fed until they are 48 hours old, whether they are with hen or in a brooder. The first feed should consist of baked johnny-cake broken up into small pieces, or hard-boiled eggs mixed with stale bread crumbs or rolled oats, using a sufficient quantity of the latter to make a dry, crumbly mixture or a mash of two quarts of rolled oats, one part bran and one part middlings by eight, mixed with milk or with boiled

CAUSES OF SOFT SHELLED AND DEFORMED EGGS

Soft-shelled eggs are not only a nuisance in the poultry yard, but they often lead to other bad habits, such as egg-eating, feather pulling, and the like.

Soft-shelled eggs are very frequently dropped about the yard rather than in the nest. The hens finding one of these eggs out of place begin to peck at it and claw it about, resulting in its being broken, with a general hurrah following to eat it up. Particles of it are flung about upon each other. Very often this is followed by a pulling at each other's neck feathers until the vicious habit of feather pulling is really formed.

When it is found that one or more hens of a flock are laying these soft-shelled eggs it indicates that something is wrong in the feed they are getting. As a rule, it is caused by the individual hen being too fat, or overstimulated. Quite frequently owners have been overanxious to get heavy egg production, and have been giving strong stimulants, for this purpose, which has a tendency to hasten the forming of eggs at a more rapid rate than the shell material can be brought forth. Cases of inflamation of that part of the oviduct where the shell is formed have been found after this overstimulation. The best treatment for this condition of soft-shelled eggs is to stop stimulating the hens, feed less of the rich fat-forming foods, and feed a greater amount of green food, oyster shell, grit and the like, and making the hens take all the exercise you can, which will in most cases remedy the trouble. In cases where it will not in a reasonable time, the real offender should be hunted out and disposed of.

Ill-shaped and odd-shaped eggs are usually the result of very much the same conditions that produced soft-shelled eggs, except for the fact that occasionally we have hens that lay these odd-shaped eggs all the time—eggs with ridges around the center, or long and slim like radish. Hens giving such production should also be sent to the block. Eggs of this character are no good for hatching purposes, neither do they look well in the market basket. —Southern Ruralist.

Talk on Thrift Gives Advice

(By S.W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.)

It would be interesting to know how much time is wasted in the aggregate by the people of this country. Translated into terms of dollars, it would doubtless run high into the millions annually.

Noted throughout the world for their energy and capacity for hard work, Americans are nevertheless prone at times to the small vice of tardiness.

Recently large concerns have adopted the plan of establishing honor rolls and creating bonuses for punctuality. The results have been satisfactory. One company in 1921 installed a bonus amounting to about 4 cents an hour paid weekly to employees who worked full time with no lates. The plan is said to have resulted in a 33 1-3 per per cent reduction in absenteeism. Another large concern pays a cash bonus of ten per cent of one week's salary, maximum bonus not to exceed $6.00, to clerical employees who establish a perfect record for any thirty consecutive days. As a result 98.86 per cent of the 8,000 employees reported on time every day last year.

Other concerns give half-day or whole-day holidays as rewards for perfect attendance covering various period.

Punctually is an excellent example of thrift. It is not a difficult matter for the average person to be on time. It is a form of self-discipline that should be cultivated by all for it will bring its full rewards.

Public Utility Securities Are Best Investment ---Says Roger W. Babson

Think It Over---

The following statement was made by Roger W Babson at Orchestra Hall, Chicago, December 3, 1924, at a meeting held under auspices of the Chicago Board of Commerce:

"Compared with future development, public utilities are today where the railroads were seventy-five years ago when one was obliged to change cars five times when going between New York and Chicago. Most Bonds of light and power companies now being offered should some day be underlying liens of super power systems with great central generating stations. Furthermore, we as yet are only scratching the surface as to uses for electrical energy. Home, factories, railroads, and other lines should, during the next ten or fifteen years, triple the present demand for electric current.

"Unlike almost every other business, light and power companies have a very small labor item, and even this low proportion of labor expense decreases as the output increased. Almost every new important invention either increases the demand for power or decreases the cost of producing or transmitting it. Coal prices must continue to rise as railway rates increase; but the cost of transmitting electrical energy generated near the mines will decrease rather than increase. Moreover, water power developments have an exceedingly bright future—owing to the fact that the larger the generating plant, the lower the cost, such companies have nothing to fear from competition.

"I believe the securities of well managed companies supplying light, power, gas, etc., to be the best investment now available, considering both security and yield. I heartily approve customer ownership. I know of no investment paying over six per cent which is as safe as the first preferred 'Customer Ownership' stocks of such companies. When every user of a product is a stockholder of the company producing it we have a condition which will be about one hundred per cent efficient and fair."

RAINS HELPFUL

The rains of Sunday and the showers since have made a great change in the crop outlook for Chilton county. Farmers of this section had planted crops from April first on up to the present time, but on account of the extra dry spring season, the seed had not germinated, but the showers of the past few days have brought all crops into a healthy growing state, and where the farmer was getting kindly blue before the rains, his countenance is now radiant with much hope for the future.

Chilton county farmers as a rule, are up with their work, and with an average season a good crop is predicted.

Oats and other fall sowed grain had begun to show the effects of the drought, especially in the eastern part of the county, a good rain having fell in that section

Cotton looking well, but the acreage planted to cotton is still too great for the farmer to realize what he should get per pound for same.

The Chilton County News stands ready at any and all times to lend a hand in making farm life more pleasant and more profitable. It can be made the best place possible, close to nature's own; it is the embodiment of all that is pure and holy, and it is to be regretted that country boys and girls have not found that contentment.

FARMERS SHOULD NOT OVER-PLANT

If there is not some radical readjustment in general farming plans for the year there will be a lot of "frosted punkins" this fall. The government in its last report put our 1924 cotton crop at 13,618,000 bales. This is bigger by several hundred thousand bales than we figured on in any of our previous calculations, resulting in a surplus that more pointedly than ever warns us as to what is going to happen to price this fall if we grow another crop that anything like approaches that of the past year. With a carry-over of three to four million bales of lint, which we are now certain to have, plus another big crop, we are headed for a situation about as distressing as that of 1920. Nobody wants to see such a condition as that return. But what do we intend to do about it?

A few days ago the government issued its planting intentions statement and the wheat growers and the corn growers and all the rest except the cotton growers know what they are up against. However, this does not in the least degree prevent speculators and private concerns from issuing such reports. They are doing that right along. A mill concern over in North Carolina wired the New York Commercial a few days ago to the effect that there would be some increase in acreage in the Mississippi Valley and a 10 per cent increase in Alabama, Georgia and the Carolinas. Preceding this the same concern makes the statement, "Mills refuse to buy unless can get it at own price." That statement may have some connection with the intentions to plant forecast. We are told long ago that the wish is often father of the thought. They may be right, however, for we hear from other sources that the acreage is going to be increased, in spite of the fact that such a thing definitely invites disaster.

While there is an indicated intention to slightly increase the acreage of feed, yet nowhere does the increase here in the south promise to be great enough to anything like produce sufficient supplies to meet the needs of the people.

Another thing that is just as astonishing as the attitude toward cotton acreage—that is if our mill friend is correct—is the attitude of the tobacco growers. The increase in acreage in the South, if present intentions are carried out, will range from 8 to 13 per cent—this in the face of the already huge accumulation of surplus. Some of the tobacco cooperatives are even just now completing the sale of the 1922 deliveries, and there is to be an increase in acreage?

In connection with all of these questions of the year we are going to have to be careful as to whose advise we are following. The other day one of the cotton concerns up the country, is quoted in the press as saying, "As we see it we are going to need a 14,000,000 bale crop this year." And then they let the cat out of the bag with this: "The domestic industry needs lower priced cotton and more business." Hence the need for a large crop." This concern is of the emphatic opinion that another crop approximately as big as the one produced in 1924 would automatically meet "domestic industry needs with lower priced cotton." What we are needing is increased crops of practically everything else but cotton and tobacco. Any plan that does not work out that way will produce trouble. It is wisdom to face the facts now before it is too late to do anything about it.—C. A. Cobb, Southern Rural Life.

Whatever individual opinions may be held regarding the question of the publication of crime news, one fact is outstanding, namely, that criminals, so-called, take considerable pride in the terms used in refering to men. There seems to be a grading among them, but in and the experienced "gun-man" looked up to by his associates. This is fairly common to newspaper, and there is no doubt that the type of notoriety represented by these men is appealed to by the glamour surrounding this questionable kind of approbation. Now if instead of adding to this glamour, the newspapers would refer to such individuals by the terms which properly belong to them, thieves, or bandits, such publicity might do considerable good. Many a felon has become what he is through a desire for adventure as much as anything else, and no adventurer likes being referred to by any of these less romantic terms. Here is another case where calling a spade a spade would be decidedly advantageous.—Christian Science Monitor.

THE SOUTH IS NOT GETTING JUSTICE

Washington, April 25.—The demand by Senator W. J. Harris of Georgia, of the state department, as to why the south is discriminated in the matter of appointments to the consular and diplomatic service, following on the heels of the successful fight of southern senators the last session against the confirmation of Thomas W. Woodlock of New York, to be a member of the interstate commerce commission, is plainly labeled the precuror of one of the most spectacular struggles of congress.

Southern senators have made it plain that they are going to demand that the south be recognized by the appointment of southerners to boards and bureaus which, in the formulation of rates and measures, have the industrial life of the south in hand.

Senator Underwood of Alabama, during the pre-convention campaign for the presidential nomination, pointed to the fact that the south is as much ignored as if it had never re-entered the union. When a vacancy occurred on the I. C. C. some months ago southern senators in asking that a southerner be appointed, pointed that whereas that territory to the south of a line drawn from Washington to San Francisco is larger than that territory above such an imaginary line, it has no representation on a body as important as that which makes and regulate rates of railroads.

Plan To Pro-Rate I. C. C.

Senator Smith of South Carolina, at that time declared his intention at the next session of congress, to offer an amendment to the act creating the I. C. C. to the end that the membership of that body shall be pro-rated among the sections of the country, the northeast, southwest and northwest.

Before progress can be made, Senator Harris points out, it will be necessary for the south, as soon as the senate convenes, to organize to bring about the defeat of Thomas W. Woodlock, the New York rate expert, with a Wall Street complex. Then the pressure over the violent protest of the south put him on the I. C. C. as a recess appointee, after the senate had twice previously refused to confirm him. Senator Harris holds that if Woodlock is definitely disledged, the south will have taken a position from which it can make demands for recognition on all boards and bureaus.

Senator Harris again pointed out this afternoon that the south is not given proper recognition in the diplomatic and consular service, and in the appointments regulated by the civil service. He added that the south is not represented on the tariff commission, which is expected to inquire into the tariff rates, which have a direct bearing on the cost of living; on the federal trade commission which is expected to prevent and expose unfair business methods; and on the I. C. C., which regulates railroad rates.

One Exception Noted

"The single exception to the rule which indicates that the south is ignored" said Senator Harris tonight, "is the fact that a southern man is a member of the United States shipping board. It was necessary under the terms of the bill which created the board, that the gulf states be given a representative. Otherwise, it is not known whether even on that one board a southerner would have been named.

"The fact, however, that a southern man is a member of the board, has been of great value to the south. It was particularly his effort which resulted in the abandonment of a rate system which was discriminatory between the ports of the south.

"I have expressed to this effect before. It is an object lesson for southern members of congress. We must insist that the south be recognized as a part of the union with inalienable rights which must be observed."

There has never been a time when the newspapers have played a more important part in the upbuilding of community life and business conditions than in the past two years and today their power for good is being felt in a way that will mean much in community development. In other words, we have reached the time now when all elements are pulling together, when not only petty jealousies, that have hampered the growth of small communities have been set aside but when animosity and bickering between cities have been wiped out almost entirely, and one town today is only too glad to help another.—Southern California Business, Los Angeles.

DON'T DEPEND COMPLETELY UPON SPRING PASTURES

The warmth of spring is about to bring forth the anual summer pastures. To the live stock man nothing looks so good as the coming of pastures. They relieve the pocketbook of a heavy drain. They provide the cheapest practical feed. They cut down the expensive feed bills usually encountered during cold months. They are a friend in time of need.

While a pasture brings all these good things to the man who owns a cow, a farmer should know that pastures are just like all other kinds of living things At first they are young, weak. The individual plants, which when taken collectively make the pasture as a whole, are young, weak, full of water. These watery plants are too young and watery to have much "strength." Like other livingthings, they are yet in their swaddling clothes, they are immature, and since they are short on "strength" it cannot be expected that they could carry much "strength" into the body of the animal.

So be watchful that the young spring pasture is not pushed too much. Be careful that it is not overloaded with animals, else both the animals and the pasture will be injuured. One should see to it that the change from no pasture to pasture is allowed to grow in strength as the change is being made. To protect the pasture, grains should be fed to some extent. The family cow should have her winter grains carried over into the early part of the pasture season, the grains being used, in part at least, to protect the young pasture plants. The hog should also be gradually and carefully introduced to the pasture, protecting both the hogs and the pasture with some grain.

The Railroads Run Every Day in the Year - And in All Kinds of Weather

During these beautiful Spring days, when the sun is bright and the weather warm, remember that the railroads of the country rendered exceptional freight and passenger service all during the winter, when snow was on the ground, roads impassible, and weather conditions hampered every other mode of transportation.

A great many Americans have come to look on the railroads as something to be taken for granted, and to lack appreciation of the extraordinary service rendered to the Nation as a whole, and to each individual community, by the great rail transportation systems.

Operating for the past four years on a property-investment net return less by over one billion dollars than that allowed by law, the railroads of this country are delivering a more efficient freight and passenger service than ever in their history. They deserve both your patronage and your good-will.

SO BIG

(©, Doubleday, Page & Co.) WNU Service.

HIGH PRAIRIE

SYNOPSIS. — Introducing "So Big" (Dirk DeJong) in his infancy. And his mother, Selina DeJong, daughter of Simeon Peake, gambler and gentleman of fortune. Her life, to young womanhood in Chicago in 1888, has been unconventional, somewhat seamy, but generally enjoyable. At school her chum is Julie Hempel, daughter of August Hempel, butcher. Simeon is killed in a quarrel that is not his own, and Selina, nineteen years old and practically destitute, faces the question of earning a living.

It was, perhaps, because of this that the matter was pretty well hushed up. The publisher's paper—which was Chicago's foremost—scarcely mentioned the incident and purposely misspelled the name. The lady, thinking her task accomplished, had taken truer aim with her second bullet, and had saved herself the trouble of trial by human jury.

Simeon Peake left his daughter Selina a legacy of two fine clear blue-white diamonds (he had had the gambler's love of them) and the sum of four hundred and ninety-seven dollars in cash. Just how he had managed to have a sum like this put by was a mystery. The envelope containing it had evidently once held a larger sum. It had been sealed, and then slit. On the outside was written, in Simeon Peake's fine, almost feminine hand: "For my little daughter Selina Peake in case anything should happen to me." It bore a date seven years old. What the original sum had been no one ever knew.

To Selina fell the choice of earning her own living or of returning to the Vermont village and becoming a withered and sapless dried apple, with black fuzz and mold at her heart, like her aunts, the Misses Sarah and Abbie Peake. She did not hesitate.

"But what kind of work?" Julie Hempel demanded. "What kind of work can you do?" Words—that is, the Selina Peakes—did not work.

"I—well, I can teach."

"Teach what?"

"The things I learned at Miss Fiser's."

"You have to do something first—go to Normal, or teach in the country, don't you?—before you can teach in the public schools. They're mostly old. Twenty-five or even thirty—or more!" with nineteen's incapacity to imagine an age beyond thirty.

"Then I'll just teach a country school. I'm good at arithmetic. You know that." Julie should have known it, having had all her Fister sums solved by Selina. "Country schools are just arithmetic and grammar and geography."

"You! Teaching a country school!" She looked at Selina.

She saw a misleadingly delicate face, the skull small and exquisitely formed. The cheek bones rather high—or perhaps they looked so because of the fact that the eyes, dark, soft and luminous, were unusually deep-set in their sockets. The face, instead of narrowing to a soft curve at the chin, developed unexpected strength in the jaw line. That line, fine, steel-strong, sharp and clear, was of the stuff of which pioneer women are made. Julie, inexperienced in the art of reading the human physiognomy, did not decipher the meaning of it. Selina's hair was thick, long and fine, so that she piled it easily in the loops, coils and knots that fashion demanded. Her nose, slightly pinched at the nostrils, was exquisite. When she laughed it had the trick of wrinkling just a little across the narrow bridge; very engaging, and mischievous. She was thought a rather plain little thing, which she wasn't. But the eyes were what you marked and remembered. Perhaps it was this velvety softness of the eyes that caused one to overlook the firmness of the lower face. When the next ten years had done their worst to her, and Julie had suddenly come upon her stepping agilely out of a truck gardener's wagon on Prairie avenue, a tanned, weather-beaten, toil-worn woman, her abundant hair skewered into a knob and held by a long gray hairpin, her full calico skirt grimed with the mud of the wagon wheel, a pair of men's old side-boots on her slim feet, a grotesquely battered old felt hat (her husband's) on her head, her arms full of ears of sweet corn, and carrots, and radishes, and bunches of beets, a woman with bad teeth, flat breasts, a sagging pocket in his capacious skirt—even then Julie, staring, had known her by her eyes. And she had run to her in her silk suit and her fine silk shirtwaist and her hat with the plume and had cried, "Oh, Selina! My dear! My dear!"—with a sob of horror and pity—"My dear!" And had taken Selina, carrots, beets, corn and radishes, in her arms. The vegetables lay scattered all about them on the sidewalk in front of Julie Hempel Arnold's great stone house on Prairie avenue. But strangely enough it had been Selina who had done the comforting, patting Julie's silken shoulder and saying, over and over, "There, there! It's all right, Julie. It's all right. Don't cry. What's there to cry for! Sh! . . . It's all right."

Chapter II

Selina had thought herself lucky to get the Dutch school at High Prairie ten miles outside Chicago. Thirty dollars a month! She was to board at the house of Klaas Pool, the truck farmer. It was August Hempel who had brought it all about; or Julie, urging him. This was in September. High Prairie school did not open until the first week in November. In that region of truck farms every boy and girl over six was busy in the fields throughout the early autumn. Two years of this and Selina would be qualified for a city grade. August Hempel indicated that he could arrange that, too, when the time came. Selina thought this shrewd red-faced butcher a wonderful man, indeed. Which he was.

At forty-seven, single-handed, he was to establish the famous Hempel Packing company. At fifty he was the power in the yards, and there were Hempel branches in Kansas City, Omaha, Denver. At sixty you saw the name of Hempel plastered over packing sheds, factories, and canning plants all the way from Honoluiu to Portland. You read:

"Don't Say Ham: Say Hempel's."

Hempel products ranged incredibly from pork to pineapple; from grease to grape-juice. Something of his character may be gleaned from the fact that farmers who had known the butcher at forty still addressed this millionaire, at sixty, as Aug. At sixty-five he took up golf and beat his son-in-law, Michael Arnold, at it. A magnificent old pirate, sailing the perilous commercial seas of the American '90s before commissions, investigations, and inquisitive senate insisted on applying whitewash to the black flag of trade.

Selina went about her preparations in a singularly clear-headed fashion, considering her youth and inexperience. She sold one of the blue-white diamonds, and kept one. She placed her inheritance of four hundred and ninety-seven dollars, complete, in the bank. She bought stout, sensible boots, two dresses, one a brown lady's-cloth which she made herself, finished with white collars and cuffs, very neat (the cuffs to be protected by black sateen sleevelets, of course, while teaching); and a wine-red cashmere (mad, but she couldn't resist it) for best.

She eagerly learned what she could of this region once known as New Holland. Its people were all truck gardeners, and as Dutch as the Netherlands from which they or their fathers had come. Many of them had come from the town of Schoorl, or near it. Others from the lowlands outside Amsterdam. Selina pictured it another Sleepy Hollow, a replica of the quaint settlement in Washington Irving's delightful tale. Picturing mellow golden corn fields; crusty crullers, crumbling oly-koeks, toothsome wild ducks, sides of smoked beef, pumpkin pies; country dances, apple-cheeked farmer girls, she felt sorry for poor Julie staying on in the dull gray commonplaceness of Chicago.

The last week in October found her on the way to High Prairie, seated beside Klaas Pool in the two-horse wagon with which he brought his garden stuff to the Chicago market. Mile after mile of cabbage fields, jade-green against the earth. Mile after mile of red cabbage, a rich plummy Burgundy veined with black. Between these, heaps of corn were piled-up sunshine. Against the horizon an occasional patch of woods showed the last russet and bronze of oak and maple. These things Selina saw with her beauty-loving eye, and she clasped her hands in their black cotton gloves.

"Oh, Mr. Pool!" she cried. "Mr. Pool! How beautiful it is here!"

Klaas Pool, driving his team of horses down the muddy Halsted road, was looking straight ahead, his eyes fastened seemingly on an invisible spot, between the off-horse's ears. His was not the kind of brain that acts quickly, nor was his body's mechanism the sort that quickly responds to that brain's message. His eyes were china-blue in a round red face that was covered with a stubble of stiff golden hair. His round moon of a head was set low and solidly between his great shoulders, so that as he began to turn it now, slowly, you marveled at the process and waited fearfully to hear a creak. He was turning his head toward Selina, but keeping his gaze on the spot between his horse's ears. Evidently the head and the eyes revolved by quite distinct processes. Now he faced Selina almost directly. His pale blue eyes showed incomprehension.

"Beautiful?" he echoed, in puzzled interrogation. "What is beautiful?"

Selina's slim arms flashed out from the swathings of cloak, shawl, and muffler and were flung wide in a gesture that embraced the landscape on which the late afternoon sun was casting a glow peculiar to that lake region, all rose and golden and mist-shimmering.

"This! The—the cabbages."

A slow-dawning film of fun crept over the blue of Klaas Pool's stare. This film spread almost imperceptibly so that it fluted his broad nostrils, met and widened his full lips, reached and agitated his massive shoulders, tickled the round belly, so that all Klaas Pool, from his eyes to his waist, was rippling and shaking with slow, solemn, heavy Dutch mirth.

"Cabbages is beautiful!" his round pop eyes staring at her in a fixity of glee. "Cabbages is beautiful!" His silent laughter now rose and became audible in a rich throaty chortle. It was plain that laughter, with Klaas Pool, was not a thing to be lightly dismissed, once raised. "Cabbages—" he choked a little, and spluttered, overcome.

Selina laughed, too, even while she protested his laughter. "But they are!" she insisted. "They are beautiful. Like jade and Burgundy. No, like—uh—like—what's that in—like chrysoprase and porphyry. All those fields of cabbages and the corn and the beet-tops together look like Persian patches."

Which was, certainly, no way for a new school teacher to talk to a Holland truck gardener driving his team along the dirt road on his way to High Prairie. But then, Selina, remember, had read Byron at seventeen.

Klaas Pool knew nothing of chrysoprase and porphyry. Nor of Byron. Nor, for that matter, of jade and Burgundy. But he did know cabbages, both green and red. He knew cabbage from seed to sauerkraut; he knew and grew varieties from the sturdy Flat Dutch to the early Wakefield. But that they were beautiful; that they looked like jewels; that they lay like Persian patches, had never entered his head, and rightly. What has the head of a cabbage, or for that matter, of a robust, soil-stained, toiling Dutch truck farmer to do with nonsense like chrysoprase, with jade, with Burgundy, with Persian patterns!

The horses clopped down the heavy country road. Now and again the bulk beside Selina was agitated silently, as before. And from between the golden fuzz of stubble beard she would hear, "Cabbages! Cabbages is—" But she did not feel offended. She could not have been offended at anything today. For in spite of her recent tragedy, her nineteen years, her loneliness, the terrifying thought of this new home to which she was going, among strangers, she was conscious of a warm thrill of elation, of excitement—of adventure! That was it. "The whole thing's just a grand adventure," Simeon Peake had said. Selina gave a little bounce of anticipation. She was doing a revolutionary and daring thing; a thing that the Vermont and now, fortunately, inaccessible Peakes would have regarded with horror. For equipment she had youth, curiosity, a steel-strong frame; one brown lady's-cloth, one wine-red cashmere; four hundred and ninety-seven dollars; and a gay, adventuresome spirit that was never to die, though it led her into curious places and she often found, at the end, only a trackless waste from which she had to retrace her steps, painfully. But always, to her, red and green cabbages were to be jade and Burgundy, chrysoprase and porphyry. Life has no weapons against a woman like that.

Selina Stood Looking About Her in the Dim Light, a Very Small Figure in a Very Large World.

Klaas Pool was a school director. She was to live at his house. Perhaps she should not have said that about the cabbages. So now she drew herself up primly and tried to appear the school teacher, and succeeded in looking as severe as a white pansy.

"Ahem!" (or nearly that). "You have three children, haven't you, Mr. Pool? They'll all be my pupils?"

Klaas Pool ruminated on this. He concentrated so that a slight frown marred the serenity of his brow. In this double question of hers, an attempt to give the conversation a dignified turn, she had apparently created some difficulty for her host. He was trying to shake his head two ways at the same time. This gave it a rotary motion. Selina saw, with amazement, that he was attempting to nod negation and confirmation at once.

"You mean you haven't—or they're not?—or—?"

"I have got three children. All will not be your pupils." There was something final, unshakable in his delivery of this

"Dear me! Why not? Which ones won't. Do tell me which ones will and which ones won't."

"Geertje goes to school. Jozina goes to school. Roelf works by the farm."

"How old is Roelf?" She was being school teacherly again.

"Roelf is twelve."

"Twelve! And no longer at school! But why not?"

"Roelf he works by the farm."

"Doesn't Roelf like school?"

"But, sure."

"Don't you think he ought to go to school?"

"But sure."

Having begun, she could not go back. "Doesn't your wife want Roelf to go to school any more?"

"Maartje? But sure."

She gathered herself together; hurled herself behind the next question. "Then why doesn't he go to school, for pity's sake?"

Klaas Pool's pale blue eyes were fixed on the spot between the horse's ears. His face was serene, placid, patient.

"Roelf he works by the farm."

Selina subsided, beaten.

Dusk was coming on. The lake mist came drifting across the prairie and hung, a pearly haze, over the frost-nipped stubble and the leafless trees. It caught the last light in the sky and held it, giving to fields, trees, black earth, to the man seated stolidly beside the girl, and to the face of the girl herself an opalescent glow very wonderful to see. Selina, seeing it, opened her lips to exclaim again; and then, remembering, closed them. She had learned her first lesson in High Prairie.

* * * * * * *

The Klaas Pools lived in a typical High Prairie house. They had passed a score like it in the dusk. These sturdy Holland-Americans had built here in Illinois after the pattern of the squat houses that dot the lowlands about Amsterdam, Haarlem and Rotterdam. A row of poilards stood stiffly by the roadside. Yard and dwelling had a geometrical neatness like that of a toy house in a set of playthings.

Peering down over the high wheel Selina waited for Klaas Pool to assist her in alighting. He seemed to have no such thought. Having jumped down, he was throwing empty crates and boxes out of the back of the wagon. So Selina, gathering her shawls and cloak about her, clambered down the side of the wheel and stood looking about her in the dim light, a very small figure in a very large world. Klaas had opened the barn door. Now he returned and slapped one of the horses smartly on the flank. The team trotted obediently off to the barn. He picked up her little hide-bound trunk She took her satchel. The yard was quite dark now. As Klaas Pool opened the kitchen door the red mouth that was the open draught in the kitchen stove grinned a toothy welcome at them.

A woman stood over the stove, a fork in her hand. The kitchen was clean, but disorderly, with the disorder that comes of pressure of work. There was a not unpleasant smell of cooking. Selina sniffed it hungrily. The woman turned to face them. Selina stared.

This, she thought, must be some other—an old woman—his mother, perhaps. But: "Maartje, here is school teacher," said Klaas Pool. Selina put out her hand to meet the other woman's hand, rough, hard, calloused. Her own, touching it, was like satin against a pine board. Maartje smiled, and you saw her broken discolored teeth. She pushed back the sparse hair from her high forehead, fumbled a little, shyly, at the collar of her clean blue calico dress.

"Pleased to meet you," Maartje said, primly. "Make you welcome." Then, as Pool stamped out to the yard, slamming the door behind him, "Pool he could have come with you by the front way, too. Lay off your things." Selina began to remove the wrappings that swathed her—the muffler, the shawl, the cloak. Now she stood, a slim, incongruously elegant little figure in that kitchen. The brown lady's-cloth was very tight and basqued above, very flounced and bustled below. "My, how you are young!" cried Maartje. She moved nearer, as if impelled, and fingered the stuff of Selina's gown. And as she did this Selina suddenly saw that she, too, was young. The bad teeth, the thin hair, the careless dress, the littered kitchen, the harassed frown—above all these, standing out clearly, appeared the look of a girl.

"Why, I do believe she's not more than twenty-eight!" Selina said to herself in a kind of panic. "I do believe she's not more than twenty-eight."

She had been aware of the two pigtailed heads appearing and vanishing in the doorway of the next room. Evidently her hostess was distressed because the school teacher's formal entrance had not been made by way of parlor instead of kitchen. She followed Maartje Pool into the front room. Behind the stove, tittering, were two yellow-haired little girls. Geertje and Jozina, of course. Selina went over to them, smiling. "Which is Geertje?" she asked. "And which Jozina." But at this the titters became squeals. They retired behind the round black bulwark of the wood-burner, overcome.

Here's a combination for you—a Vermont girl among Dutch truck-gardeners. Does she take root—or escape?

Oil Stains on Concrete

The bureau of standards says that it knows of no method that will entirely remove oil stains from concrete. The stains can be partly removed by soaking the concrete with gasoline, then taking up the excess by means of a porous material like blotting paper By repeating this process several times at intervals a good portion of the oil can be removed.

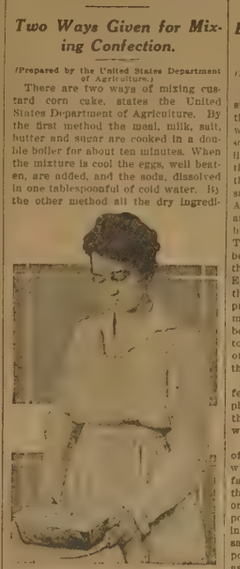
CUSTARD CAKE IS GOOD FOR CHANGE

Two Ways Given for Mixing Confection.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are two ways of mixing custard corn cake, states the United States Department of Agriculture. By the first method the meal, milk, salt, butter and sugar are cooked in a double boiler for about ten minutes. When the mixture is cool the eggs, well beaten, are added, and the soda, dissolved in one tablespoonful of cold water. By the other method all the dry ingredients, including the soda, are mixed together, and then the sour milk and eggs, well beaten, and the butter are added. If the second method is followed the cold water is not needed.



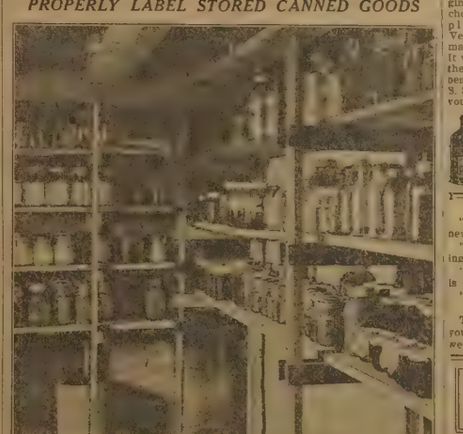
Splendid Dish for Dinner.

Custard Corn Cake.

2 eggs	1½ cupfuls corn-meal
1 cupful sugar	¼ cupful wheat flour
1 teaspoonful soda	3 tablespoonfuls butter
1 teaspoonful salt	1 cupful cream or milk
1 cupful sour milk
1 cupful sweet milk

Mix all the ingredients but the cream and butter as directed. Melt the butter in a deep pan, using plenty on the sides. Pour in the batter, add (without stirring) a cupful of cream, and bake 20 to 30 minutes. When cooked there should be a layer of custard on top of the cake, or small bits of custard distributed through it. This serves six persons. It is a lunch or supper dish, or, if the sugar is omitted, it may be used to accompany the meat and vegetables at dinner.

PROPERLY LABEL STORED CANNED GOODS



But Few of These Jars Were Properly Labeled and the Housekeeper Will Find It Troublesome to Locate Those She Wants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although at the time of canning one thinks every jar of jelly, jam, or canned goods will be remembered and identified easily, when winter comes one is often doubtful, until a jar is opened, whether it holds blackberries or black raspberries, plum or currant jelly. It is also useful to know the date on which the food was preserved or canned, and if more than one method has been used to have that information on record. Peaches, for example, may be canned in heavy sirup for some purposes and in a light sirup for others. Second extraction jelly is usually less clear than the first extraction, and one would be more likely to use it up "on the family" than to serve it for a "company" jelly or give it to others. If pectin has been used in the making of some of the jellies the fact should be recorded for future reference.

Mark Cans and Jars.

Another point is to mark all cans and jars so that every jar in each lot can be identified in case spoilage develops in any of the jars. Jars should be kept under observation at room temperature for a week, and any showing signs of spoilage discarded. Others of the same lot should be watched until it is certain that they are keeping. The method of canning and length of time of processing are useful facts to have on record, when one is canning the same fruit again or giving directions to some one else. The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture suggests labeling all jars and cans with a neatly printed or written label, giving such information as the above and any further statements deemed necessary.

Labels may either be purchased or made at home by cutting plain paper in pieces about 1 by 2 inches; they should be pasted on the jars at a uniform distance from the bottom.

Handle With Care.

Fruit, vegetables, and other canned goods should not only be carefully put up and labeled, but they should also be carefully stored. This means that a clean, cool, dark place should be provided. A cupboard with strong, rather shallow shelves and close-fitting doors will protect the products from dust, dirt and light. If the shelves are wide enough to hold only a row, or at the most two rows of cans, it will be easy to find any particular can. For the first week each lot should be stored by itself in order to facilitate watching for signs of spoilage.

With a closed storage cupboard it will not be necessary to wrap glass jars of strawberries, peas, and other fruits and vegetables that fade when exposed to the light.

SPRING TONIC FROM THE POULTRY FLOCK

Egg Yolk Heads List of Iron Rich Foods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Why buy spring tonic from the drug store when the hens are working over time to produce an abundance of eggs which are far more effective as a source of iron? Egg yolk heads the list of iron-rich foods and is one of the best possible means of supplying the body with this valuable mineral, says the United States Department of Agriculture. It contains phosphorus and calcium, too, elements needed to build bones, teeth and other tissues. The white of eggs comes very near to being pure protein, which is one of the chief substances of our bodies. Eggs are also rich sources of vitamins, those A B C's of the diet needed to promote health and proper development. Taken all in all, then, the hen beats the doctor as a mixer of spring tonic, for she combines minerals with other valuable foods in a form that the body finds particularly useful.

Every homemaker alive to the effect of the daily meals on health plans to use an abundance of eggs in the spring. This is good economy as well as good nutrition.

There are so many appetizing ways of using whole eggs or the yolks and whites in separate dishes that the family need never tire of them. Use the yolks left over from prune whip or other dishes requiring a large proportion of whites, in place of butter in Hollandaise sauce. This egg-yolk sauce is excellent served hot with fish, poached eggs, or vegetables such as asparagus, cauliflower, or even plain cabbage cooked just long enough to make it tender. Persons who do not enjoy mayonnaise dressing because of the oil, will also like this sauce cold on salads

Egg-Yolk Sauce.

4 egg yolks.	½ teaspoonful lemon juice
½ cupful water.	½ teaspoonful salt

Mix the ingredients by stirring rather than by beating, and cook over boiling water until thick. Stir constantly, and be careful not to overcook the sauce so that it separates Custards, steamed or baked, soft or stiff, are year-round standbys in most households. In the spring, however, the homemaker can afford to be more generous with the eggs. The family will enjoy a soft custard served with stewed fruit or pudding occasionally instead of cream.

In these and many other ways, the clever homemaker can put so much iron in the daily meals that there will be no need for the patent medicine man's tonic.

Serious operation avoided

Resinol healed stubborn sore

Elyria, Ohio, March 7.—"I feel it my duty and pleasure to thank you for the wonderful cure your Resinol salve has wrought for my husband, who suffered from an open sore on the back of his neck for four years. Several doctors said that it was a cancer and advised its removal, but it was so near the base of the brain that we feared an operation. I had found Resinol Ointment so effective for cuts, burns and similar things that I induced my husband to try that. After using only two jars of Resinol, the sore entirely healed—every trace of it has disappeared. Resinol certainly was a God-send to us." (Signed) Mrs. E. E. Kenedy, 243 E. 8th St.

CONVICT LOSES SUIT FOR WAGES

STATE SHOWS EXPENSE OF UPKEEP MORE THAN AMOUNT EARNED BY PRISONER

Montgomery.—A decision involving the amount to be paid by the state to a prisoner who goes to the penitentiary pending an appeal of his case and whose case is reversed on appeal, has been handed down by the supreme court. The court held that the amount to be paid to the prisoner in such case is only the net amount received by the state from the labor of the prisoner. The decision, handed down in the Newt Wilson case, reversed the court of appeals.

The case involved interpretation of the section of the code which provides that where a prisoner goes to the penitentiary pending appeal, and the case is reversed, the state shall pay to the prisoner the amount which the state would have received from the proceeds of his labor during the time served if the case had been affirmed. In the Newt Wilson case, the state's figures showed that the expense of maintenance and control of the prisoner exceeded his earnings and that consequently he was due nothing. The trial court held that the prisoner was entitled to receive the gross amount earned by him and that the state had no right to deduct costs of maintenance of the prisoner. This decision was affirmed by the court of appeals, but was reversed by the supreme court, which granted the state's writ of certiorari to the court of appeals.

Lesson for May 17

SAUL BECOMES A CHRISTIAN

LESSON—TEXT—Acts 9:1-19.

GOLDEN TEXT—"If any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creature."—II Cor. 5:17.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Man Who Helped Another.

JUNIOR TOPIC—How Saul Became a Christian.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How Saul Was Converted.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Study of Conversion.

I. Saul's Violent Hatred of the Lord's Disciples (vv. 1-2).

Saul knew full well that unless the movement set on foot by Jesus was stopped, it would supersede Judaism. He was ignorant of the genius of christianity. He did not know that the "blood of martyrs is the seed of the church." The noble display of faith by Stephen in sealing his testimony with his blood did not soften Saul's spirit, but rather intensified his hatred for Jesus and His disciples. It made him more determined than ever to stamp out the Nazarene heresy. The intensity of his madness, and the extent of its operations are best set forth in his own words, "And I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women" (Acts 22:4). "I both shut up many of the saints in prisons having received authority from the chief priests, and when they were put to death, I gave my voice against them, and punishing them oft in all synagogues I strove to make them blaspheme, and being exceedingly mad against them, I persecuted them even unto foreign cities" (Acts 26:10-12 R. V.).

II. Saul Kicking Against the Pricks (vv. 3-9).

The figure here is that of the Eastern ox driver following the ox with a sharp iron fixed to the end of a pole. The animal is prodded on with this instrument and if it is refractory it kicks against the sharp iron and injures itself. This is a picture of Saul as he was madly fighting against Jesus.

1. A Light From Heaven (vv. 3-4a).

The time had come for the Lord to interfere. Saul was stricken with blindness and fell to the earth. This physical demonstration accentuated the workings of his conscience which doubtless were going on quickened by the Holy Spirit as He used Stephen's testimony.

2. A Voice From Heaven (vv. 4b-5).

This was the Lord's voice calling Saul by name and asking, "Why persecutest thou Me?" This moved Saul to inquire, "Who art thou, Lord?" The answer came, "I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest." He is so closely identified with believers that He feels their sufferings and regards treatment of them as treatment of Himself.

3. Saul's Inquiry (v. 6), "What Wilt Thou Have Me to Do?"

The Lord told him to go into the city where information would be given him as to what he must do.

4. Saul Entering Damascus (vv. 7-9).

The haughty persecutor went quite humbly into Damascus, led by his attendants. For the space of three days he remained blind and fasted. What went on in his soul in those days no mortal can know, but we may be assured that he, like the Lord in the wilderness, was too deep in meditation and prayer to desire food.

III. Ananias Ministers to Saul (vv. 10-19).

1. Ananias' Vision (vv. 10-12).

In this vision the Lord appeared and instructed him to go to Saul. He gave him the name of the street and Saul's host, and informed him that Saul was now a praying man, and that He had prepared Saul by a vision for the coming of Ananias.

2. Ananias' Fear and Hesitancy (vv. 13-16).

He knew of Saul's ministry and the authority by which he came. The Lord encouraged him to go, assuring him that Saul is no longer an enemy but a chosen vessel to bear His name before the Gentiles, kings, and the children of Israel.

3. Ananias' Obedience (v. 17).

His fears being removed, Ananias went to the house where Saul was staying, put his hand on him and affectionately addressed him as "brother." Ananias told Saul that the Lord had sent him with a two-fold mission:

(1) "That thou mightest receive thy sight"

(2) "Be filled with the Holy Spirit"

4. Saul Baptized (vv. 18-19).

After Saul received his sight Ananias baptized him. The Lord bestows the gift of the Spirit upon whomsoever He will, and may designate anyone whether occupying an official position or not, to lay hands upon individuals.

Girls Count "Confetti"

Out of the many intricate jobs done by women in the new ticket office just opened by the London General Omnibus Company, Ltd., at Chiswick, "confetti counting" is surely the strangest, says the Scientific American. When a check is desired on the number of tickets sold during an omnibus journey the conductor's bell punch is opened and the tiny clippings of paper are all poured on the table. The girl, helped by a "metal finger," sorts and counts the clippings, which are built up into little heaps of confetti all the same colors, from which it is easy to calculate how many penny "rides" have been sold.—New York World.

Important to All Women Readers of This Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine will do for them. By inclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.

Banker Feeds Pigeons

Changes in Harvesting the Wool Crop

Wool with a long, fine fibre brings the highest price. LEFT—Doing a smooth job with a machine shear.

There have been many changes in the operations of securing the wool crop. It has not been many years since it was considered necessary to clean the wool before it was taken from the sheep. This used to be done by driving the flock to a lake or stream where each animal was thoroughly washed. Modern methods of wool scouring have made sheep-washing unnecessary, although even today, a very dirty fleece is discriminated against by the buyer.

There are certain precautions observed by successful sheep owners at shearing time which have been found to increase the value of the clip. For example, bright days are selected on which to shear, as this will avoid obtaining fleeces wet with dew or rain. Do not shear sheep on the ground, but rather use a clean platform upon which to do the shearing operation. Keep the fleece in one piece, and clip off some of the inferior tags.

Changes have taken place in themethod of removing the fleece from the sheep's body. Shearing sheep now is easy and simple compared with the old days of hand blades. Mechanics has done wonders towards solving many of the farm labor problems. Today, the automatic shearer, either hand or power operated, provides a quick and efficient method of harvesting the wool crop on the average farm as well as on the large sheep ranches. Machine shearing leaves no ridges and secures the maximum amount of fleece which is very important with wool at present prices.

For tying up each fleece, use, if possible, a paper twine. If binder twine is used, experience has shown that the fibres of the twine get into the wool, and as they cannot be removed, they are a damage to the resulting manufactured woolen goods. In preparing wool for shipment, large sacks which will hold several fleeces are best.

The program of sheep owners should include plans for most effectively harvesting a quality wool. The wool crop will be a large source of income this year, as it will be for years to come. High prices are being offered for the 1925 clip, and extremely satisfactory returns are assured. The changes that has taken place in the methods of harvesting wool are of great value to the sheep industry.

FARMERS USE BANK TO BORROW MONEY

Alabama farmers to the number of 16,625 have availed themselves of loans totaling $31,950,510 from Federal land banks and joint stock land banks since these agencies were first established by law, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. These loans are safeguarded by 1,689,581 acres of land in the state having an appraised valuation on land and buildings of $72,863,447.

The entire range of farm life is covered in the purposes for which the loans were secured, states the Foundation. Seventy-two per cent of the loans were used for the payment of mortgages, 5 percent for the purchase of land mortgaged, 6 per cent for the payment of various debts, 6.5 for buildings and implements and equipment, and one per cent for the purchase of livestock.

Total loans closed by these agencies since their establishment were $1,444,746 distributed among 385, 724 borrowers, states the Foundation. Of this amount, Federal Land bank loans totaling $276,761,718 was apportioned among 325,172 borrowers, while joint stock land bank loans to the amount of $467,984,667 were distributed among 60,562 individuals.

The extent to which the farm loan banks, the joint stock land banks and the more recently organized intermediate credit banks are beng used by the farmers in this and other states is an indication that these structure of the nation to the well-being of the farmer.

NEW CHEVROLET PLANS GETS SALES

Cars and trucks aggregating $500,000 have been sold under the Chevrolet six per cent purchase certificate plan since this copyrighted method was inaugurated among Chevrolet dealers seven months ago.

The plan, regarded as a fundamental improvement in automotive merchandising, has met with such uniform approval that now more than 2,000 of the certificates are sold each month.

Under its provisions a prospective car owner may start with an initial payment as low as $5. If desired, a larger first payment may be made. This is followed by weekly or monthly installments suiting the convenience of the purchaser. These payments are then entered upon the back of the Purchase Certificate. When the sum of the payments plus the six per cent interest earned reaches one-third of the retail price the car is delivered. The balance may be met either outright or on a deferred payment plan.

Another very attractive feature is a provision that a certificate holder who already owns a car gains a further credit toward his new car of six per cent of such amounts as he may spend with the dealer for service, repairs or accessories on his old machine.

The certificate savings are amply safeguarded. They are banked in a separate trustee's account, in a local bank. Over 2,000 of these accounts are established in different banks in the United States. In addition all money paid in on a Chevrolet purchase certificate is insured against loss by a strong and well known insurance company.

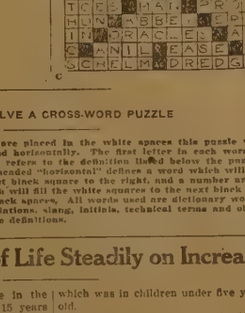
Solution of Last Week's Puzzle.



HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Average Span of Life Steadily on Increase

The average length of life in the United States has increased 15 years since 1870, Surgeon General Cumming of the public health service said in his annual report to congress.

Fifty-six years is now the average span of life in America, according to the surgeon general. This contrasts with the Sixteenth century, when human life averaged between eighteen and twenty years, increasing to about twenty-five years in the Eighteenth century, and to between forty-five and forty-eight years as late as 1900.

Tuberculosis and typhoid fever, the report disclosed, showed some decrease the last calendar year, both in cases and deaths.

Diphtheria also declined, but a decided increase was shown in measles, with 725,520 cases and 10,282 deaths, compared with 200,808 cases and 3,592 deaths in 1922.

Special attention was given in the report to whooping cough, which increased 60 per cent in the last two calendar years, with an increased death rate of 4.4 per cent, most of which was in children under five years old.

Forty-five states reported 30,771 cases of smallpox, which is more prevalent in this country than in Europe. New England had a much smaller number of cases than the South, West and Middle West.

Fright Restored Speech

Speech was resorted to an English ex-soldier who had been dumb for over three years. The man, while crossing Osmaston road, Derby, was nearly knocked down by a motor car traveling at a great speed. He jumped back on to the pavement in the nick of time and found that he unconsciously uttered an exclamation. A passer-by who inquired if he had been hurt was surprised when the ex-soldier caught him by the arm and accompanied him along the street, speaking rapidly all the time. He was so overjoyed at his power of tongue being restored that he kept speaking all the time in case the faculty would be again lost. His speech since has been normal.

Interest Boys in Managing Trees

Club Members Being Taught How to Handle Pine Wood Lots on Farm.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Club boys in New Hampshire have demonstrated through a junior extension forestry project that trees may be looked upon and managed as a crop if given attention under the direction of a forestry expert. A report received by the United States Department of Agriculture states that club boys are being taught the management of pine wood lots through handling a quarter of an acre up to an acre on the family farm. The work has been received with enthusiasm and has served its purpose very effectively. It consists of two general types of activity—planting and thinning. Sometimes the latter work is referred to as improvement cutting, or weeding.

Different Cuttings.

It was found necessary to emphasize and call attention of club members to the different types of improvement cuttings and to prepare definite instructions, both written and oral, for each type. Each lot presents different conditions, and the solution of problems which require a personal visit of the junior extension agent. This limits the number of club members who can undertake the work until a forestry specialist can be added to the extension staff.

The boys who take part in the tree-planting division are expected to plant at least a fourth of an acre between March 1 and June 1 this year. The extension agent will supervise the purchase and planting of the trees. Each club member is to report the number of trees living on October 15, 1925.

Improvement Cutting.

Improvement cutting deals with three groups of trees—young pine stands under ten years of age, those between ten and thirty years old, and those over thirty years. The object in the first group is to free the young group from overtopping older or undesirable trees; in the second, to concentrate growth on the more valuable trees; and in the third type, to increase the diameter growth of the trees and the total production of the stand.

Thirty-one boys enrolled in the planting work last year and set out over 13,000 seedlings. Some of these were planted by boys on town land, some on national reservations, and others on the home farm wood lot. Several boys enrolled for thinning. The planting work received more popular support and public praise than the wood-lot management phase. To give this new project a start the Society for the Protection of New Hampshire Forests has offered generous money prizes for a state and county forestry contest which started this past fall. Six counties have entered, and a fresh impetus is being given the junior forestry work. The contest will extend until next October.

Cattle Tested at Rate of Six Million Annually

The tuberculin testing of cattle, to eradicate bovine tuberculosis from the United States, is now going forward at a rate exceeding six million cattle annually, according to a recent statement of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

Figures for the last six months of 1924 show that under the co-operative plan there were tested 283,935 herds containing 3,157,126 cattle. This rate of testing was a noticeable increase over that for the preceding six months. Estimates of bureau of animal industry veterinarians, based on the gradually increasing volume of testing, indicate that from six and a half to seven million cattle will be tested during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1925. This is in comparison with about five and a third million during the fiscal year 1924.

Always Give Plenty of Green Feed to Goslings

Goslings at first might have stale bread and milk, sprinkled with sand, lots of water and green food such as grass or sprouted oats with the hulls cut off. The hulls should not be given to the young goslings. After the first three or four days, they will take a mixture of four parts cornmeal, three parts bran, one part feed dog, and after the first week add 5 per cent of high-grade beef scraps or oils with milk, always mixing a little fine sand with this ration. Feed them three or four times a day at first, and three times a day later. Always give plenty of green food and all the water they will drink.

Mixture of Field Peas and Oats Good for Hay

One of the most satisfactory annual hay crops in the northern states where the climate is comparatively cool and the moisture is abundant, is a mixture of oats and Canadian field peas. The field pea being a legume adds to the protein compounds in the feed and the mixture comes more nearly taking the place of clover than most other emergency crops. The crop can be grown in all of the states north of the Ohio river, and in the highest altitudes of the western states. Both oats and peas grow best on a cool, moist clay loam soil but they will grow on almost any soil that is moist and well supplied with plant food.

Swine Production of Big Importance

Necessary Feeds Should Be Considered First.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In utilizing farm wastes and in converting the concentrates raised on the farm into a marketable product, the hog is by far the most valuable farm animal, points out the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture, in its new Farmers' Bulletin 1437, Swine Production. All regions of the United States may be considered suitable for raising hogs. The feeds used to grow and fatten hogs can be produced to a greater or less extent in practically every part of the country. Without the hog, profits in the big cattle-fattening industry of the Central West would be jeopardized.

The feeds necessary to grow and fatten hogs should be given first consideration when the question of location of a farm for hog raising is being contemplated. Feeds can be produced more abundantly in some localities than in others. Other factors, such as markets, climate and quality of soil also should be studied. It is best to start with but a few sows. As the herd increases in number a careful study of the farm should be made to determine what crops it will produce most successfully and how and to what extent hogs fit into the general plan for that particular farm.

It is always advisable to use pure bred animals in founding a herd. Much time and money are lost by starting with low-grade sows and building up the quality of the herd by the use of pure bred boars.

Copies of the bulletin may be had free, as long as the supply lasts, from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Apple Scab Is Cause of Large Losses of Fruit

That apple scab is one of the most serious apple diseases in Pennsylvania is a fact recognized by growers throughout the state, says a new bulletin, "Comparison of materials used in spraying and dusting for apple scab control in Pennsylvania," just issued by the agricultural experiment station of the Pennsylvania state college.

Figures of the plant disease survey of the United States Department of Agriculture show a reduction in yield due to scab, of 15 per cent in Pennsylvania as an average for the four years, 1919-1922, the bulletin further states. This means an average reduction of over two million bushels of apples per year in this state for the same four years. Apple scab is caused by a parasitic fungus which lives during the winter on the dead leaves under the trees.

While it has long been known that certain sprays, if applied at the proper time and in the proper manner, would serve to protect the leaves and fruit against infection by this fungus, the most efficient and practical materials and the best time to use them present a problem upon which the station has been working for six years.

During this time experiments have been conducted in 26 commercial orchards in Adams county, as well as in the experiment station orchards in Centre county, and one orchard each in Franklin and Chester counties. Eighteen different materials were applied on nine varieties involving over two hundred separte plots and 111 different combinations as to material and time of application.

The results of the various sprays and dusts are given in the bulletin so that growers interested in the control of apple scab may easily get the latest information on this vital subject.

FARM NOTES

Forest fire protection costs little and saves much.

• • •

Weeds are weeds and should be treated as such.

• • •

Sweet corn needs the germination test fully as much as field corn, this spring.

• • •

Plant sound seed in a well prepared seed bed to be assured of a good crop stand.

• • •

Pumping water by hand is all right—when a man needs exercise and has plenty of time.

• • •

The potato is a staple crop which can profitably be grown in either a large or small orchard.

• • •

Pity the little chicks and keep their hover warm. They'll repay you in eggs when they grow up.

• • •

The garden is no longer a plaything, but a very valuable aid in producing the food supply of a farm.

• • •

Proper spraying of the early Irish potato crop has increased the yield 74 bushels per acre, according to tests made by Dr. R. W. Leahy of the North Carolina experiment station.

• • •

Rape should be drilled on plowed ground at the rate of six to eight pounds per acre. It grows well during the cool periods of the spring and is in shape for feeding in June. It can also be seeded between the corn rows at the last cultivation and makes an excellent crop for fall forage.

POULTRY

MOTHER HEN DOES BEST WHEN COOPED

It is not good poultry management to allow the mother hen to range unrestricted with her chicks. With such freedom the hen frequently takes her brood through wet grass and, as a result, some are chilled and die, especially the weaker ones which are likely to be left behind. The loss of young chicks which follows such a practice is large and mainly preventable. Furthermore, the food which a brood allowed to range with the hen obtains goes very largely to keep up the heat of the body and the chicks do not make as good growth as they otherwise would.

Chick losses of this nature can be largely prevented by shutting the hen in a coop. Any style of coop which is dry, ventilated, and can be closed at night to protect the brood against cats, rats and other animals, and which, while confining the hen, will allow the chicks to pass in and out freely after they are a few days old, will be satisfactory. The hen should be confined until the chicks are weaned, though a small yard may be attached to the coop, if desired, to allow the hen to exercise. The fence can be raised from the ground far enough to allow the chicks to go in or out, but not high enough for the hen to escape. By using the coop the chicks can find shelter and warmth under the hen at any time and the weaklings, after a few days, may develop into strong, healthy chicks.

When chicks are raised with hens, they are likely to become infested with lice. If the lice get very numerous, they greatly retard the chicks' growth and may even cause their death. The hen should be powdered thoroughly with some good insect powder before she is put in the coop with the chicks, and at intervals of several days or a week thereafter. The baby chicks should be examined for lice, particularly on the head, under the wings and about the vent. If any are found, a little grease, such as lard, should be rubbed in those places. Apply grease moderately, as too much will injure the chicks. The chicks should be examined frequently and the treatment repeated if lice are found on them.

Young Chicks Need More of Mineral Constituents

Young chicks need more of the mineral constituents found in wheat bran than do mature fowls, and the mashes fed them are accordingly, usually made to contain more of it. With this change and due regard to the size of the particles of food that baby chicks can eat, there need be little or no difference between a growing chick mash and one fed to laying hens. The chick mash recommended by the New Jersey experiment station consists of three parts of wheat bran to one each of sifted ground oats, cornmeal, flour wheat middlings and finely ground meat scrap. With one part of bran, instead of three, and no necessity for sifting the ground oats or finely grinding the meat scrap, this would make as good a laying mash as could be compounded. The above would make a very good mash to be fed with equal parts of cracked corn and wheat. After four to six weeks chicks will eat coarser cracked corn and whole wheat and do not need to have the hulls sifted from ground oats. An excess of meat scrap or of green food might cause some looseness of the bowels. Whatever the cause, it should be corrected; added amount of wheat middlings would not avail.

Green Feeds for Fowls During the Entire Year

Fowls need green feed of some kind all the year round. It should be supplied to hens confined in small yards and to all hens during the winter when no natural green feed is available in the yards. Free range or large yards will furnish ideal conditions for green feed, and this factor is one of the most important in raising poultry profitably on farms where the birds are supplied from cheap, natural sources.

Where smaller yards have to be used, they should be divided into two parts and used alternately, planting the vacant section two or three times yearly with quick-growing green crops of rape, oats, wheat, rye, or barley. This furnishes green feed and also helps to keep the yards sweet, clean and sanitary, which is perhaps the most important consideration in making poultry pay.

Good kinds of green feeds are sprouted oats, alfalfa, meal, chopped alfalfa and clover hay, cabbages, and mangel beets. In ordinary cellars cabbages do not keep so well as mangel beets, so they should be used up first.

Why Little Chicks Die

Chicks die in the shell because of lack of vigor in the breeding stock, lack of moisture, overheating or chilling of the eggs and other causes which are hard to explain. It is a fact that most poultrymen find the eggs running close to 90 per cent in fertility, and even then have to be satisfied with 50 per cent hatches on the average for the season. A lot of chicks seem to die in the shell during artificial incubation in spite of the best of management.

Rookie Willing to Admit Fault

It was during the first month of the first officers' camp at Fort Harrison, when the rigor of discipline was being drilled into the raw officers, that a local boy, trying with all his soul to "make good," found, much to his dismay, that he was standing for inspection with a button missing on his blouse, which all militarists know is a grave offense. The general was coming down the line, and as he came closer the young man determined to speak out. If questioned, and admit the fault.

With the certainty of long training, the stern general's eagle eye fell on the unbuttoned blouse, as is inevitable in such circumstances.

"Have you no button there?" he asked.

"No," quickly answered the ready neophyte.

"No what?" sharply corrected the officer.

"No button," almost shouted the young man in his eagerness and excitement of the moment.—Indianapolis News.

Clever Thief Detector

Valuable metal had a habit of disappearing from a German factory recently, so a clever scientific thief detector was rigged up by the physicists connected with the works. At the end of the day's work each employee was required to remove his knife and other metallic personal possessions from his pockets and pass through a specially constructed gateway. This was wired that any concealed metal being taken away illicitly would make itself known by inducing a current in a device that emitted a loud warning signal for the guard's benefit. The loss of metal has decreased markedly since the construction of the device.

"Just a little Bee Brand Insect Powder and all the Flies were dead."

Thousands of housewives have discovered that the fly-nuisance is unnecessary. One writes from Greenwood, Miss., "We used ---------- until the odor made us sick, but no results. We then sprinkled just a little Bee Brand Insect Powder in the room and in a few minutes the only flies in sight were dead."

Bee Brand Insect Powder is so easy to use, and so quickly effective. Close doors and windows. Blow Bee Brand from a piece of paper into the air. The almost invisible particles find the flies and kill them. It is also effective to burn the powder. Bee Brand Insect Powder kills Flies, Fleas, Mosquitoes, Ants, Roaches, Water Bugs, Bed Bugs, Moths, Lice on Fowl and Plants, and many other House and Garden Insects.

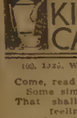
THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1926, Western Newspaper Union.)

Come, read to me some poem,
Some simple and heartfelt lay,
That shall soothe this restless feeling
And banish the thoughts of day.
—Longfellow.

SEASONABLE DISHES

A good way to teach the family to like spinach is to serve it in an appetizing and attractive way.



Spinach With Noodles.—Put a layer of cooked spinach into a well-buttered baking dish, cover with a layer of chopped cooked noodles, sprinkle with grated cheese and seasonings; add a cupful of rich milk and bake until thoroughly hot.

Curried Lamb.—Take one and one-half pounds of lamb from the neck, two large, thinly sliced onions, one-half cupful of butter, one-half tablespoonful of curry powder, one teaspoonful of vinegar, three-fourths of a tablespoonful of flour, one tablespoonful of tomato catsup and boiled rice. Wipe the meat, cut into one and one-half-inch pieces, sprinkle with salt and pepper and the flour. Melt the butter, add the onions and meat and cook until the meat is browned. Now add the curry and enough boiling water to cook. Heat slowly to the boiling point, add the vinegar and catsup and simmer until the meat is tender. Thicken with flour, season with salt and pepper and serve in a border of rice.

Prune and Cheese Salad.—Stew large prunes until soft, remove the stones and fill with well-seasoned cream cheese, dip into highly seasoned French dressing, roll in chopped pecan meats and serve with a ripe olive sliced. Use the center slices for garnishing. Arrange on lettuce hearts and pipe roses of mayonnaise on the salad.

Date and Ginger Sandwiches.—Chop one-half cupful of dates and the same amount of canton ginger, add a bit of lemon juice and some of the syrup from the ginger jar, simmer all together at a low heat until well-softened. Spread when cold on buttered bread.

Chicken Sandwiches. — Chop the white meat of one chicken very fine, then pound to a paste. Add salt, pepper and cayenne to taste. Cover one tablespoonful of gelatin with a tablespoonful of cold water, let stand half an hour then add six tablespoonfuls of cream. Stir over the heat until the gelatin is dissolved, now beat this into the chicken and let it stand until cold. Cut into squares and let harden. Serve cut into thin slices, on buttered bread, covering with another slice of buttered bread.

Good Things to Eat.

There is such a wealth of good vegetables and fruits during the summer that we need not suffer for variety.

Soup of Green Peas. — Shell enough green peas to make a quart; add six cupfuls of water and a sprig of mint; cook until the peas are done, then add salt to season. Press through a colander, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one tablespoonful of arrow root or cornstarch, and a little white pepper. Add to the liquor in which the peas were boiled, stir and cook until well done. Have ready a teaspoonful of meat extract dissolved in a little water and stir into the soup when serving. Chicken or veal stock may be used instead of clear water in which to cook the peas, making a more delicately flavored soup.

French Turnips.—Pare, cut into dice and cook until tender, one pint of white turnips. Have ready the following sauce: To four tablespoonfuls of flour, add one teaspoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper, and four tablespoonfuls of butter; add one pint of milk and stir the whole until it boils. Remove from the fire and add two well beaten eggs; stir until the eggs are set, add one-fourth of a cupful of scraped onion or very finely-minced parsley. Remove from the heat, add the juice of a large lemon. Stir rapidly and pour over the turnips in a hot vegetable dish. Sprinkle with a finely minced tablespoonful of parsley and serve.

Strawberry Venus.—Make a rich biscuit dough, using two cupfuls of flour, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of shortening, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and milk to make a mixture to roll. Serve with a sauce prepared by mixing two cupfuls of powdered sugar with three-fourths of a cupful of butter and when well blended add a quart of crushed strawberries. Set in the ice chest to chill and serve with the hot dumplings.

One need not go to any expense for sandwich filling for leftovers of ham, salmon, and various vegetables mixed with mayonnaise will make a variety.

Deviled Sandwiches.—Chop one-fourth pound of cold boiled tongue very fine, add to it two tablespoonfuls of olive oil, a dash of red pepper, a teaspoonful of worcestershire, and a little salt and pepper. Mix with the above ingredients the yolks of three hard-cooked eggs which have been put through a sieve. Serve as filling with water cress.

SUMMER FROCKS OF VOILE; MODERN GLOVE IS ELABORATE

IF GENTLE spring were to come walking in, with a frown on her face and no daffodils, apple blossoms or lilacs in her arms, she would hear some grumbling on every hand. But if she were to arrive without a train of sheer, dainty, colorful cotton fabrics, a riot of protest would storm about her. But she doesn't take any such chance—always lovely voiles, organdies, mulls and the like drift in and are usually well launched before even the peach trees have put on their spring pink. Sometimes one of these fabrics and sometimes another dominates the styles created for midsummer's gayeties—and worn almost anywhere.

Stylists Take Pride in This.

The colors in voiles, which are scheduled to be popular this season, are entrancing, in shades that prove wonderfully becoming. Many of the pinks have a mellow, yellow cast. Greens are delicate, in light or pale tones; blues are stronger but soft with powder blue, periwinkle and bluet well represented. Yellow is either of the canary kind or has the greenish, citron tone and there are a number of beautiful orchid shades. These are usually livelier under artificial light, but the joyous career of the voile frock is usually sunlit, like the butterflies.

In charming adornments for cotton dresses, good taste gravitates toward simple stitchery, tucks, hemstitching, and drawn work, in keeping with the character of the material, whose charm lies in its daintiness and color. Narrow lingerie laces fit in many schemes of adornment also. Both needlework and lace appear on the frock pictured — narrow val lace in double frills about neck and sleeves and as an outline for the yoke and front panel in the bodice, with outline embroidery in flower design. The girdle is of narrow ribbon slipped through slashes, at a low waistline. Picot edging finishes the slashes and is useful in making many kinds of trimming.

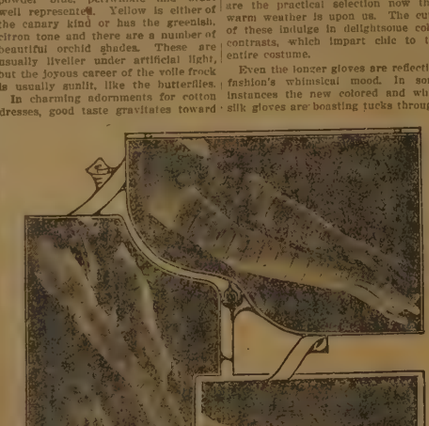
Whether fashion is more interested in our hands or our feet, is a question this season. It is indeed a close competition between our shoes and our gloves as to which shall attain to greater extremes of fantastic interpretation. No longer does a window display of footwear prove a magnet to draw all of passing feminine kind unto itself, at least not if a glove story happen to be next door.

Silk gloves, which to catch a glimpse of is to covet, carry the cunningest of cuffs, some cut in petals, lapped one over another, lined with contrasting color and spreading about the wrist like a full-blown flower. Then there are cuffs perforated as effectively as the paper frill about milady's colonial bouquet. Plaited ruffles, flare cuffs with colorful silk pipings, cuffs so heavily embroidered as to almost conceal the background, cuffs narrow, cuffs wide, cuffs in two-tone effects—these and many more feature the short gloves of today.

If you are looking for something which eclipses every other short glove in point of the unusual, consider the same in black, beige or brown with gold kidskin inset into bright red suede to form the cuff, the embroidery on the backs repeating the gay colorings. Silk gloves in the neutral shades are the practical selection now that warm weather is upon us. The cuffs of these indulge in delightsome color contrasts, which impart chic to the entire costume.

Even the longer gloves are reflecting fashion's whimsical mood. In some instances the new colored and white silk gloves are boasting tucks through-out their length, as the picture shows. Others show introduction of wee plaitings, ofttimes alternated with tucks. However, it is the short glove which has the monopoly, just now, on originality of design.

Among the wrist-length gloves of striking design are white kid ones, with narrow hand-painted cuffs. Other glove types accorded an important place in the accessories for spring and summer, stress exquisite petit-point embroidery. These are found among the more expensive types. Indeed, so handsome are some of the new cuffs, and so worth while, when the glove wears out, these are renewed and stitched onto a new pair. There is a pronounced tendency to match the gloves and hosiery.



Elaborate Modern Gloves.

BUNNIE'S BIRTHDAY

Bunnie Bonnie, you know, was a little black-and-white rabbit. He was as dear a little rabbit as could be and his mother loved him with all her little rabbit heart.

Her pink eyes looked at him lovingly. Her little nose trembled with affection for her darling.

It was time for him to celebrate his birthday. Just what birthday it was Mother Rabbit didn't know. But it was a birthday of some sort, as his little mistress had said so.

"We're going to celebrate little Bunnie Bonnie's birthday," she had said.

Bunnie Rabbit was quite excited. His ears stood up, waiting eagerly to see what would happen. His heart beat with excitement and his nose trembled too. He was just as devoted to his mother as she was to him, and they were both devoted to their mistress.

They were both feeling very much excited.

It was early in the afternoon that their little mistress came out into the garden.

"Many, many happy returns of the day, darling little Bunnie Bonnie," said Bunnie Bonnie's little mistress.

"Oh, I hope you have so many happy returns, you darling little rabbit, and you, too, dear little Mother Rabbit."

She took Bunnie Bonnie up in her arms and kissed him and stroked his soft fur. Then she stroked his mother, too.

Now for the Presents.

They were unhappy if anyone else touched them, but they loved to be petted by their little mistress.

She understood them and they understood her.

"Now for the presents, dear little Bunnie Bonnies," she said.

Here was more excitement. Not only would there be a wonderful thing called a birthday and special kisses and special petting, but there would be presents.

First of all she gave him a lovely bunch of clover.

Then she gave him a beautiful big carrot.

Next she gave him a kind of grass to be had in a field nearby, of which he was very fond.

And then she gave him a leaf of cabbage and two of lettuce.

"Of course you don't have to eat them all at once," she said, "and you'll probably want to share your birthday party with your mother—in fact, I know you will.

"But people always get a lot at a time on their birthdays and so I'm giving you a lot, too.

"Don't eat too much, little Bunnie Bonnie, but have a fine birthday feast."

So Bunnie Bonnie and his mother had a fine birthday meal. They had lettuce for a first course, clover for a second and carrot for dessert.

Then Bunnie Bonnie felt a little sleepy, so Mother Rabbit sang him to sleep with the Bedtime Bunny song. This is it:

Go to sleep.
Go to sleep.
Go to sleep.
Rest, my dear,
Have no fear,
Mother's near.
Carrots are fine,
Upon them we dine,
Without them we pine.

Go to sleep.
Go to sleep.
Go to sleep.
Clover is good,
Very good food.
We're always in mood,
For things that are green,
For things that are green.
It's clear to be seen
That we say what we mean.

Go to sleep.
Go to sleep.
Go to sleep.

Lesson for May 24

SAUL BEGINS HIS GREAT CAREER

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:20-31.

GOLDEN TEXT—"I determined not to know anything among you, save Jesus Christ, and Him crucified."—I Cor. 2:2.

PRIMARY TOPIC—How God Saved Saul From Danger.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Saul Preaching in Damascus.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Saul a Bold Preacher.

YOUNG PEOPLE'S AND ADULT TOPIC—Courage in Witnessing for Christ.

I. Saul Preached Christ in Damascus (vv. 19-22).

1. Saul's Fellowship With the Disciples (v. 19).

After Saul was baptized he remained certain days with the believers in Damascus (v. 19). How beautiful to think of the transformation which took place—the one who was so passionately bent on their destruction was now enjoying fellowship with the disciples.

2. Straightway Preaching in the Synagogues (v. 20).

Saul, like every one who is really converted, begins to tell of the newly found Savior. As soon as he is saved he goes to save others. His message concerned the deity of Christ. His doctrinal belief is summed up in six words, "He is the Son of God."

3. The People Amazed (v. 21).

They knew that the very one who had been the ringleader in persecuting the Christians in Jerusalem, and had come to Damascus for the express purpose of bringing them bound to the chief priests, was now passionately advocating that which he had so vehemently sought to destroy. When a man is saved there ought to be such a change as to cause the people to notice it.

4. The Jews Confounded (v. 22).

Saul retired into Arabia for three years. During this time he was taught the full truths of his ministry (Gal. 1:17-18). Saul increased in spiritual strength and confounded the Jews, proving that Jesus was not only the Son of God, but their Messiah.

II. Saul Escapes From the Jews (vv. 23-25).

He used the Scriptures with such skill that the Jews could not answer him. Finding that the argument was against them, the Jews took counsel how they might destroy Saul. So intent were they upon killing him that they watched the gates of the city day and night that they might take him. When this became known to the disciples, they let him down at night in a basket by the wall.

III. Saul Visits Jerusalem (vv. 26-29).

This journey to Jerusalem was in strange contrast with the one from Jerusalem to Damascus. The one was as a leader of an important expedition under the authority of the Jewish officers with the prospect of a place of distinction in the council of the Jewish nation. Now he is an outcast, disowned by his countrymen, and fleeing for his life. These are the outward circumstances, but he knows the fellowship of the Lord Jesus whom he once hated.

1. Suspected by the Disciples (v. 26).

The believers at Jerusalem had not heard fully about Saul's conversion. They knew nothing of his sojourn in Arabia, and his preaching at Damascus after his return. Therefore they regarded him as a spy. "Part of the penalty of wrongdoing is the difficulty of restoration in the good opinion of honorable men."

2. Barnabas' Confidence in Saul (v. 27).

Barnabas was a man filled with the Holy Spirit (Acts 11:24) and therefore able to discern the reality of Saul's conversion. He was in reality a "son of consolation" and here showed his kind spirit.

3. Saul in Fellowship With the Disciples (v. 28).

He was not content merely to visit with the brethren. He spoke boldly in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

IV. Saul Sent to Tarsus (v. 30).

A conspiracy similar to that one at Damascus was formed against Saul. When the brethren knew of it they sent him to Tarsus. Saul's life was in danger everywhere except among the Gentiles. He now is back to the place of his birth. The first and best place for one's testimony is in his home. Saul's conversion was typical of the conversion of the Jewish nation. Their eyes will be opened by a personal revelation of Jesus Christ to them, and when they accept Him as their Savior and Messiah, they will go forth as witnesses to the Gentiles.

To Know All

"To know all is to forgive all"—and to forgive is to save.

Sense of Duty

A sense of duty may not be the highest motive, but the best men are moved by it.—Presbyterian Record.

Giving to the Poor

Give work rather than alms to the poor. The former drives out indolence, the latter industry.

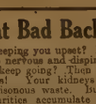
Sin in Infancy

Be not familiar with the idea of wrong, for sin in infancy mothers many an ugly act.

Why That Bad Back?

Is backache keeping you upset? Feel all tired out—so nervous and dispirited you can hardly keep going? Then look to your kidneys! Your kidneys rid the body of poisonous waste. But if they lag, impurities accumulate and poison the whole system. Then one is apt to suffer backache, stabbing pains, headaches, dizziness, and other annoying kidney irregularities. If your kidneys are sluggish, help them with a diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. They are praised the world over. Ask your neighbor!

An Alabama Case



Mrs. Pete Valentine, Nashville Ave., Sylacauga, Ala., says: "My kidneys acted irregularly and a catch seized me in my back every time I stooped. When I straightened the pains became more severe. I couldn't rest well and mornings I felt tired. I was nervous and irritable. I used Doan's Pills and they cured me."

Holds Overshoes On

Those who traverse muddy roads will be interested in a recently patented device for preventing overshoes from being pulled off by deep mud. It is in the shape of two metal grippers that clamp the overshoe to the shoe itself. For a high shoe there is a hook that is attached to the top of the shoe and extends down to hold the gripping jaws. The jaws are movable so that too much wear will not be brought to bear on one spot.—Scientific American.

Responsibility Placed

Men are responsible for women's gowns. A century of cheap jokes about women buttoning their dresses up the back, has led to almost nothing.—Hopkins (Mo.) Journal.

Mother—
Be very careful of the laxative you give baby

The reason so many Babies become seriously ill is frequently because of the laxatives some mothers give. Laxatives that may be all right for older children are frequently too drastic for babies, especially at the teething age.

Mother, be careful! Give no other laxatives than Dr. Moffett's Teethina to Babies under three years of age. It is a Physician's prescription and thoroughly cleanses the little stomach, liver and bowels without nausea, griping or other harmful after effects. Teethina costs only 30c, yet you would not trade the quick relief it gives Baby for any price.

WOMEN WANT BETTER FOREST PRESERVATION

Montgomery.—The women citizens of the nation are demanding more and better forests. The reason is that better homes depend upon better forests. The home maker is turning her attention to home building.

Every home, from the small farm cottage to the pretentious city residence, is built largely or entirely of lumber. The cost of lumber has been advancing tremendously in recent years, due to the disappearance of the forests. The construction of thousands of homes has been restricted or prevented on account of these costs.

One-half of the brain power of the nation lies in the women citizens. There are certain fundamental problems that require the entire intelligence of the country to solve. To restore the productivity of our forests so that the industries dependant upon them may be perpetuated, and that lumber and other forest products may be obtainable at a reasonable cost, is one of these problems.

At the recent State convention of the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs at Mobile, better homes was the watchword and forestry was given a prominent place on the program. In other states also the women are becoming especially active in demanding that the forests with their numerous benefits to mankind be conserved.

The influence of the women citizens is very far reaching. Not only is this exerted through personel associations in social and business affairs, but it is to be remembered that about 90 per cent of the school teachers of the country are women. With such a vast army cooperating in the protection and development of the forests of the country, Mother Nature may well conclude that her gifts in aid of humanity are not wholly unappreciated.

Relation of Road Surface to Tire Wear Discussed

In comparing the cost of vehicle operation on different types of road surfaces engineers have, until recently, been handicapped by a lack of definite cost data. Tests to ascertain the fuel required to propel a vehicle over different types of pavements have been made from time to time. The last and most comprehensive of these was completed by the Iowa State College Engineering Experiment Station and showed that, considering the saving in gasoline alone, concrete pavements were cheaper than any other type of road surfacing, even including earth, when only 2250 vehicles a day passed over the road. It seems reasonable to suppose that fuel is not the only thing saved by driving over concrete pavements. Both tire wear and vehicle depreciation should be less than on rougher road surfaces. There were no definite figures to prove this assumption, however, until the Engineering Experment Station of the State College of Washington undertook a series of tire wear tests. Although these tests have not yet been completed, the first progress report, printed in the college's Monthly Bulletin for January, 1925, gives results which show even greater proportionate savings on concrete than were found iin the fuel tests.

The tests were run on two types of roads—portland cement and western macadam. Western macadam is a little different from ordinary macadam. The rock of which it is made is a hard basalt or lava, which crushes into sharp triangular fragments.

The bottom course is 1 to 2-inch stones bound together by clay. The top course is composed of all the material from one inch down. No water is used to bind this top and it is not rolled, but is left to be consolidated by traffic. The ruts which form as the stones consolidate are filled by the maintenance patrol, and in a few weeks the surface becomes a smooth, uniform roadway covered with a thin layer of fine, loose, broken stone.

Test runs were made with 5 passenger, 4-cylinder touring cars, having a total loaded weight of 3,500 pounds. Both tire wear and gasoline consumption were determined at different air temperatures, for different speeds, and on concrete, good macadam and poor macadam.

Fire wear was determined by weight Before and after each run the tires were removed from the car, but not from the rims, thoroughly cleaned with brushes, wiped with a cloth, deflated and then weighed on a sensitive scale which gave results accurate to 1-2 gram. The average wear on the 4 tires of a car was taken as the wear for that run.

Gasoline consumption was determined by weighing the fuel in the tank at the beginning and end of each run.

In determining the effect of speed on tire wear, test runs at different speeds were made over the same section of macadam road. The tests revealed that tire wear increased from about 0.40 pounds of rubber per 1,000 miles of travel at 15 miles an hour to 0.52 pounds at 33 miles an hour, or about 30 per cent.. The greater wear at higher speeds is accounted for by two facts. First, at higher speeds the tire suffers more violent impact against obstructions in the road. Second, when a tire bounds clear of the road, as it does more frequently at higher speeds, it starts to spin; when it again comes in contact with the road, appreciable amounts of rubber are ground off before its speed is reduced to road speed. Both these causes of increased wear are minimized by an even road surface, like that of concrete pavements.

Early in the tests it was discovered that temperature affects tire wear, the wear increasing with increasing temperature. To determine just what this temperature effect was, a series of runs were made over the same roads, but at different air temperatures. No attempt was made to determine the temperature of the tires themselves, as that depends on several things, such as the degree of inflation, speed, load, road condition, and the structure of the tire. It was found that the rate of wear at 90 degrees F., was almost four times that at 40 degrees F.

Comparing the runs made on the two types of surfaces when air temperatures and speeds are identical it is found that tires wear 17 times faster on good macadam and 56 times faster on very poor macadam than on concrete. The actual cost of tire wear in the tests was 98 cents on concrete, $16.72 cents on the same length of good macadam and $56.15 on very poor macadam. These figures are based on a cost of $34.50 for a 33 by 4 inch tire and tube.

The tests also showed that if the gasoline required to drive a car over a certain length of concrete road cost $10.00 it would cost $11.13 on a good macadam road of the same length and $15.07 on poor macadam.

ALABAMA FACTS OF INTEREST TO ALL

In 1924 while Jefferson county was receiving about one-third back from the state for what it paid in to the treasury in taxes, Winston county, which paid the least in, was getting back over twice as much as it paid in. The latter received $98,785.28 from the state, paying in $33,567.25.

Pike county is named in honor of Z. M. Pike, of New Jersey. Troy is the county seat.

Oscar W. Underwood of Birmingham, and James Thomas Heflin of LaFayette, are the United States senators from this state. Both are democrats.

There are four state normal schools of class A calibre in Alabama. They are: Florence State Normal, Jacksonville State Normal, Livingston State Normal, Troy State Normal. The other Normal school, placed in class B division, is Daphne State Normal.

The population of Chambers county in 1920 was 31,201.

Morgan county in 1920 had a population of 39,858. The assessed value of the property there was $17,819,205. There is 375,680 acres of land area.

Nearly 18 per cent of the single track mileage of the railroads running through Alabama are found in the state of their entire systems.

GOOD WILL PROVEN AS WORTH MILLIONS

Besides physical valuation running into many millions, the recent purchasers of "Dodge Brothers" paid $50,000,000 for the name alone, which, in law books and in trade parlance is called the "good will of the business." "Two and a half decades ago," say press dispatches, this name was worth only "about $4.00 per day when signed to a machine payroll and accompanied by nine hours work." Today it stands for gigantic tranactions that make the "Morgans and Du Ponts sit up and take notice."

Every legitimate business, large or small, carries that indefinable but valuable, that unseen yet visual and perceptible asset known as good will. It is stock in trade for the merchant, and it is a client-producing asset for the professional man and the tradesman. After all, it is but the spiritual and the moral part of a business and of business relationships; and justly proud should be the person, firm or corporate utility that can create this almost incalculable valuation in terms of strength, reliability and fair dealing.

LET FARMERS ALONE

The vice-president of the National Council of the Farmers' Cooperative Marketing Association said, "All the farmer asks of Congress is to be allowed to settle his own problems himself." The organization unanimously endorsed him.

Price fixing was an uter failure from the farmers' standpoint, as absurd as fixing a uniform leg or waist measure for farmers' pants. Preferential favoritism in a country professing equality are doubtful blessings. The theory that "He who steals for you will also steal from you." bobs up every time any man gets a special favor. What the farmer wants most is industrial peace, there is no war in his own field—the wars are carried on somewhere else, and he is the goat. Political nostrums without count have been proposed for farm relief by self-appointed expert Moseses without any real farm mandate; mostly they were clever tries for public notoriety of public jobs.

That does not say the farmer is not interested in good legislation. On the contrary, no one is more vitually affected. He needs better distribution, but so, too, do the people who buy farm products. He needs to know more about the advantages of diversified farming. Also he needs to apply more business-like methods to many farm operations. He is learning all the time.

He is about the gamest sportsman there is in any industry. Just give him a chance, let him alone without a lot of foolish volunteer uplifting and he will come through and feed the world. —The manufacturer.

GOOD ROADS BOND ISSUE

Good roads is the paramount question being discussed at the present time not only in this country, but in every country of the world. The world war brought the transportation problem forcibly to the front, and the automobile industry gave an added incentive.

In Alabama we have the question before us, for the reason that the state of Alabama has a mammoth road building program on its hands, and the problem of financing the work is originally planned.

With the present bond issue the road [illegible] will be of solid concrete from the Shelby to the Watauga line. But the plan called for the building of a road across the county crosswise of this one.

From the present bond issue the [illegible] sufficient to do this other building, and the question naturally resolves itself into this. Shall we use up the present funds and stop, or do the people want to finish the job as at first planned and have a road crosswise of their county like the [illegible]?

[illegible] say he is not proud of [illegible] building and which will be finished some time this year. But [illegible] otherwise of our county [illegible] citizens who have [illegible] whatever, may [illegible] conveniences and [illegible] of the vast amount of money expended for this work.

The first consideration is the amount [illegible] needed for the work. $25,000 to $35,000 a mile looks large, and is a large amount. Also, the political question of whether those in charge of this work spend the money in a way that makes each dollar go as far as it should. That is the paramount question [illegible]

[illegible] the people of Alabama as a whole do, we don't believe there is many [illegible] that would favor completing the road plan originally outlined [illegible] each county seat with the adjoining county seat, if they knew they would get absolute justice in its distribution of the funds.

The point has been raised that Alabama highway department has not spent wisely at all times and has allowed [illegible] high cost to be placed on the [illegible] road in this state. We [illegible] truthfulness of this statement for several reasons. But, if such be the case, we believe it lays mostly [illegible] people in the several counties through which the roads are built. The [illegible] highway department has allowed different counties to decide among themselves as to the kind of road they wanted. Many of them have selected a gravel road, our neighbor to the north, for instance.

Chilton county, be it said, has a concrete road under construction, which we believe to be one of the most economical of all roads in point of service.

This is not a defense of the present highway department, but is just an honest conviction that although it has made mistakes in the gigantic undertaking, it nevertheless has endeavored to learn the best in road building and put it through. It is not infallable, and neither are the best plans of road building learned to date. The omega in road building has not yet been reached.

The funds for road building will be exhausted before another legislature will be elected and formulate a plan to finish this work. So, if the work is not to be stopped and all the organizations of road construction disintegrated, it will be necessary for the present legislature to be called in session and put a bond issue before the people. Should this be done, and the people vote in favor of same, the program could be carried through with less expense than to wait.

It is for the people to say what they want done in this matter. Quick action should be taken, and while we have construction crews already organized and in the several counties let them complete the work if the people want it done. It is the cheapest way.

We don't care who is chairman of the highway board or who its members are, let them give us service and if the people want a bond issue let's get the work done and get the benefit of the good roads.

Showers these days are no more than "Showers of Blessings."

Highway work in Chilton county is being pushed rapidly. It will be a reality by Christmas.

The Baptist at Memphis show where they stand. We congratulate them. "Be on the upgrade."

Editors of Alabama are planning a grand time in June at Foley. Goodbye fish and "hot dogs."

One argument for evolution is that man made the monkeywrench. He is always monkeying with other people's business.

How does Oscar Underwood expect to get elected indefinely when he gets further and further away from the people? Suppose we elected him as senator-at-large from the United States as a special representative of everything the common people stand for.

Editors all over the state are "raisin' Cain," pro and con, on whether to build more roads or stay where we are. A highway across Chilton county from Plantersville through Maplesville in to the river like the one from Calera to Marbury, would make Chilton county farm lands leap in price to unthought of proportions.

WHICH SYSTEM IS BEST

We have heard a lot about the road that the Romans built but wages and life counted for little in their construction.

In ten years' time the United States has built more hard surfaced roads with well paid labor than the Romans ever thought of constructing. Today a man can travel for thousands of miles in this country on a wonderful hard surfaced highways. They furnish a pleasant and safe means of tranportation for millions of people.

Road commissioners realize more and more that it is essential to utilize old gravelled and macadamized roads as the base for permanent hard surfaced pavements.

While $100,000 might build a mile of Roman road which would last for a thousand years, the same $100,000 will put an asphaltic concrete surface 20 feet wide, two inches thick at the center and five inches thick at the edges over nearly six-miles of worn out macadam under the plan of the California Highway Commission for utilizing old gravel and macadam roads as a base for a hard surface covering. Six times as many people can be served and six times as many miles of highway that will last for many years can be built.

UNFAIR TO THE RURAL COMMUNITIES

Taxation was the all-absorbing subject before the last California State Legislature. The Agricultural Legislative Committee, the California Farm Bureau Federation, the California State Grange and the California Farmer's Union, in an open letter to the members of the Legislature, said:

"The greatest problem before the people of California, as well as the nation, is the equitable distribution of the tax burden. The united farm organizations of California are calling the attention of the patriotic and far-seeing citizens of this state to the necessity of immediately correcting abuses in our system of taxation."

The communication stated that while arguing neither for nor against public ownership as a matter of principal, the fact remained that ecause of tax exemption of such properties under the present law, the rural people of California furnished more than their share of the taxes to conduct state government.

It was pointed out that if publicly owned utilities in the state had paid their fair share of taxes in 1924, several million dollars would have been added to the state's treasury. Under the present law, a municipally or other political subdivision of the state where the population is congested, can own all its enterprises free from taxation and enjoy the service at unfairly low rates, leaving the farmers and the citizens of other communities who cannot benefit by such service or rates, to pay the tax burdens which the favored few unjustly escape.

The farm organizations asked correction of present legislation permitting such conditions to exist, and for a more fair and more equitable basis of state taxation. Farmers in California produces over $600,000,000 worth of original wealth annually, outranking other industries. Farmers in nation give up 16.6 per cent of their gross earnings annually to tax collectors. In California, it was stated, on account of method of collecting state taxes, the farmer's condition was even worse.

For these reasons the farm organizations went on record demanding legislation correcting the present tax inequalities as essential to the continued welfare and prosperity of California as a whole.

Forestry Industry Employs Many People

Montgomery, May 5.—One-tenth of the American people make their living through the forest industry or in the remanufacture of forest products, says a statement issued by the Alabama Commission of Forestry. It is easy to see, continues the statement, the great confusion and loss that would attend the disappearance of these industries with the consequent necessity of economic readjustment.

Proper protection and management of the present area of forest land will permit the indefinite continuance of the general employment and general business now dependent upon forest growth. If the large bodies of non-agricultural land already cut over and now lying idle should be restored to timber growing, considerably more than one-tenth of the country's population could depend upon the forests. In Alabama, in particular, which is one of thenatural timber growing states of the country, the proportion would be much higher, probably approximating twenty per cent. If, however, the forests are to be practically abandoned and neglected when the present timber crop is removed, the employment and business conditions in the state will be very seriously disrupted.

There is strong competition among the nations of the earth for the control of raw meterials. The United States, if it will, may always own and control a sufficient supply of forest products to maintain a commanding position. Alabama with its long growing season, variety of valuable tree species and accessability to the great markets possesses advantages in this connecton for above most of the states.

SYNOPSIS.—Introducing "So Big," Dirk DeJong in his in- cy. And his mother, Selina ong, daughter of Simeon Peake, gambler and gentleman of fortune. Her life, to young womanhood in Chicago in 1888, has been unconventional, some- what roamy, but generally enjoy- able. At school her chum is Julie ampel, daughter of August ampel, butcher. Simeon is killed in a quarrel that is not his own. Selina is nineteen years old and practically destitute. Selina se- ures a position as teacher at the ish Prairie school, in the out- rts of Chicago, living at the me of a truck farmer, Klaas ool.

Selina's quick glance encompassed e room. In the window were a few ly plants in pots on a green-paint- wooden rack. There was a sofa h a wrinkled calico cover; three ing chairs; some stark crayons of redibly hard-featured Dutch an- ts on the wall. It was all neat, f, unlovely. But Selina had known many years of boarding-house ugli- s to be offended at this.

Maartje had lighted a small glass- wled lamp. A steep, uncarpeted rway, inclosed, led off the sitting m. Up this Maartje Pool, talking, d the way to Selina's bedroom. Se- a was to learn that the farm wom often inarticulate through lack of panionship, becomes a torrent of ch when opportunity presents itself. A narrow, dim, close-smelling hall- y, uncarpeted. At the end of it a or opening into the room that was be Selina's. As its chill struck her the marrow three objects caught r eyes. The bed, a huge and ot unhandsome walnut mausoleum, ared its somber height almost to the om's top. The mattress of straw d cornhusks was unworthy of this e, but over it Mrs. Pool had dfully pieced a feather bed, ched and quilted, so that Selina soft and warm through the win- Along one wall stood a low chest ckly brown as to appear black. e front panel of this was curiously ed. Selina stooped before it and the second time that day said- low beautiful!" then looked quick- round at Maartje Pool as though sprut of finding her laughing as Klaas Pool had laughed. But Mrs. ol's face reflected the glow in her wn. She came over to Selina and oped with her over the chest, hold- g the lamp so that its yellow flame lted up the scrolls and tendrils of he carved sunflower. While she di- bered forefinger she traced the bold ourishes on the panel. "See? How makes out letters?"

Selina peered closer. "Why, sure nough! This first one's an S!"

Maartje was kneeling before the est now. "Sure an S. For Sophia. is a Holland bride's chest. And ere is K. And here is big D. For kes Sophia Kroon DeVries. It is ly, says two hundred years. My other she gave it to me when I was arried, and her mother she gave it her when she was married, and her mother gave it to her when she as married, and her—"

"I should think so!" exclaimed Se- a, rather meaninglessly; but stem- the torrent. "What's in it? Any- ing? There ought to be bride's inen in it, yellow with age."

"It is," cried Maartje Pool and gave little bounce that imperiled the up.

"No!" The two on their knees sat cing at each other, widespread, like ouglaris.

"Here—wait." Maartje Pool thrust e lamp into Selina's hand, raised e lid of the chest, dived expertly o its depths amidst a great rustling f old newspapers and emerged red- aced with a Dutch bauque and volum- ous skirt of silk; an age-yellow cap hose wings, still with embroidery, ood out grandly on either side; a ottle of wooden shoes, stained terra- otta like the sails of the Volendam ishing boats, and carved from toe to eel in a delicate and intricate pat- ern. A bridal gown, a bridal cap, ridal shoes.

"Wolf!" said Selina, with the feel- ng of a little girl in a rich attic on a rainy day. She clasped her hands. "May I dress up in it sometime?"

Maartje Pool, folding the garments neatly, looked shocked and horrified. "Never must anybody dress up in a bride's dress, only to get married! It brings bad luck." Then, as Selina broiled the stiff silken folds of the skirt with a slim and caressing fore- finger: "So you get married to a High Prairie Dutchman. For you wear it?" At this absurdity they both aughed again. Selina thought that this school-teaching venture was start- ling out very well. She would have much things to tell her father—then she remembered. She shivered a lit- tle as she stood up now. There surged over her a great wave of longing for her father—for the theater treats, for his humorous philosophical drawl, for the Chicago streets, and the ugly Chicago houses; for Julie; for Miss Fister's school; for anything and any one that was accustomed, known, and therefore dear. She had a horrible premonition that she was going to cry, began to blink very fast, turned a little blindly in the dim light and caught sight of the room's third ar- resting object. A blue-bunk cylinder of tin sheeting, like a stove and yet unlike. It was polished like the length of pipe in the sitting-room be- low. Indeed, it was evidently a giant flower of this stem.

"What's that?" demanded Selina, pointing.

Maartje Pool, depositing the lamp on the little wash-stand preparatory to leaving, smiled pridefully. "Drum."

"Drum?"

"For heat your room." Selina touched it. It was icy. "When there is fire," Mrs. Pool added, hastily. Selina was to learn that its heating powers were mythical. Even when the stove in the sitting room was blazing away with a cheerful roar none of the glow communicated itself to the drum. It remained as coolly in- different to the blasts breathed upon it as a girl hotly besieged by an un- welcome lover.

"Maartje!" roared a voice from belowstairs. The voice of the hungry male. There was wafted up, too, a faint smell of scorching. Then came sounds of a bumping and thumping along the narrow stairway.

"Og heden!" cried Maartje, in a panic, her hands high in air. She was off.

Left alone in her room Selina un- locked her trunk and took from it two photographs—one of a mild-looking man with his hat a little on one side, the other of a woman who might have been a twenty-five-year-old Selina, minus the courageous jaw-line. Look- ing about for a fitting place on which to stand these leather-framed treas- ures she considered the top of the chill drum, humorously, then actually placed them there, for lack of a better refuge, from which vantage point they regard- ed her with politely interested eyes. Perhaps they would put up a shelf for her. That would serve for her little stock of books and for the pictures as well. She was enjoying that little flush of exhilaration that comes to a woman, unpacking. She took out her neat pile of warm woolen underwear, her stout shoes. She shook out the crushed folds of the wine-colored cash- mere. Now, if ever, she should have regretted its purchase. But she didn't. No one, she reflected, as she spread it roughly on the bed, possessing wine-col- ored cashmere could be altogether downcast.

From below stairs came the hiss of frying. Selina washed in the chill wa- ter of the basin, took down her hair and coiled it again before the swimmy little mirror over the wash-stand. She adjusted the stitched white bands of the severe collar and patted the cuffs of the brown lady's-cloth. The tight bosque was fastened with buttons from throat to waist. Her fine long head rose above this trying base with such grace and dignity as to render the stiff garment beautiful. It was a day of appalling bunchiness and equally ap- palling tightness in dress; of panniers, galloons, plastrons, revers, bustles, all manner of lumpy bedevilment. That Selina could appear in this disfiguring garment a creature still graceful, slim, and pliant was a sheer triumph of spirit over matter.

She blew out the light now and de- scended the steep wooden stairway to the unlighted parlor. The door be- tween parlor and kitchen was closed. Selina sniffed sensitively. There was pork for supper. She was to learn that there was always pork for supper.

She hesitated a moment there in the darkness. Then she opened the kitch- en door. There swam out at her a haze of smoke, from which emerged round blue eyes, guttural talk, the smell of frying grease, of stable, of loam, and of woolen wash freshly brought in from the line. With an inrush of cold air that sent the blue haze into swirls the outer kitchen door opened. A boy, his arm piled high with stove-wood, entered; a dark, handsome sullen boy who stared at Selina over the arm'sful of wood. Selina stared back at him. There sprang to life between the boy of twelve and the woman of nineteen an electric current of feeling.

"Roelf," thought Selina; and even took a step toward him, inexplicably drawn.

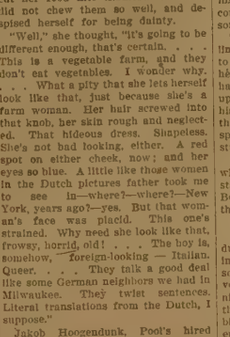
"Harry then with that wood there!" fretted Maartje at the stove. The boy flung the armful into the box, brushed his sleeve and coat-front mechanically, still looking at Selina.

Klaas Pool, already at table, thumped with his knife. "Sit down, teacher." Selina hesitated, looked at Maartje. Maartje was holding a fry- ing pan aloft in one hand while with the other she thrust and poked a fresh stick of wood into the open-lidded stove. The two pigtails seated them- selves at the table, sat with its red- checked cloth and bone-handled cutlery. Roelf flung his cap on a wall-hook and sat down. Only Selina and Maartje re- mained standing. "Sit down! Sit down!" Klaas Pool said again, jovial- ly. "Well, how is cabbages?" He chuckled and winked. A duet of tit- ters from the pigtails. Maartje at the stove smiled; but a trifle grimly, one might have thought, watching her. Evi- dently Klaas had not hugged his joke in secret. Only the boy Roelf remained unsmiling. Even Selina, feeling the red mounting to her cheeks, smiled a little, nervously, and sat down with some suddenness.

Maartje Pool now thumped down on the table a great bowl of potatoes fried in grease; a platter of ham. There was bread cut in chunks. The coffee was rye, toasted in the oven, ground, and taken without sugar or cream. Of this food there was plenty. It made Mrs. Tebbitt's Monday night meal seem am- brosial. Selina's visions of chickens, oily-koeks, wild ducks, crusty crullers, and pumpkin pies vanished, never to return. She had been very hungry, but now, as she talked, nodded, smiled, she cut her food into infinitesimal bites, did not chew them so well, and de- spised herself for being dainty.

"Well," she thought, "it's going to be different enough, that's certain. . . . This is a vegetable farm, and they don't eat vegetables. I wonder why. . . . What a pity that she lets herself look like that, just because she's a farm woman. Her hair screwed into that knob, her skin rough and neglect- ed. That hideous dress. Shapeless. She's not bad looking, either. A red spot on either cheek, now; and her eyes so blue. A little like those women in the Dutch pictures father took me to see in—where?—New York, years ago?—yes. But that wom- an's face was placid. This one's strained. Why need she look like that, frowsy, horrid, old! . . . The boy is, somehow, foreign-looking — Italian. Queer. . . . They talk a good deal like some German neighbors we had in Milwaukee. They twist sentences. Literal translations from the Dutch, I suppose."

Jakob Hoogendunk, Pool's hired hand, was talking. Supper over, the men sat relaxed, pipe in mouth.



"Fields of Cabbages—What You Said —They Are Beautiful," He Stam- mered.

Maartje was clearing the supper things, with Geertje and Jozina making a great pretense at helping. If they gig- gled like that in school, Selina thought, she would, in time, go mad, and knock their pigtailed heads together.

Roelf, at the table, sat poring over a book, one slim hand, chapped and gritty with rough work, outspread on the cloth. Selina noticed, without knowing she noticed, that the fingers were long, slim, and the broken nails thin and fine.

Selina wanted, suddenly, to be alone in her room—in the room that but an hour before had been a strange and terrifying chamber with its towering bed, its chill drum, its ghostly bride's chest. Now it had become a refuge, cozy, safe, infinitely desirable. She turned to Mrs. Pool. "I—I think I'll go up to my room. I'm very tired. The ride, I suppose. I'm not used . . . Her voice trailed off.

"Sure," said Maartje, briskly. She had finished the supper dishes and was busy with a huge bowl, both, a baking board. "Sure go up. I got my bread to set yet and what all."

"If I could have some hot water—"

"Roelf! Stop once that reading and show school teacher where is hot wa- ter. Geertje! Jozina! Never in my world did I see such." She cuffed a convenient pigtail by way of emphasis. A wail arose.

"Never mind. It doesn't matter. Don't bother." Selina was in a sort of panic now. She wanted to be out of the room. But the boy Roelf, with quiet swiftness, had taken a battered tin pail from its hook on the wall, had lifted an iron slab at the back of the kitchen stove. A gust of steam arose. He dipped the pail into the tiny reser- voir thus revealed. Then, as Selina made as though to take it, he walked past her. She heard him ascending the wooden stairway. She wanted to be after him. But first she must know the name of the book over which he had been poring. But between her and the book outspread on the table were Pool, Hoogendunk, dog, pigtails, Maartje. She pointed with a deter- mined forefinger. "What's that book Roelf was reading?"

Maartje thumped a great ball of dough on the baking board. Her arms were white with flour. She kneaded and pummeled expertly. "Woorden book."

Well. That meant nothing. Woorden book. Woorden b— Dimly the mean- ing of the Dutch words began to come to her. But it couldn't be. She brushed past the men in the tipped- back chairs, stepped over the collie, reached across the table. "Woorden —word. Boek—book. Word book. "He's reading the dictionary!" Selina said, aloud. "He's reading the diction- ary!" She had the horrible feeling that she was going to laugh and cry at once; hysteria.

Selina flung a good-night over her shoulder and made for the stairway. He should have all her books. She would send to Chicago for books. She would spend her thirty dollars a month buying books for him. He had been reading the dictionary!

Roelf had placed the pail of hot water on the little wash-stand and had lighted the glass lamp. He was intent on replacing the glass chimney within the four prongs that held it firm. Downstairs, in the crowded kitchen, he had seemed quite the man. Now, in the yellow lamplight, his profile sharp- ly outlined, she saw that he was just a small boy with tousled hair. About his cheeks, his mouth, his chin, one could even see the last faint traces of soft infantile roundness.

"He's just a little boy," thought Se- lina, with a quick pang. He was about to pass her now, without glancing at her, his head down. She put out her hand; touched his shoulder. He looked up at her, his face startlingly alive, his eyes blazing. He came to Selina that until now she had not heard him speak. Her hand pressed the thin stuff of his coat sleeve.

"Cabbages — fields of cabbages— what you said—they are beautiful." he stammered. He was terribly in earnest. Before she could reply he was out of the room, clattering down the stairs.

Selina stood, blinking a little.

The glow that warmed her now en- dured while she splashed about in the inadequate basin; took down the dark soft masses of her hair; put on the voluminous long-sleeved, high-necked nightgown. Just before she blew out the lamp her last glimpse was of the black drum stationed like a patient eunuch in the corner; and she could smile at that; even giggle a little, what with weariness, excitement and a gen- eral feeling of being awake in a dream. But once in the vast bed she lay there utterly lost in the waves of terror and loneliness that envelop one at night in a strange house amongst strange people. She listened to the noises that came from downstairs; voices gruff, unaccustomed; shrill, high. These ceased and gave place to others less accustomed to her city- bred ears; a dog's bark and an answer- ing one; a far-off train whistle; the dull thud of hoofs stamping on the barn floor; the wind in the bare tree branches outside the window.

Her watch—a gift from Simeon Peake on her eighteenth birthday— with the gold case all beautifully en- graved with a likeness of a gate, and a church, and a waterfall and a bird, linked together with spirals and flour- ishes of the most graceful inscription, was ticking away companionably un- der her pillow. She felt for it, took it out and held it in her palm, under her cheek, for comfort.

She knew she would not sleep that night. She knew she would not sleep—

She awoke to a clear, cold November dawn; children's voices; the neighing of horses; a great sizzling and hissing, and scent of frying bacon; a clucking and squawking in the barnyard. It was six o'clock. Selina's first day as a school teacher. In a little more than two hours she would be facing a whole roomful of round-eyed Geertjes and Jozinas and Roelfs. The bedroom was cruelly cold. As she threw the bed- clothes aside Selina decided that it took an appalling amount of courage— this life that Simeon Peake had called a great adventure.

Anyway, Selina finds a kin- dred soul in Roelf, who also thinks cabbages beautiful.

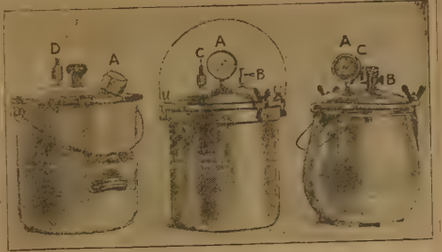
Scientific Future Love

The matrimonial reports of our day are underlining to put love on a sound, scientific basis. Let us skip a few hundred years and behold the synthet- ic romance of a youth and a maid of some generations to come. The young man, armed with a stethoscope, a tape measure and the machine making a blood test, goes to call upon the lady whose charms have attracted him. He stops a vein, listens to the thump of her heart and to the wind whistling through her bronchial tubes and ends his labors with a careful examination of the soles of her feet. Satisfied with the showing he makes a request for a kiss and obtains one, duly hygienized through a strainer whipped from a vanity bag. That is, he does unless the young woman wallops him instead. —Toledo Blade.

Mozart

It is doubtful if anybody knows the exact spot where Mozart is buried. A violent storm was raging at the time of the funeral, and the hearse went its way unaccompanied to the churchyard, and his body was committed to the paupers' corner. In 1859 the city of Vienna erected on the probable spot a monument to his memory.

SELECTION OF STEAM PRESSURE CANNER



Three Pressure Cookers That May Be Used for Canning Small Quantities— A, Pressure Gauge; B, Pet Cock; C. Safety Valve; D, Combined Pet Cock and Safety Valve.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A steam pressure canner is considered essential for the canning of all vegetables, except tomatoes, and for meats, fish and mixtures. Miscellaneous Circular 24, "Time-tables for Home Canning of Fruits and Vegetables," gives directions for preparing the various non-acid vegetables for canning, and the length of time each should be processed. The circular may be obtained by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington.

In selecting a pressure canner the following points should be carefully checked: A pressure canner should be strongly built and the top should be equipped with a pressure gauge, a thermometer, and a safety valve. Since the temperature is a measure of the pressure, it is ordinarily assumed that one can be interpreted in terms of the other. The pressure gauge, however, does not always indicate the actual temperature within the canner, and it is better to have both a gauge and a thermometer, for one then serves to check the accuracy of the other. In size, a pressure canner should be suited to the kind of containers and the probable number to be handled at one time. In case the canner must be lifted on and off the stove during canning, it is also important that it should not be too heavy.

In using the pressure canner, wait until steam flows from the pet cock before closing; otherwise the pressure is no indication of the temperature. Commence to count time when the pressure reaches the desired point, not be- fore.

WASHSTAND HANDY IN GIRL'S ROOM

Problem Solved by Young Virginia Club Girl.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In any home where there is no run- ning water on the second floor it be- comes necessary to have a basin, pitcher, slop jar, soap dish and holder for the toothbrush somewhere in the bedroom. These useful furnishings do not, however, add to the appearance of the room, and when one has no washstand of the usual type it is hard to know just what to do with them. A little fifteen-year-old club girl in Vir- ginia, Ruby Bing, solved her problem in such a successful and inexpensive way that the idea could be carried out by anyone. She built her own stand, to begin with, out of a packing box, some old lumber for legs, and a 10- cent towel bar. Then she made a curtain for the front of the stand out of unbleached muslin, with yellow butterfly appliques, and a runner to go over the top, both finished with a buttonholed edge in black. This was done as part of her sewing club work. Behind the curtain most of the unat- tractive washing paraphernalia was concealed. The pictures were taken by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Egg Dressing for Slaw Especially Acceptable

Slaw, or raw shredded cabbage, either hot or cold, is usually made with a cooked dressing that does not contain oil, and hence for those who dislike the flavor of oil, it is especially acceptable. When eggs are plentiful and may be used freely, slaw with egg dressing is not extravagant. The egg yolks contribute iron, fat, and other valuable constituents to the diet. This recipe is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Egg Dressing for Hot Slaw.

2 eggs
4 tablespoonfuls water or cab- bage stock
3 tablespoonfuls vinegar, or to taste
2 tablespoonfuls shredded green pepper or 1 tea- spoonful onion juice, or ¼ tea- spoonful celery seed
1 teaspoonful salt
Few specks dry mustard
½ medium head cabbage (about 1 quart)
1 tablespoonful sugar

Beat eggs well, add salt, sugar, mus- tard and water or stock; cook in double boiler until it coats the edge of the spoon, thickening like a soft cus- tard; then add the vinegar, and pour while still very hot over the shredded raw cabbage. Let stand a few mo- ments to blend flavor of dressing with cabbage. This may be found even bet- ter on the second day than on the first.

DURABLE TOOLS ARE BEST FOR CLEANING

Implements Needed for Keeping House in Order.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Did you ever count up the various tools—brushes, brooms, mops and so on—that are desirable to keep the av- erage house in good condition, to say nothing of the special implements that may be wanted at housecleaning time? Of course no one person is likely to have a complete set of such tools, nor would the requirements of one home be quite the same as those of another, but an effort should be made to have those which apply to one's chief needs.

Well-made, durable tools should be chosen, and they should be kept in good condition and stored in an order- ly way in a convenient, well-ventilated closet. Almost all cleaning implements can be hung up or set on frames de- vised for keeping them off the floor. In buying tools one must know that each will be used often enough to justify the cost, that no particular tools will require too much care, that each really saves time and energy, or that certain ones will make some disagreeable task less unpleasant.

The bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agri- culture has made the following list of suggested tools from among which the housekeeper may choose according to her needs.

Among brooms and brushes: A corn broom for carpets and rough surfaces, such as concrete, brick and stone. A soft-hair brush for smooth floors and floor coverings, such as wood, tile, lin- oleum, oilcloth and cork carpeting. A wall brush of lamb's wool or loops of soft cotton twine or soft bristles. A bag of cotton flannel slipped over the broom may take the place of a wall brush. A weighted brush with short bristles for polishing waxed floors. Under no circumstances should this brush be allowed to become oily, but it may also be used in polishing oiled floors if carefully covered with a piece of woolen carpet, heavy flannel or bur- lap. A whisk broom for general use. Scrub brushes of various sizes for cleaning unfinished wood, sinks, etc. A long-handled scrub brush will be found especially convenient for floors. Paint brushes or special brushes of various shapes and sizes for upholst- stery, reed furniture and carved sur- faces. A radiator brush, for cleaning between pipes. A refrigerator brush with a flexible wire handle, for clean- ing the drain pipe. Long-handled spiral brush or tongs and prepared soap paper, for cleaning water closets.

Both wet and dry mops will be needed. The wet mop is for floors that are to be washed with water. A con- venient kind has soft, loosely woven cloth fastened to the handle by a flat metal clasp. A mop wringer fastened to a pail saves the worker from much stooping, keeps the hands from the water and removes more water from the cloth than would be possible by hand wringing. The dry mop may be untreated or oiled. In the latter case it holds the dust better and renews the finish on painted, varnished or shel lacked floors, but should not be used on waxed surfaces.

The dustless brush must have a firm edge coming in direct contact with the floor and be shaped on the handle side so as to keep the dirt from falling out. A long-handled dustpan does away with some stooping and is considered con- venient by many.

Dusters should be soft and should not shed lint or ravelings. If dampened or oiled, they hold the dust better. Silk and chamois are excellent for use on highly polished surfaces. Cotton waste and paper are good substitutes for dustcloths in cleaning dirty, greasy surfaces. Feather dusters should not be used, for they scatter but do not remove dirt.

World's Largest Book

Vienna claims the biggest book in the world. It is mounted in a case in one of the corridors. The book is made up of parchment leaves mount- ed on thin wooded borders. On the parchment is maintained a death list of the cloister. The first entry was made in 1410, but even this date is 184 years more recent than the date of the cloister, for this home of Dominic- can monks was founded in 1226, under the Babenbergers.

ALABAMA BUILDING AT A NEW RECORD

STATE'S TOTAL OF $5,561,100 SHOWS TWELVE PER CENT INCREASE OVER MARCH

Birmingham.—April building contracts in Alabama amounted to $5,561,100, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation, a 12 per cent increase over March and a 16 per cent increase over April, 1924.

This record brought the total for work started in Alabama during the past four months up to $18,550,900, the increase over the corresponding period of last year being 9 per cent.

This increase is more than accounted for by the building record for Birmingham, which has had $12,676,800, worth of new construction started during the past four months. This is double the amount for the first four months of 1924. Birmingham's April total was $4,494,800; 73 per cent over March and 121 per cent over April, 1924.

Alabama's April record included: $2,784,100, or 50 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $983,500, or 18 per cent, for public works and utilities; $916,000, of 16 per cent, for education educational buildings; and $507,500, or 9 per cent, for commercial buildings.

STATE NEWS

Two mad dogs were killed in Greenville recently. The dogs, before being killed, had bitten a number of other dogs, a calf and one child. Much excitement was caused by the presence of the mad dogs on Greenville streets. An ordinance is before the city fathers for inoculation of dogs by their owners and unless this is done they will be killed by the city officials. The ordinance will most likely be made a law at the next meeting of the city council.

Roosevelt Thornton, 18-year-old negro, was fined $500 and sentenced to 12 months in the penitentiary by a jury in the circuit court at Gadsden following his conviction of manslaughter in the second degree. A little over a year ago Thornton, whose father is a well-to-do farmer, was driving his car at high speed through Glencoe and in passing around a truck he is alleged to have struck and killed Ralph Sims, 17-year-old white boy.

John Roy and James Cox, negro convicts, escaped from the Horseshoe Lumber Company's mills at River Falls, where they were employed with other state convicts. The negroes climbed into a switch engine in the yards of the lumber mill and covered the engineer with a pistol and compelled him to carry them into the country, where they jumped to the ground.

Madison County authorities have taken the first step for the compulsory collection of the wheel tax which is applicable to all vehicles that use the public highways, as a result of the ruling of the court of appeals that the tax is valid. Suit has been entered in the circuit court against about a dozen delinquents and judgments are sought for the amount of two years taxes and the costs.

The city council of Tuscumbia adopted a milk ordinance which has the approval of the state board of health. The ordinance provides for the grading of milk supplied by dairies and for inspection of herds by authorized officials. Owners of dairies are given 12 months within which to comply with all provisions of the law in regard to the proper grading and handling of milk.

Two marriage licenses were issued from the Mobile probate court to wed the same girl. F. A. Andress was granted a license to marry Miss Garland Kemp. Carl W. Baldwin, who had learned of Andress' action, secured an automobile and accompanied by Miss Kemp, hurried to the court and secured a license and were married the same afternoon.

Announcement has been made that Edward M. Weatherly, assistant examiner of the Alabama Public Service Commission, has resigned his position to become secretary-traffic manager of the Dothan Chamber of Commerce.

Forty-seven boys and girls were graduated from the Etowah County High School Wednesday. Dr. George H. Denny, president of the University of Alabama, delivered the graduating address.

That any ambitious boy can work his way through college and at the same time achieve the highest honors attainable is proved in the college career of Frank S. Arant, of McKenzie, Butler County, Alabama. Arant, a graduate of McKenzie high school, entered Auburn in the summer of 1922. Within three years he has not only acquired a long string of college titles but has received several of the highest honors bestowed at Auburn. For instance, he has just been elected editor-in-chief of the Alabama Farmer, one of the best known student farming publications in the United States. A few weeks ago he was awarded the Gamma Sigma Delta loving cup as the best all-around Junior in agriculture. And more recently he was elected a member of the famous Spades, one of the Auburn Senior honor societies.

Existing rates on farm wagons, carloads, from Florence to all points in Alabama have been found to be unjust by the Alabama Public Service Commission. The commission has prescribed a new scale of rates on a mileage basis on farm wagons from Florence to all points in the state. The decision of the commission was on a complaint brought by the Florence Chamber of Commerce against all railroads of the state.

The license tax levied on a sales basis by the City of Montgomery on gasoline and other liquid motor fuels, kerosene and lubricating oils, was held valid by the supreme court in a decision handed down insofar as it applies within the city limits of Montgomery. The supreme court, however, held that the city cannot levy the tax in territory outside of the city limits and within the police jurisdiction.

The Southern Railway System is preparing to spend several hundred thousand dollars in improvements of its bridge across the Tennessee River at Albany-Decatur, and of other improvements on equipment in that vicinity. Confirmation of three rumors published recently has been made from the offices of Superintendent Payne in Sheffield.

Sheriff Leath, Deputy Sheriff Robertson and Federal Prohibition Officer W. H. Page captured five negroes making whisky in a cabin four miles south of Gadsden. Mr. Page, who was a stranger, had worked his way into the confidence of the negroes and was standing still with the owner's shot gun in his hand when the sheriff and his deputies crashed in.

J. E. Saffold, age 46, was almost instantly killed near Talladega Springs when a log from the Waleo log train fell on him while the train was running. Mr. Saffold was working on the section for the Waleo Lumber Company and stepped off the track to let the train pass, and as it passed a log fell from one of the cars and crushed him.

The Huntsville Board of Education has begun to take under serious consideration the problem of crowded schools which are expected to be even worse next school year than at present. The only hope of solving the situation, it is declared, is to get the new schools that are provided in a recent bond issue completed by the opening of next session.

Only 44 votes were cast against a proposed bond issue election held at Dothan. One hundred thousand dollars in bonds will be floated to build an elementary school building, $25,000 for repairing and remodeling the present high school and $75,000 to take care of the additional sewerage system which was laid in 1923.

Mobile plans to revive its annual fair which was discontinued two years ago. The decision to resume activities at the fair grounds next fall was brought about through the efforts of the Mobile Junior Chamber of Commerce which lists 250 young men as its members.

The annual meeting of the Auburn board of trustees will in all probability be held at Auburn, June 1, instead of May 18, as was originally planned.

STRIKING FEATURES OF NEW STAR COUPSTER

Flexible door windows that may be lowered or raised like pullman car curtains and that disappear within the top of the body when raised are a striking feature of the new Star coupster.

In reality the coupster is a convertible car, affording all the comforts of closed car transportation, yet convertible into an open car by the simple expedient of raising two disappearing windows—a five-second operation. For all practical purposes it is two cars in one.

EFFICIENCY AND SAFETY OF CARS

Numerous Devices Add to Comfort and Satisfaction of Owner.

It is difficult to believe that the oil pressure gauges and the ampere-meters which now appear on the instrument boards of virtually all makes of cars were once regarded by many as unnecessary frills. Today there are a number of accessories being offered which are similarly regarded, which is the same as saying that they would be appreciated if only their advantages were better known.

By equipping a car with some of these fitments, greater satisfaction, efficiency and safety will result. Add front and rear bumpers to the car, attach one of the many rear signaling devices, keep a set of anti-skid chains handy and the car will be enormously benefited in proportion to the cost of the protection. Frequently such safety devices add to the car's appearance and thus not only help protect the owner's original investment, but add to it. A spotlight attached to the windshield and played upon the road may prevent wrecking the car in a ditch.

Take efficiency as another instance. A car that is operated without proper regulation of the cooling system is at all times running inefficiently. This is especially true in winter when the engine is constantly operated at the wrong temperature, either boiling over because the radiator is covered with the lap-robe or running cold because there is no covering at all. The market now offers several radiator covers with openings which can be operated from the dash.

Along the efficiency line are other devices which are destined to filter the gasoline before it is admitted to the carburetor, thus preventing the entrance of dirty or watered gasoline to the carburetor or engine. A device of this character may pay for itself within a month after it is installed.

Then there are shock absorbers, which in addition to giving greater riding comfort, save the springs from breakage on the rebound and thus increase the usefulness of the car by preventing breakdowns. Even cut-outs which were at one time regarded as toys for the speed maniacs are now shown to have a very important use.

Regardless of the selling points of each accessory or all of them as a group, it is a fact that any one of them adds to the second-hand value of a car. So the motorist not only has the use of the accessories with which he equips his car and the savings on insurance, inconvenience, repair bills, etc., but he gets a return premium when he goes to sell the car.

Good Advice Is to Give Machine the Once-Over

There's economy, also satisfaction in giving your car the once-over in the spring, then if it needs replacements or anything else to bring it back to perfect form, have it done as quickly as possible.

Naturally the toll of a year's driving is most severe, and generally there is a reminder or two. Right here the old stitch in time principle works out. When the car is restored to its best shape, almost as good as the day it was bought, riding in it is far more enjoyable, also it will bring a much better price if you care to sell or expect to trade it in on a new car.

Letting your motor car run down is false economy. Eventually it costs you more and in the interim you are not happiest when riding along the highways.

Even little things which you may think are of no special consequence develop into big items in repair bills if allowed to run on without interruption.

Windshield Rattle

When the windshield glass becomes loose in its frame, it causes an annoying rattle. It is very difficult to close the frame so that it will grip the glass more securely without the possibility of breaking the latter. If the glass is not too loose the rattle can be eliminated by filling the space in the frame with shellac. This can be applied with a sharp pointed stick or a brush and should be applied slowly so that it will pack tightly in the opening

WATER INJURY TO TIRES IS SMALL

Running Through Stream Is Not Injurious.

Now and then in the course of an automobile trip a car has to pass through a stream, and the question is sometimes discussed whether the action of the water is harmful to the tires. The same question arises when the car is out in a heavy rain.

Such a wetting is practically nothing at all, either for damage or improvement. At any rate, the effect on the tire is not harmful. Two chief constituents of a tire are rubber and cotton, both vegetable substances, and as a rule water does not injure vegetable matter. As illustrative of this point, there is the old but true story of the farmer who, when one of his rubber boots fell into a well, placed the other on a shelf in a closet. Twelve years later when the well was cleaned the lost boot was found to be in excellent condition, but the boot on the shelf had fallen into ruin.

If running through a brook resulted in cooling a tire the effect would be decidedly beneficial, but a quick dash through the water has little effect on the heated air within the tire and consequently the temperature change in the tire after its bath is negligible.

Water itself apparently does no harm to tires, but the combination of air and moisture commonly known as humidity is very destructive, especially on the cotton in ordinary fabric tires. The moist air works in between the layers of the fabric and rots them out, sometimes even before the tires leave the dealer's storeroom. Cord tires stand humidity better.

The harmful effect of moist air is the chief reason why, when tires are stored, they should be kept in a dry atmosphere. As sunlight is also harmful, the storage place should be darkened.

Shabby Tires Are Not Favored for Any Car

Shabby tires on a good-looking car! Yet stand on any street corner today and count the number of patched-up, dilapidated tires which are being used to the last mile. The cost of keeping these tires running for a few thousand miles would nearly pay for new ones. Mileage such as this comes high.

Tire conservation does not mean picking up a decrepit tire and putting it back into service at a big repair cost just to save a little rubber left in the tread. It means taking care of the tire from the first so that it will be able to deliver all the mileage built into it by the maker. When tires are so far worn that they are soon to blow, it is poor economy to repair them. Such a course means sacrifice of the inner tube as well.

Cheap, makeshift patches, boots and temporary repairs of all kinds are now being called into use as never before, but patching up an old casing in which separation of fabric plies has already begun, cannot give the freedom from tire trouble on which the pleasure in motoring so largely depends.

Tying in Spring Leaves Will Prevent Spreading

Since the leaves in a spring have a tendency to spread apart, it is often hard to replace the spring tie-bolt in autos or trucks.

The easy way is to grip the head of the tie-bolt in a vise, and put all but the last four leaves one on top of the other. The last four leaves are put on crosswise, or spread around like the ribs of an umbrella, which allows the nut to be easily started on the bolt.

With the nut on the bolt, swing the bottom cross leaf into place. Then each succeeding leaf will slide easily into position. Then tighten the tie-bolt nut. Of course, the clamps on each end will have to be removed until the spring is assembled.

Anything These Days

Running downhill recently a driver found to his utter surprise that a motor truck, supposedly at rest in the downhill position on the right side of the road, was actually going uphill backwards. The driver could not get it through his head for a moment and nearly lost control of his machine trying to dope it out, which showed that he was not prepared to expect most anything nowadays. The truck driver was utilizing the lower gear ratio of reverse in order to enable the engine to pull up an extra heavy load.

The Senior Class of Chilton county high school will present two one-act comedies at the high school auditorium on Friday evening, May 29th, at 8 o'clock This represents the new tendency to give two or more short plays for an evening's entertainment, rather than the one play of several acts previously attempted by amateurs.

These two plays are particularly adapted to high school dramatics and the cast of characters has been chosen with great care.

ADVICE AS TO CONTROL OF FOREST FIRES

Many inquiries are received by the State Comission of Forestry asking how to protect forest land against fire The simplest case is where a person owns a small tract of timber within sight of his home. In such a situation the owner, his family, employes and tenants should keep an eye on the woods and promptly investigate every smoke. The sooner the fire is discovered the better. A small fire can be extinguished by raking around it and covering the burning material with sand or earth. If a small bucket pump such as is used for spraying orchard trees is available, water will prove to be of the greatest assistance. The work should be done so thoroughly that even the heaviest wind will not blow sparks outside.

A more difficult case is when a single owner, either an individual or a company, possesses a large tract of forest land which is not entirely in view from the home or headquarters. In this case, during the dry periods of the year, some sharp eyed able-bodied man who is a good woodsman must continually patrol the woods constantly searching for fire. He must not be content with waiting until a fire is forced upon his attention. This man should carry with him tools with which to extinguish the fire as soon as found, meanwhile sending word to his employer by telephone or messenger if assistance is needed. The owner should have his work laid out so that certain employees can be detached from their regular work and sent to fight fire when necessary with the least injury to the regular work.

If the forest area is of considerable extent, one or more high points should be located from which the patrolman can view large parts of the area. If natural lookout points do not exist, it usually pays to build towers towhich the patroman can repair to look over his territory in addition to covering it on the ground by saddle horse, automobile and on foot.

In very large areas comprising timber growth of great value which can be materially injured by fire, it often pays to have someone permanently stationed at the lookout points with telephone lines extending to the central headquarters from which employees may be sent out for patrol work as required. These fixed posts, of course, are in addition to the mobile patrol which can by no means be omitted.

Oftimes a large forest area comprises a considerable number of separate holdings. In such a case it is easy for the owners to organize into a local forestry association and proceed in the same manner as a single owner. In all cases special tools for fire fighting must be kept at convenient places and maintained in good condition. Water carrying equipment is especially important, since a very little water applied at critical times to the most dangerous parts of the fire may do the work of 100 men. It usually pays to have certain of the firefighters detailed to bringing water in closed containers such as large milk cans, etc., so that the fire line will have enough for emergencies when it may be applied effectivel and without waste by means of small spray pumps. Most of the work, however, will have to be done by dry methods, such as whipping, trenching and back firing from firebreaks. Plowing firebreaks around and through the forest areas is a very efficient protective measure. However, firebreaks will not stop a fire unless the fire fighters are present to see that it does not leap the barrier.

A Tribute to an Alabama, Sometimes Neglected, But Always Respected

Washington, D. C., May 6.

To Editor of the Age-Herald:

Some weeks ago I noticed with pleasure and appreciation the favorable setting accorded my "Alabama Statesman in Statuary Hall," as it appeared in the Age-Herald of Birmingham, for which I thank you.

Today, enclosed herewith, I am submitting for publication a tribute not to the dead, but to the living, which I believe will commend itself sufficiently to your good judgement and state pride, as to warrant its appearance in your valuable paper, for the junior senator from our beloved state is growing more and more in the favor and esteem of his associates in the senate, and other high officials here in Washington, as time moves on.

Horace C. Carlisle

Courage to Battle Alone

There's a masterful figure that sits in the senate,
Lending strength to the hindermost row—
A dependable, powerful friend and defender,
But a daring and dangerous foe.
With the patience of Paul and the passion of Peter.
With the feeling affection of John.
He is feared and revered as an outspoken power
With the courage to battle alon.
When the right is assailed, or the truth is evaded.
He arises, already resolved—
In his humorous heart—for a fight to a finish.
As though he were directly involved.
While devotion to duty, the mark of distinction
By which he is especially known,
Gives him confident power, this power is strengthened
By his courage to battle alone.
He's a friend to the fellow, in humble apparel,
Who, with hammer or shovel or plow.
Thru the long weary hours of anxious endeavor.
Earns his bread by the sweat of his brow;
And, while preaching the gospel of growth and progression.
He is happy to claim, as his own.
An abiding belief in the old-time religion—
With the courage to battle alone.
"White Supremacy" should be our national slogan,
Sung aloud from the heart thru the mouth.
In the East and West and the North, with the spirit
That it's sung from the heart of the South.
"This 'safety-first' doctrine must guide the Republic."
He declares in no soft undertone—
But he thunders his words, driving home his convictions,
With the courage to battle alone.
There has never yet stood on the floor of the senate.
A more resolute friend to mankind
Than this great Alabamian pledged to his duty
To the South, in whose heart he's enshrined.
He is writing his name on her history's pages—
When he's gone, she will carve it in stone.
That her Senator Heflin enjoyed the distinction
Of the courage to battle alone.
Would to God there were more of our public officials,
Unafraid of unpopular truth.
Unafraid to refute the delightful delusions
That imperial our passionate youth,
Unafraid of the menacing threats of destruction
That along pearly pathways are strewn—
Unafraid of the world and the flesh and the devil—
With the courage to battle alone
..... Horace C. Carlisle.

WHO CREATES OUR AGRICULTURAL SURPLUS

One does not need to travel very far in Missouri or Iowa to be impressed with the amount of sod land that is being planted to corn this spring. Old blue grass pastures heretofore considered too rolling or the field too angular to be cultivated profitably, pastures even that escaped the war time stimulus of grain production, are in surprisingly large number of instances being planted to corn.

If as an offset to this turning under of the grass sward one found evidences of seeding down to grass and clover equal areas of land long in cultivation and in need of renovation the movement would be full of significance and promise for it would indicate the turning of the corn belt farmer to a more systematic crop rotation than he has hitherto practised.

But one does not see evidences of even the normal seeding to grass and legumes and apparently old fields as well as new ones are to be planted grain. If we add to this increase of corn planting the enforced expansion of the corn acreage in states like Kansas, Indiana and Ohio because of unusual winter killing of wheat, there seems to be no escape, with a normal season, from an over-production of corn. At any rate farmers are doing their part to create such an over-expansion of corn production. With the curtailment in the number of hogs on farms brought about by the recent upset of the hog-corn price ratio and the lack of life in the beef market, what would we do with the surplus?

Yet nothing is more natural when the farmer stands in such dire need of funds as to emphasize a crop that is bringing a high price, particularly if that crop is as easly produced as corn. And this sensitiveness on the part of the farmer to changes in the market is, of course, to be commended provided the reaction is not extreme.

Pointing to the existence of this situation is easy: remedying it is another matter. With more than 6 million farmers in the United States each operating independently and all guided by the same impulse to expand production when it promises profit these radical swings from high to low prices seemingly are inevitable.

Nevertheless we must keep constantly before us the necessity of preventing wasteful surpluses and of reducing the necessity of costly shifts in emphases of production. These are the greatest need of agriculture.

It is the fear of a surplus that holds down farm practices to a low level. It is this fear that keeps the average farmer producing average results. A hundred things the farmer knows and would use that would increase the output if only he could be reasonably assured he would profit by his pains.

The manufacturer knows to a fraction what a given amount of material and labor will produce; the farmer doesn't. A given acreage and a given amount of seed and labor in one season will produce four times as much as in another.

As a consequence farm production is not accurately adjusted to consumptive needs than is production in other industries and farm prices fluctuate widely while other prices remain steady.

This means that balancing farm production is more difficult than is the balancing of production in other lines. It also means it is more important. The way to do it we do not know but of this much we are certain: Unless we begin to study the problem and to work definitely to that end we shall make no progress.—H. J. Waters, in Star

J. HANCE ALRED IS MASTER FISHERMAN

As we were sitting at our desk Tuesday afternoon meditating as what was best to fill our front page with, and thinking also on the general aspect of things and the close proximity of the first of the month when our grocery bill would be starring us in the face, who should appear through the door but our good fisherman, J. Hance Alred, with a five-pound drum fish.

After expostulating over the catch and commending the genial fellow townsman, he informed us that the fish was ours. Our pencil fell, and with it our spirits rose. No sooner had he left than the fish was on the road home and with some good kindling wood the fish-bake was on and before the sun had kissed the western horizon, the Avres family was enjoying its evening meal, more or less the guest of our good friend.

This is not all the fish Mr. Alred has caught this year. We took a peep at his catch of last Saturday and with it was a 7 1-2 pound drum and several others of near that size.

And while we are talking of fish, Clanton fishermen are turning in some good catches.

WOMEN PREVENT DRY LAW CHANGE

Washington.—It was admitted at a meeting held here under the auspices of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, that the women of the country are responsible for keeping this amendment intact.

"As long as these women vote as they have, it is going to be difficult to modify or repeal the prohibition law," said Col. W. H. Stayton, the head of the association. "You women of social standing should reach them. You should let them know how you feel about the results of prohibition. They would be eager to follow you."

He pointed out that there are 7,500,000 women in the rural districts who consult with their pastors about their vote, and the clergy, he declared, are influenced by the Anti-Saloon League. Men could not move these women to support modification of the prohibition laws, but women might be more successful in influencing them, he said.

The vote of one woman, Colonel Stayton asserted, is more potent than the vote of 10 men, since members of Congress beleive that women are in favor of prohibition. He told the women who were present that in Washington, although they have no vote, they have far more influence with Congress than the women of other cities, and he urged them to tell members of Congress when they come into their homes, how they feel about this question.

No organization was formed at the meeting, but it is expected that it will give impetus to the work of women in committees under the directon of the association.

An effort to use women in this way will not only be limited in scope but will arouse women opposed to any modification of the prohibition laws to greater activity and homogene, opponents of the lquor traffic believe. Previous efforts of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, especially in regard to the election of wet members of Congress, have not been marked with a success that would cause apprehension on the part of the friends of prohibition.

That the association is now turning in the direction of the women of the country in an attempt to weaken this bulwark of prohibition indicates how lacking in strength their situation is, in the opinion of proponents of the maintenance of the Eighteenth Amendment and enforcement of the law.

GOVERNMENT HAD NO STAMPS ON SALE

The new postal rates went into effect recently, but the government had no half-sent or cent-and-a-half stamps on sale at City Hall station. The Lexington-Concord stamp was to be had, but those who needed the new denominations were obliged to go without One business had a supply of the samps for its customers, but this was due to its enterprise, not to government alertness.

A private corporation which made a change in its charges would be careful to provide for its patrons the necessary documents. Even the most arrogant of trusts would seek in this way to conciliate the public. But the post office monopolist, the government has failed to measure up to these standards.

When the present administration act went into effect, on July 1, 1924, the government neglected in many instances to supply the blanks required by its representatives in time to meet the needs of consular officers. The consequence was unnecessary confusion and irritation. Just as it failed to do business in a businesslike way in that case, it has failed in the matter of the new stamps.—New York Sun.

Putting the Hog on a Normal Basis

Many years of study and experiment have ended uncertainty as to what is best for the hog, says a recent report. In pork raising, as in building up any other source of profit on the farm, much can be learned through the experience of others.

The U. S. Government and Agricultural Colleges spend big sums each year at their experimental stations. Both the Government and the Agricultural Colleges issue literature which tells about these experiments in detail. Anyone interested can secure the literature without cost by writing the U. S. Department of Agriculture or such Agricultural Experimental Stations. The great value in Government bulletins lies in the fact that they are based on the results of observation and study by trained, experienced men and at an expense which makes it prohibitive for the farmer to make these experiments himself.

Generally speaking, hogs have a normal period of growth and development. Many raisers ship before the hogs are finished—others hold their hogs and feed them beyond the period that the herd would be most profitable for them. It is natural, with high feed prices, that the raiser is reluctant to hold his hogs any longer than absolutely necessary, even though the hog market is good; but it is a mistake to start raising a market herd and quit before the job is really finished.

Judging from prices of the past few months, a fat hog is the one that is commanding a premium and, exports say, will continue to do so for some time. That is because of the large numbers of unfinished hogs that have been and are still being sent to market. Using the Chicago hog market for a day in mid-December, 1924, a 170 lb. hog brought $14.10, while a 265 lb. hog brought $26.55, or a difference of $12.45.

The average hog raiser knows that it takes about 400 lbs. of corn and 40 lbs. of tankage to bring in that last 100 lbs. of weight, or in dollars and cents, approximately $10.00 for the last 100 lbs. in feed expense, leaving more than $2.25 per pig for the additional trouble.

Shipping weights of hogs are reflected in the feed crop. Last year the corn crop in many sections was small and therefore most of the hogs sent to market ranged around the 175 lb. class. Unless relative market prices on either hogs or feed are extremely abnormal, it pays the raiser to go through with his feeding program up to that stage where he can secure the greatest benefit from his efforts and the best market price for his pork.

THE NEW LIFE

SYNOPSIS. — Introducing "So Big" (Dirk DeJong) in his infancy. And his mother, Selina DeJong, daughter of Simeon Peake, gambler and gentleman of fortune. Her life, to young womanhood in Chicago in 1888, has been unconventional, somewhat seamy, but generally enjoyable. At school her chum is Julie Hempel, daughter of August Hempel, butcher. Simeon is killed in a quarrel that is not his own, and Selina, nineteen years old and practically destitute, secures a position as teacher at the High Prairie school, in the outskirts of Chicago, living at the home of a truck farmer, Klaas Pool. In Roelf, twelve years old, son of Klaas, Selina perceives a kindred spirit, a lover of beauty, like herself.

Chapter III

Every morning throughout November it was the same. At six o'clock: "Miss Peake! Oh, Miss Peake!"

"I'm up!" Selina would call in what she meant to be a gay voice, through chattering teeth.

"You better come down and dress where is warm here by the stove."

Peering down the perforations in the floor-hole through which the parlor chimney swelled so proudly into the drum, Selina could vaguely descry Mrs. Pool stationed just below, her gaze upturned.

That first morning, on hearing this invitation, Selina had been rocked between horror and mirth. "I'm not cold, really. I'm almost dressed. I'll be down directly."

Maartje Pool must have sensed some of the shock in the girl's voice; or, perhaps, even some of the laughter. "Pool and Jakob are long out already cutting. Here back of the stove you can dress warm."

Shivering and tempted though she was, Selina had set her will against it. "I won't go down," she said to herself, shaking with the cold. "I won't come down to dressing behind the kitchen stove like a—like a peasant in one of those dreadful Russian novels. . . . That sounds stuck up and horrid. . . . The Pools are good and kind and decent. . . . But I won't come down to huddling behind the stove with a bundle of underwear in my arms. Oh, dear, this corset's like a casing of ice.

"But I won't dress behind the kitchen stove!" declared Selina, glaring meanwhile at that hollow pretense, the drum. She even stuck her tongue out at it (only nineteen, remember!).

When she thought back, years later, on that period of her High Prairie experience, stoves seemed to figure with absurd prominence in her memory. That might well be. A stove changed the whole course of her life.

From the first, the schoolhouse stove was her bete noir. Out of the welter of that first year it stood, huge and menacing, a black tyrant. The High Prairie schoolhouse in which Selina taught was a little more than a mile up the road beyond the Pool farm. She came to know that road in all its moods—ice-locked, drifted with snow, wallowing in mud. School began at half-past eight. After her first week Selina had the mathematics of her early morning reduced to the least common denominator. Up at six. A plunge into the frigid garments; breakfast of bread, cheese, sometimes bacon, always rye coffee without cream or sugar. On with the cloak, muffler, hood, mittens, galoshes. The lunch box in bad weather. Up the road to the schoolhouse, battling the prairie wind that whipped the tears into the eyes, plowing the drifts, slipping on the hard ruts and icy ridges in dry weather. Excellent at nineteen. As she flew down the road in sun or rain, in wind or snow, her mind's eye was fixed on the stove. The schoolhouse reached, her numbed fingers wrestled with the rusty lock. The door opened, there smote her the schoolroom smell—a mingling of dead ashes, kerosene, unwashed bodies, dust, mice, chalk, stove-wood, lunch crumbs, mold, slate that has been washed with saliva. Into this Selina rushed, untying her muffler as she entered. In the little vestibule there was a box piled with chunks of stove-wood and another heaped with dried corn-cobs. Alongside this a can of kerosene. The cobs served as kindling. A dozen or more of these you soaked with kerosene and stuffed into the maw of the rusty iron pot-bellied stove. A match. Up flared the corn-cobs. Now was the moment for a small stick of wood; another to keep it company. Shut the door. Draughts. Dampers. Smoke. Suspense. A blaze, then a crackle. The wood has caught. In with a chunk now. A wait. Another chunk. Slam the door. The schoolhouse fire is started for the day. As the room thawed gradually Selina removed layers of outer garments. By the time the children arrived the room was livable.

Selina had seen herself, dignified, yet gentle, instructing a roomful of Dutch cherubs in the simpler elements of learning. But it is difficult to be dignified and gracious when you are suffering from chilblains. Selina felt victim to this sordid discomfort, as did every child in the room. She sat at the battered pine desk or moved about, a little ice-wool shawl around her shoulders when the wind was wrong and the stove balky. Her white little face seemed whiter in contrast with the black folds of this somber garment. Her slim hands were rough and chapped. The oldest child in the room was thirteen, the youngest four and a half.

Early in the winter Selina had had the unfortunate idea of opening the ice-locked windows at intervals and giving the children five minutes of exercise while the fresh cold air cleared brains and room at once. Arms waved wildly, heads wobbled, short legs worked vigorously. At the end of the week twenty High Prairie parents sent protests by note or word of mouth. Jan and Cornelius, Katrina and Aggie went to school to learn reading and writing and numbers, not to stand with open windows in the winter.

On the Pool farm the winter work had set in. Klaas drove into Chicago with winter vegetables only once a week now. He and Jakob and Roelf were storing potatoes and cabbages underground; repairing fences; preparing frames for the early spring planting; sorting seedlings. It had been Roelf who had taught Selina to build the schoolhouse fire. He had gone with her on that first morning, had started the fire, filled the water pail, initiated her in the rites of corn-cobs, kerosene, and dampers. A shy, dark, silent boy. She set out deliberately to woo him to friendship.

"Roelf, I have a book called 'Ivanhoe.' Would you like to read it?"

"Well, I don't get much time."

"You wouldn't have to hurry. Right there in the house. And there's another called 'The Three Musketeers.'"

He was trying not to appear pleased; to appear stolid and Dutch, like the people from whom he had sprung. Some Dutch sailor ancestor, Selina thought, or fishermen, must have touched at an Italian port or Spanish and brought back a wife whose eyes and skin and feeling for beauty had skipped layer on layer of placid Netherlands to crop out now in this wistful sensitive boy.

Selina had spoken to Pool about a shelf for her books and her photographs. He had put up a rough bit of board, very crude and ugly, but it had served. She had come home one snowy afternoon to find this shelf gone and in its place a smooth and polished one, with brackets intricately carved. Roelf had cut, planed, polished, and carved it in many hours of work in the cold little shed off the kitchen. He had there a workshop of sorts, fitted with such tools and implements as he could devise. He did man's work on the farm, yet often at night Selina could faintly hear the rasp of his handsaw after she had gone to bed. This sort of thing was looked upon by Klaas Pool as foolishness. Roelf's real work in the shed was the making and mending of coldframes and hotbeds for the early spring plants. Whenever possible Roelf neglected this dull work for some fancy of his own. To this Klaas Pool objected as being "dumb."

She Would Read Aloud to Him While He Carved.

"Roelf, stop that foolishness, get your ma once some wood. Carving on that box again instead of finishing them coldframes. Some day, by golly, I show you. I break every stick . . . dumb as a Groningen . . ."

Roelf did not sulk. He seemed not to mind, particularly, but he came back to the carved box as soon as chance presented itself. He was reading her books with such hunger as to cause her to wonder if her stock would last him the winter. Sometimes, after supper, when he was hammering and sawing away in the little shed Selina would snatch Maartje's old shawl off the hook, and swathed in this against draughty chinks, she would read aloud to him while he carved, or talk to him above the noise of his tools. Selina was a gay and volatile person. She loved to make this boy laugh. His dark face would flash into almost dazzling animation. Sometimes Maartje, hearing their young laughter, would come to the shed door and stand there a moment, hugging her arms in her rolled apron and smiling at them, uncomprehending but companionable.

"You make fun, h'm?"

"Come in, Mrs. Pool. Sit down on my box and make fun, too. Here, you may have half the shawl."

"Og Heden! I got no time to sit down." She was off.

Roelf slid his plane slowly, more slowly, over the surface of satin-smooth oak board. He stopped, twined a curl of shaving about his finger. "When I am a man, and earning, I am going to buy my mother a silk dress like I saw in a store in Chicago and she should put it on every day, not only for Sunday; and sit in a chair and make little fine stitches like Widow Paarlenberg."

"What else are you going to do when you grow up?" She waited, certain that he would say something delightful.

"Drive the team to town alone to market."

"Oh, Roelf!"

"Sure. Already I have gone five times—twice with Jakob and three times with Pop. Pretty soon, when I am seventeen or eighteen, I can go alone. At five in the afternoon you start and at nine you are in the Haymarket. There all night you sleep on the wagon. There are gas lights. The men play dice and cards. At four in the morning you are ready when they come, the commission men and the peddlers and the grocery men. Oh, it's fine, I tell you!"

Roelf!" She was bitterly disappointed.

"Here. Look." He rummaged around in a dusty box in a corner and, sudddenly shy again, laid before her a torn sheet of coarse brown paper on which he had sketched crudely, effectively, a melee of great-haunched horses; wagons piled high with garden truck; men in overalls and corduroys; flaring gas torches. He had drawn it with a stub of pencil exactly as it looked to him. The result was as startling as that achieved by the present-day disciple of the impressionistic school.

Selina was enchanted.

Once, early in December, Selina went into town. The trip was born of sudden revolt against her surroundings and a great wave of nostalgia for the dirt and clamor and crowds of Chicago. Early Saturday morning Klaas drove her to the railway station five miles distant. She was to stay until Sunday. A letter had been written Julie Hempel ten days before, but there had been no answer. Once in town she went straight to the Hempel house. Mrs. Hempel, thin-lipped, met her in the hall and said that Julie was out of town. She was visiting her friend Miss Arnold, in Kansas City. Selina was not asked to stay to dinner. She was not asked to sit down. When she left the house her great fine eyes seemed larger and more deep-set than ever, and her jaw-line was set hard against the invasion of tears. Suddenly she hated this Chicago that wanted none of her; then brushed past her, bumping her elbow and offering no apology; that clanged, and shrieked, and whistled, and roared in her ears now grown accustomed to the prairie silence.

She spent the time between one and three buying portable presents for the entire Pool household—including bananas for Gertrje and Jozina, for whom that farinaceous fruit had the fascination always held for the farm child. She caught a train at four thirty-five and actually trudged the five miles from the station to the farm, arriving half frozen, weary, with aching arms and nipped toes, to a great welcome of the squeals, grunts, barks, and gutturals that formed the expression of the Pool household. She was astonished to find how happy she was to return to the kitchen stove, to the smell of frying pork, to her own room with the walnut bed and the book shelf. Even the grim drum had taken on the dear and comforting aspect of the accustomed.

Chapter IV

High Prairie swains failed to find Selina alluring. She was too small, too pale and fragile for their robust taste. Naturally, her coming had been an event in this isolated community. With no visible means of communication news of her leaped from farm to farm as flame leaps the gaps in a forest fire. She would have been aghast to learn that High Prairie, inexplicably enough, knew all about her from the color of the ribbon that threaded her neat little white corset covers to the number of books on her shelf. She thought cabbage fields beautiful; she read books to that dumb-acting Roelf Pool; she was making over a dress for Maartje after the pattern of the stylish brown lady's-cloth she wore (foolishly) to school.

On her fifth Sunday in the district she accompanied the Pools to the morning service at the Dutch Reformed church. Maartje seldom had the time for such frivolity. But on this morning Klaas hitched up the big farm wagon with the double seat and took the family complete—Maartje, Selina, Roelf, and the pig-tails. Roelf had rebelled against going, had been cuffed for it, and had sat very still all through the service, gazing at the red and yellow glass church window.

Selina's appearance had made quite a stir, of which she was entirely unaware. As the congregation entered by twos and threes she thought they resembled startlingly a woodcut in an old illustrated book she once had seen. The men's Sunday trousers and coats had a square stiff angularity, as though chopped out of a block. The women, in shawls and bonnets of rusty black, were incredibly cut in the same pattern. The unmarried girls, though, were plump, red-cheeked, and not uncomely, with high round cheek-bones on which sat a spot of brick-red which imparted no glow to the face. Their foreheads were prominent and meaningless.

In the midst of this drab assemblage there entered late and rustlingly a tall, slow-moving woman in a city-bought cloak and a bonnet quite unlike the vintage millinery of High Prairie. An ample woman, with a fine fair skin and a ripe red mouth; a high firm bosom and great thighs that moved rhythmically, slowly. She had thick, insolent eyelids. Her hands, as she turned the leaves of her hymn book, were smooth and white. As she entered there was a little rustle throughout the congregation; a craning of necks.

"Who's that?" whispered Selina to Maartje.

"Widow Paarlenberg. She is rich like anything."

"Yes?" Selina was fascinated.

"Look once how she makes eyes at him."

"At him? Who? Who?"

"Pervus DeJong. By Gerrit Pon he is sitting with the blue shirt and sad looking so."

Selina craned, peered. "The—oh—he's very good looking, isn't he?"

"Sure. Widow Paarlenberg is stuck on him. See how she—Sh-sh-sh!—Reverend Dekker looks at us. I tell you after."

Selina decided she'd come to church oftener. The service went on, dull, heavy. It was in English and Dutch. She heard scarcely a word of it. The Widow Paarlenberg and this Pervus DeJong occupied her thoughts. She decided, without malice, that the widow resembled one of the sleekest of the pink porkers rooting in Klaas Pool's barnyard, waiting to be cut into Christmas meat.

The service ended, there was much talk of the weather, seedlings, stock, the approaching holiday season. Maartje, her Sunday dinner heavy on her mind, was elbowing her way up the aisle. Here and there she introduced Selina briefly to a woman friend. "Mrs. Vander Slide, meet school teacher."

"Aggie's mother?" Selina would begin, primly, only to be swept along by Maartje on her way to the door. "Mrs. Von Mijnen, meet school teacher. Is Mrs. Von Mijnen." They regarded her with a grim gaze. Selina would smile and nod rather nervously, feeling young, frivolous, and somehow guilty.

When, with Maartje, she reached the church porch Pervus DeJong was unhitching the dejected horse that was harnessed to his battered and lop-sided cart. The animal stood with four feet bunched together in a drooping and pathetic attitude and seemed inevitably meant for mating with this decrepit vehicle. DeJong untied the reins quickly, and was about to step into the sagging conveyance when the Widow Paarlenberg sailed down the church steps with admirable speed for one so amply proportioned. She made straight for him, skirts billowing, flounces flying, plumes waving. Maartje clutched Selina's arm. "Look how she makes! She asks him to eat Sunday dinner I bet you! See once how he makes with his head no."

Selina—and the whole congregation unashamedly watching—could indeed see how he made with his head no. His whole body seemed set in negation—the fine head, the broad patient shoulders, the muscular powerful legs in their ill-fitting Sunday blacks. He shook his head, gathered up the reins, and drove away, leaving the Widow Paarlenberg to carry off with such bravado as she could muster this public flouting in full sight of the Dutch Reformed congregation at High Prairie. It must be said that she actually achieved this feat with a rather magnificent composure. Her round, pink face, as she turned away, was placid; her great cowlike eyes mild. She stepped agilely into her own neat phaeton with its sleek horse and was off down the hard snowless road, her head high.

It looks as if Selina were growing rather fond of High Prairie. Likely enough she will fall in love with some truck farmer.

England's Fish Rain

In August, 1918, a small territory in northern England enjoyed what was possibly the most novel of all showers.

The precipitation in large part consisted of fish. The explanation which has been made, and which is seemingly a logical one, is that a waterspout offshore lifted the fish by its power, carried them a short distance inland, and with the dispersion of the waterspout and its power dropped the fish on the land.—Science and Invention Magazine.

Traveler's Tale

"Traveled?" said a sailor in a train to a passenger who had questioned him. "I should think I 'ave. I've been all round the world; over an' under it, too. There ain't many ports I don't know the inside of."

"Why, you must know a lot about geography."

"Yes, we did put in there once, but only to coal ship. 'Taint much of a place, what I remember of it."

DAILY CARE OF LINOLEUM IS IMPORTANT

Linoleum Is Easy to Keep Clean.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The housekeeper who planned this interesting method of installing a sink in one corner of a large kitchen table, has three tables, as well as the kitchen floor, all covered with linoleum on which spar varnish has been used to make it more resistant to water, heat, soap and grease. Extension workers have long been advocating the use of linoleum, treated in this way, as a permanent finish for kitchen tables, because it is so easy to keep clean.

Special attention should be given to the daily care of linoleum floor coverings, says the United States Department of Agriculture. If not given a special finish linoleum should be swept with a soft brush and dusted with an oiled or dry mop. Occasionally it should be cleaned more thoroughly with a cloth wrung out of suds made with lukewarm water and neutral soap, rinsed with clear water, and wiped dry with another cloth. Only a small space should be wet at a time, and a linoleum-covered floor should never be flooded. Strong soaps and cleaning powders that contain alkali injure linoleum and should never be used on it. Whenever any kind of cleaning powder is used on a particularly dirty spot care should be taken to remove any trace of the water in which the powder was dissolved

Casters on heavy furniture are likely to cut into linoleum and should be replaced by glass or metal shoes having a wide bearing surface and no rough edges. In moving heavy pieces across linoleum the added precaution should be taken to place an old rug or carpet under them.

ECONOMY IN BUYING AND HANDLING FOOD

Housekeeper Must Study Various Ways of Purchasing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Economy in buying and handling food must begin, of course, in the selection of the right foods for the needs of the family, and in the purchase of this supply for the least expenditure. The housekeeper has to look into the various ways of buying available to her and apply to purchasing each kind of food the most satisfactory method for that food. Quantity orders are usually successful for staples and canned goods; club buying is a good way to get reductions on both staples and perishables; while it is sometimes better to pay the higher cost of a fractional measure of some perishable food in order to have just the right amount fresh, than to buy at a lower rate a larger quantity than one can use.

No good food should be wasted after it once enters the kitchen. The high cost of the table is sometimes traceable to the full garbage pail. It is more economical to serve small, though adequate portions, and permit second helpings to the hungry ones, than to heap up the plates, only to have uneaten food thrown away. If the housekeeper prepares the fewest possible foods necessary for each meal, and she can find out just what these foods should be if she sends to the United States Department of Agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin 1313, Good Proportions in the Diet, she will find that the family is more apt to eat up everything she has set before them than if she has a greater variety in order to cater to everybody's likes and dislikes. When the food comes to the table it should look appetizing. It takes very little time and no extra expense to garnish a platter, cover up the hot vegetables to keep them warm, or remove skin, surplus fat and gristle from meat.

All food materials can be made palatable by good seasoning. The taste of a food is no guide to its value in the diet, but a pleasing flavor aids in getting the properly selected day's foods eaten by everybody in the family. Good food materials may be wasted because of poor preparation. Scorched food is a needless waste, and with proper care it is easily prevented.

The only kind of left-overs a good manager has are those planned in advance for a definite purpose, and prepared at one cooking to save fuel. For example, a roast of meat is naturally depended on in part for cold cooked meat for luncheon or some other meal the next day; part of the cooked vegetables may be reserved for a soup or a salad, if carefully kept.

All foods must be kept clean and covered from the moment they enter the home. Perishable foods must also be kept as cool as possible. Waste due to spoilage is so unnecessary that it is almost unpardonable. Some foods must be protected in special ways to insure their good quality and safe keeping; for example, bread should be kept in a ventilated box and crackers in tight cans. For particulars on the care of each kind of food, send to the United States Department of Agriculture for Farmers' Bulletin 1374, Care of Food in the Home.

DRYING BOX IS OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

This drying box in the office of home economics, Department of Agriculture, is an important source of information and instruction to the housewife. This attractive young woman is about to dry some celery and add it to the asparagus on the shelf.

Needful Essentials for Success in Making Soap

If proportions and temperatures are right you will never have a soap failure.

All oils or greases must be free from salt.

Pure coconut oil soaps cannot be made by the "salting out" process.

Hard, vigorous stirring will cause separation of the lye and grease in the cold process. Stir slowly and evenly.

Rancid greases may be purified by boiling with a solution of vinegar (one part) and water (five parts). Allow to cool, then skim off the purified grease. If rancid greases are to be used, one of the boiling processes will give better results.

If, in the boiling of paste soap, the mass should become like mucilage, add a very little salt in small amounts until it returns to its semi-fluid condition.

Lard soaps and soaps made by the boiling process require longer aceing before they become hard and ready for use. Remember, the longer soap ages the better it will be.

Soap is most easily cut into bars by means of a very fine wire.

Sweets in the Diet

Sugar and sugary foods, such as syrup, molasses, honey, preserves, jellies, jams, marmalades, and candy, are valuable for fuel for the body and for flavor, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Brown and maple sugars, molasses, and maple syrup contain some protein and mineral substances because they have some of the other ingredients of the juice or sap left in them beside the sugar and water. Jelly and preserved fruits also contain small amounts of proteins and mineral substances. Sweets in proper amounts are an important part of the diet, provided they are served at such times as not to take away the appetite for other foods.

What Attracted Crowd

There was a large crowd in front of the millinery window of a San Antonio (Texas) department store when it opened for business. The manager of the department rubbed his hands and smiled in pleasure. They had been born in the hat in the night.

1921 CHECK LAW IS UNCONSTITUTIONAL

COURT OF APPEALS HANDS DOWN IMPORTANT RULING IN GOOLSBY CHECK CASE

Montgomery. — The "fraudulent check" law enacted by the Alabama legislature at the special session in 1921 has been declared unconstitutional by the court of appeals in a decision handed down in the case of C. P. Goolsby, appealed from Tuscaloosa Circuit Court.

This decision does not have the effect, however, of eliminating all the law in this state providing penalties for issuance of fraudulent checks. It was pointed out in the decision in the case that an act of a similar general nature was enacted in 1915 and now forms a part of the 1923 code of laws of the state.

An important point of difference between the two acts was that the 1921 act, which was held to be void, provided that issuance of a check without the person issuing it having the money on deposit with the bank constituted prima facie evidence of fraudulent intent, while the 1925 act, which remains, provided that upon the trial of any person charged with violating the act, the defendant shall be a competent witness to testify to his circumstances and intent when he drew the check or draft.

Before passing on the case the court of appeals had submitted to the supreme court a certified question as to the validity of the 1921 act and the answer received from the supreme court formed the basis of the decision of the court of appeals.

Goolsby, who brought the appeal, had been convicted in the Tuscaloosa Circuit Court of violating the 1921 act, and his case was reversed, as a result of the act being held invalid.

One of the features of the 1921 act was the provision that if a check was not paid, and the person issuing it failed to pay it after seven days' notice, he was guilty of a violation of the law. This provision was held to be bad on the ground that it made the guilt or inocence of the accused partly dependent upon the action of a third person.

STATE NEWS

William H. Holcombe, member of the House of Representatives of Mobile County, will be deprived of the right to sit during any special session of the legislature if held prior to the decision of the United States Court on his appeal from a sentence in the Atlanta penitentiary for entering into a conspiracy for the violation of the Volstead act. This results from the decision of the Supreme Court and Court of Appeals in the case of George E. Stone, treasurer of Mobile County, vs. the State on relation of Albert Freeland. In the Stone-Freeland case the courts held that a person convicted of an "infamous" crime is deprived of his office, which can be returned only on reversal of the case.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

DUCK HAWK

The Duck Hawk stood upon a great ledge. Below him, far, far below him, was the flat and even earth. But he could look down without feeling dizzy.

People who climbed great heights might feel dizzy but not the Duck Hawk, nor any member of his family.

He was standing right on the very edge too. He knew he would not fall.

He knew even if he felt like going off that ledge that he could simply spread his great wings and fly.

Then, too, his feet were so splendid and strong. He had great, enormous feet. And he was very proud of it. He didn't try to squeeze his feet or cover them up or hide them. Outspread were his feet, and so proud of them was he that he liked the name often given to the family beside that of Duck Hawk.

Many called him the Great-footed Hawk, and he was pleased with that name.

He felt that it made him seem so powerful. People might wear shoes and so try to make their feet look smaller than they were.

Or maybe they weren't foolish enough to pinch their feet, but perhaps they didn't show them off.

He wouldn't have worn shoes on his great feet. Not he. Nor would any bird or creature of the out-of-doors. He had heard of children who went bare-footed in the summer time, and he thought they were sensible.

He had heard of children, too, who were proud when they did not take small sizes of shoes.

Oh, how proud he was of his feet. He stood now upon a great ledge looking very handsome. He was a huge, enormous big fellow.

On either side of his mouth or throat was a black patch which he called his mustache. It did look as though he wore a mustache.

His waistcoat was of white with shadings of buff and speckled with smart, stylish black touches. His coat was of slate blue.

Right on the Very Edge.

It was a gorgeous coat, and his cap matched his coat, but was of a slightly darker shade.

It was not so very long since he had been a young fellow with a suitable suit of brown and tan and black. It was not well for a young fellow to dress too magnificently. That was for an older bird.

And before that he had been an egg of buff color, decorated with brown. He had been told about that. He had not remembered anything before the time he had hatched out of his shell—and he had remembered that hardly at all.

He had always liked ledges, though. It came to him naturally as even before he had been hatched forth he had been put upon a ledge without any nest to speak of at all.

His family was not one for soft, easy nests. His family liked a rugged, hard, wild, free life without cares and without responsibilities.

He had always been fearless and had always been brave.

He was like all of his family.

And he liked to fly over great stretches of splendid country. "I'm fond of the North and the West," he said. "It's so much more free and big and open, to my way of thinking. And I love the great rocks I find and the great cliffs."

He had been standing still long enough. Now he must go forth and seek his prey.

No one would get the better of him! He would get the better of any one! He would not be afraid of any one. They would be afraid of him!

He would sail forth into the splendid air, and how quickly he would fly.

No one could fly any more quickly than he could fly. Certainly not the ducks he would go after.

Not the most rapid flyer among them could get ahead of him.

He was Duck Hawk, the great, wild, splendid bird.

Any one who knew him would know that this was so.

Developed Into Systemic Catarrh. Recommends PE-RU-NA

Mr. A. R. Wilson, LaFollette, Tenn.

The letter written a short time ago by Mr. A. R. Wilson of LaFollette, Tenn., brings some more direct evidence of the value of Pe-ru-na in the treatment of catarrhal diseases.

It reads as follows:—"While attending Billy Sunday's great revival at Knoxville, Tenn., last February I contracted a cold which weakened my entire system. I have taken only three bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel like a new man. It is a great system builder as well as a great catarrh remedy."

To attempt to even estimate the thousands who, in the last half century, have come to know and appreciate the merits of Pe-ru-na would be worse than useless. The number is astonishing and increasing daily.

Your nearest dealer has Pe-ru-na in both tablet and liquid form. Insist upon having Pe-ru-na, the original treatment for catarrh.

Cut Out Sheek Test

The teacher, prompted by superior authority, had asked permission, by letter, of a girl's parents to have her take the Shick test. The permission was refused by the child's mother in a letter which ran as follows:

"I received your letter asking to have my girl take the Sheek test. I will not have my girl take no Sheek test. I have seen that Sheek at the theatre, and I will have nothing to do with no test of his."—Smart Set.

BUY STONE MOUNTAIN MEMORIAL HALF DOLLARS

Atlanta, Ga., May 23.—A joint appeal signed by D. S. Etheridge of Chattanooga, Tenn., Commander-in-Chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, and fourten past Commander-in Chiefs, was today issued to all Southerners, and to Sons of Veterans in particular, too buy Confederate Memorial Half-Dollars issued by Congress to commemorate the valor of the Southern soldiers.

"As sons of Confederate soldiers," the statement of these leaders declared "we would be false to our heritage if we failed to show our appreciation of the Confederate Memorial Half-Dallar coinage, authorized by special act of Congress, in memory of the valor of the Southern soldiers and in aid of the great monument being carved in their name on Stone Mountain."

Joining with Mr. Etheridge, present Commander-in-Chief, in the appeal are the following former leaders of the Sons of Veterans: W. McDonald Lee, Richmond, Va.; W. McL. Payssaux, New Orleans, La.; Walter T. Colquitt, Atlanta, Ga.; J. P. Norfleet, Memphis, Tenn.; W. W. Old, Jr., Norfork, Va.; Edgar Scurry, Wichita Falls, Texas; Nathan Bedford Forrest, Atlanta, Ga.; Carl Hinton, Denver, Colo.; Seymour Stewart, St. Louis, Mo.; Robert A. Smith, Atlanta, Ga; J. W. Apperson, Biloxi, Miss.; Thomas P. Stone, Waco, Texas; Ernest S. Baldwin, Roanoke, Va.; and Judge R. B. Houghton, St. Louis, Mo.

The statement continues:

"We consider it our duty not only to buy these coins for ourselves and families but also to render the fullest cooperation within our power in the campaign of the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental Association to sell the entire issue at a premium as a means of raising funds for the carving.

"Here in sixty years since the close of the War Between the States, with its frightful carnage and bitterness, we behold the spectacle of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson riding on horse back on a coin of the United States.

"What more can be said or done to prove to the world and prove to ourselves that we stand together as one united people?

"There is no other instance in history where the victors have held out their hands to the vanquished in such a magnificent gesture of friendship and reconciliation.

"It means that our fathers have been vindicated. It means that their bravery and devotion to a cause have become an accepted part of our common heritage of glory.

"Is there in the South a Southerner whose heart does not thrill with pride over the significance of this great thing which has come to pass in our country.

"In the name of our fathers who fought and our mothers who suffered we call upon the sons and daughters of the Confederacy, organized and unorganized, to show themselves worthy.

"Every Southern home should have one of these coins for every member of the family.

Chilton High Wins in Last Ball Games of Season

Chilton high maintained the record made this season, by winding it up with a double win over Shelby high Thursday and Friday of last week.

After winning 12 to 11 in a spectacular game Thursday after 13 innings of hard playing on the local diamond, the two teams met Friday in Columbiana.

After leading for five innings 6 to 4 the Clanton team saw fit to quit because of rotten umpiring it was said to be getting and refused to play further. The game was forfieted by the umpire to Shelby high.

Shelby had not been beaten this year and this made the victory of Thursday stand out as demonstrating the quality of the team representing Chilton high this year.

Thursday's game was a thriller from start to finish. Shelby high had not lost a game this season, and from their appearance in the second inning when they made eight runs it was doubtful if they even would lose another.

Faulkner, Shelby's crack shortstop, opened the game with a two bagger and scored on a couple of outs. Chilton high scored three counters to complete the inning.

The fireworks started in the second. Vann was as wild as a March Hare, and hit G. Ishell in the head. Brown hit a two bagger to right. Finley singled to left, Looney singlel to right. Faulkner walked, Bird singled, five runs having gone over. With one out, a walk and two more hits by G. Ishell and Finley, three more runs were added, Ishell and Finley getting two hits each in the second.

Columbiana scored another in the fifth and one in the sixth.

After their spurt in the first, the local boys went scorless until the fifth, and the fans had about decided to give it up as a bad day. But the fifth brought on new hope. C. Jones hit a beauty to left; Connaatser sacrificed and Thompson lifted a 3-bagger to left, scoring Jones; Hayes singled to score Thompson. Ruffin got a hit, so did J. Jones, bringing Hayes in. An out and Mullins' run brought in the fourth run. Four more were added in the ninth to tie the game up.

Hayes had been called from short, J. Jones going to short and Vann to second. With a slow twister and a change of pace, Jack Hayes made the visitors take the proverbal swing and look wistful.

To get over with it, here's how it wound up. Hayes singled to left to start on 13th, shut his eyes and pulled up at second. Ruffin put the game on ice with a hearty to left, and Hayes came across with the winner. The box score tells the rest:

So Big

By EDNA FERBER

Upon her first view of a field of cabbages, Selma DeJong exclaimed, "How beautiful!"

The remark was long a standing joke, one of the few jokes of the solid Dutch vegetable gardeners among whom she had come to live.

But it was an insight to the character and perception of this unusual woman, the chief figure in Edna Ferber's remarkable book.

The greatest story from the pen of Edna Ferber, a writer who has been voted unanimously, "the female O. Henry."

Chevrolet Still Making Records

"Dad" Cutler, who completed on May 30, eight years of "silence testing" at the Chevrolet gear and axle plant in Detroit, has approved during that time more than 1,000,000 axle gear assemblies.

His ear has been specially trained to detect noises in the driving gears of the Chevrolet axle.

"Dad", formally known as Joseph N. Cutler, is 60 years old but he has young ideas.

"Retire? Not me! I'm just starting on my second million. Besides I'm getting married in June."

Cutler has been a widower for 18 years. He is a veteran of the western oil fields and was in the Klondyke bold rush.

In his "silence test" the gears on the rear end of the drive shaft are clamped into a machine which has two rear wheels, axle and brakes similar to those in the completed car. The forward end of the drive shaft engages an electric motor which "Dad" starts with a foot lever. Then he manipulates the brakes so that the gears revolve both forward and backward under all possible driving conditions. If his ear detects and slight irregularity in the purr of the gears, the assembly is rejected.

At adjoining test blocks are other men on the same work whose experience ranges from two to four years. But "Dad" is the dean of the crew.

"It requires one year of training before a man's ear is tuned to a point where he can judge the sound of a gear assembly," he said. I don't hear any other sounds around me. I have learned to ignore them. All I hear is the gear murmur.

"The method is like that of a robin listening for earthworms crawling under the sod. The robin pays no attention to surrounding noise. His interest is centered upon the slight sound of worms crawling under the grass roots. The robin makes his living by hearing those sounds. I make my living by hearing the gear sounds."

The parts comprising the axle gears are subjected to numerous precision tests before being assembled. An electrical device on the test stand determines the load under which the axle is tested and gives the equal of road conditions. The "silence test' is made just before the gear assembly goes into the car.

Losey, Nationally know lecturer and reader of New York City, Mr Walter Spry, widely known concert artist of Chicago. These will be assisted by the faculty of Alabama college, leading women of the Alabama Federation of Clubs and other well known worke throughout the state.

Vitamins Grown in Our Gardens

Advantages of Vegetables for Family Needs and Likes Are Many.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Closely associated in our minds with the vitamins they supply are the vegetables that can be grown in almost any home garden—spinach, cabbage, lettuce, carrots, string beans, peas, rutabagas, tomatoes, all the leafy vegetables known as "greens," and many others. We also obtain necessary minerals from these vegetables—iron, calcium, phosphorus—and depend on them for bulk, or "roughage." But our first thought is apt to be—vegetables for vitamins!

Advantages of Vitamins.

The advantages of growing vitamins in our gardens are many and obvious. To begin with, there is the matter of freshness. No matter how near the market may be to the home, it is usually a long way from the farmer who produced the vegetables. Garden products that have been carried over a dusty road, and perhaps exposed for hours before they were sold, cannot be compared in desirability of flavor or condition with those just off the vine or out of the earth. The vitamin content of vegetables is also dependent to some extent upon freshness.

Again, when the vegetables are actually at hand in the garden, waiting to be gathered, the chances are that they will be used oftener, and in larger quantities, than when some one has to go to a store to get them. The price often influences the quantity bought when the housekeeper goes to market, but when she steps into her garden she is apt to bring in as much as she believes her family will consume.

The convenience of having a garden frequently leads to a beneficial change in the proportions of the family diet. Vegetables are served more abundantly because they are available, and they satisfy the craving for bulk, lessening the desire for other foods which may lack the necessary vitamins. Almost automatically the garden tends to increase the use of vegetables.

The garden must, of course, be carefully planned so that it will yield an adequate supply of the kinds of vegetables the family likes and needs, both for table use and for canning or storing. If some sort of record is kept from one year to the next to show the quantity of each vegetable grown and the use made of it, a garden budget can be eventually worked out.

Fruits Are Important.

Fresh fruits are also important sources of vitamins, and should be considered in connection with the garden plan. Many orchard fruits and berries grow well in all sections of the country, and others are best suited to certain localities. While the citrus fruits—oranges, lemons, grapefruit—are among the best sources of vitamins, Tomatoes are comparable with citrus fruits as sources of vitamins, and when the latter are lacking, tomato juice, either fresh or canned, may be used instead. It goes without saying, therefore, that it is a good thing to include tomatoes in every garden plan.

The crop season usually demands more time than is available. Farm labor can be utilized best when definite plans are made for its use. A definite plan should be in mind for the work to be done on rainy days or during wet weather.

Choice of Tractor Depends on Needs

Several Suggestions Made to Use as a Guide.

Before buying a tractor most farmers want to know what kind will meet the need of their farms. Because of frequent requests from farmers for help in this matter the engineering staff at the New Jersey State College of Agriculture, New Brunswick, has drawn up a group of suggestions which may be used as a guide to prospective buyers

1. Choose from the ranks of those which have been tried by years of use, from the manufacturer who has a local representative with a stock of repair parts near at hand.

2. A reasonable amount of service should go with a machine of this type. See if your agent is in the habit of following up his sales to see that he has satisfied customers.

3. A belt pulley controlled by a friction clutch is usually desired. Study the size and location of this pulley.

4. A mechanical governor is very desirable for belt work.

5. At the present price of gasoline it is economical to have a tractor that will operate successfully on kerosene at any load.

6. An air cleaner is essential to long life of the engine if used in dusty fields.

7. A magneto with an impulse starter provides as nearly as possible sure ignition and ease and safety in cranking.

8. It is very important to see that the tractor hitch and implement hitch are suited to each other in height and lateral adjustment.

9. Most working parts should be inclosed, and run in oil.

10. A tractor pulling a two-bottom plow would suit most New Jersey farms on which a tractor can be profitably used. Some might need a three-bottom outfit. Only a few would require a larger one.

"Flushing" Recommended for the Breeding Ewes

Preparation for breeding is the beginning of the direct work for the harvest of lambs hoped for the next spring. The period of gestation in sheep is 147 to 150 days. The mating, therefore, should begin practically five months before the first lambs are wanted. The ewes should be gaining in condition at the time of mating. Such a condition will cause more of the ewes to come in heat quickly and to settle at the first mating, as well as a larger number of twin lambs. Changing the ewes to especially good pasture or giving a little extra feed beginning ten days before the breeding season, will serve to bring about this desired condition. This extra feeding whether from extra pasture or additional feed given, is called "flushing." It has been recommended and followed by successful shepherds for generations and carefully controlled experiments have proved that good results do follow the practice. Trim off the excess wool around dock of all ewes. Neglecting to do this is often the cause of many ewes failing to get with lamb.

Rape on Sour Soils

When land is too sour to grow clover or alfalfa, one of the best forage crops for hogs that can be grown is rape. While rape will grow on poor sour soils, it will not grow as much forage as it will on good sweet rich land; but it will most likely pay to grow some of it for hogs. It would probably make more growth if you would plow the land first, and then work it down well with a disk before sowing the rape.

Clover Improves Soil

Sweet clover is a very good crop to improve the land. That is, where sweet clover grows well. It will not do well on acid or sour soil unless the soil is limed. Better crops of grain or corn can be expected after a good crop of sweet clover. It is not difficult to get rid of sweet clover. Buckwheat is a good crop to plow under to improve the soil, but not nearly so good as sweet clover because it is not a legume.

Pears Gaining in Favor

Pears are now a year-around fruit in the market and growing slowly in favor as a fresh fruit while their popularity as a canned fruit for use in various desserts is increasing steadily. The pear has an interesting history as it invaded the United States from the northeast and southwest corners of the country in the days of the early settlers.

Get Chicks on Ground

Get the chicks out on the ground as soon as you can. Even while the weather is cool, let them have access to the grass and ground, but provide a runway so they can hurry back to the brooder stove when they get cold. Chicks will come to the heat when necessary if the runway is opened for them.

Collecting Broomsticks

This is a good time to start collecting broomsticks from all your neighbors. They are ideal stakes for heavy-growing plants. Grab anything that looks like a neat stake and store it for stakes never come amiss in the growing season and usually there is a dearth of them when they are most needed. Stout stakes for tomatoes will be needed.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words need are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Crossing the Ocean in Colonial Times

A journal written by a tourist who crossed the Atlantic to New York before the year 1700 has recently been discovered. It gives a vivid picture of early shipboard accommodation. The passenger was traveling for pleasure, not emigrating. He was accustomed to the best treatment the traveler of that period could procure.

His journal records that the diminutive sailing vessel set out on its long voyage from Holland bound for New Amsterdam. He begins early in the voyage to complain of the cabin. ere was no palatial lounge and ng room in those days. Hard-Working Burglar Forced to Draw Line

Bert met his old friend Bill the Burglar and the two got chatting about things in general.

"I hear you've left your wife," remarked Bert presently. "Why did you do that?"

"Because she was always wantin' me to do somethin'," snarled the burglar moodily.

"What do you mean?" asked his friend.

"No matter how busy or tired I was, she was always naggin' me to do somethin' for her. At last, one night, it was too much."

"How was that?" said the other.

"Well, I came in about three o'clock in the morning," explained Bill, "all worn out from doing too much work. I had opened two strong boxes and finished up by forcing a couple o' safes, to say nothing of a vault I cracked earlier in the evening. An' then, when I got in, what do you suppose that woman wanted me to do?"

"What?"

"As I stand here, it's true!" growled Bill the Burglar. "She wanted me to open a box of sardines for her."—London Answers.

HINTS AND DISCOVERIES

If members of the family are fond of it, serve half a grapefruit for dessert with an after dinner mint in the center of each.

When serving toast and egg to a child or to an invalid, place the egg well poached on the soft toast that has been buttered and cut into cubes, keeping the shape of the slice undisturbed. It is so easy to handle with spoon or fork.

Drop the egg into a muffin ring in the water when poaching; it will be shapely when removed and may be placed on a round of buttered toast.

Season mashed potatoes, for a change, with onion juice—one teaspoonful—and one-fourth teaspoonful of nutmeg to each quart of seasoned potato.

When making cookies or doughnuts using sour cream or milk, mix them up the night before and set them on ice. They will roll out with less flour, and will keep moist much longer.

After cooking carrots until tender, put them through a ricer, season and beat as one does mashed potatoes. Those who do not like carrots will enjoy these. For variety add a dash of nutmeg and a little lemon juice.

A small line on the porch for hanging small things will be a great stepsaver; use the doll clothespins instead of the usual ones.

When sending handkerchiefs to the laundry, sew a corner of each to a strip of tape; they will all come home together.

Clothes that need to be ironed at once should be sprinkled with hot water.

When re-covering your ironing board use two thicknesses of cotton batting if you lack an old blanket to pad it.

Two or three new clean bushel baskets will be as useful for laundry baskets as the more expensive ones and they are much lighter to carry.

When hanging pictures have them on the level of the eye of the person of average height.

Meals in the Open.

With the auto at the door of nearly every family, meals out of doors are so much enjoyed that the work of packing a basket for the family is little compared to the enjoyment it gives. If tired mothers would do this more often, it would bring rest and refreshment. Let the children help; doing things for a picnic will be play for them and it will teach them responsibility and helpfulness. More children and husbands, too, are spoiled by too much waiting on; take a little for yourself, before a breakdown comes.

If there are dishes to be washed, let the family take them to the brook or lake and wash and dry them. Now, with such a variety of paper dishes, one need carry very few heavy dishes. A small bonfire will dispose of all rubbish and leave everything tidy for the next picnic party. Of course, a true sportsman pours water over a fire even if it seems well burned down; that is the only safe way to leave a fire—entirely extinguished.

For the meal, it may be just as simple as one desires, or as elaborate. Roast potatoes and frankforts are wholesome and hearty and not hard for a novice to prepare. Beefsteak is delicious, broiled over a wire broiler or cooked on a camping stove.

Scrambled eggs need a frying pan, hot sandwiches may be toasted on the sheet iron, hamburg steaks may be fried, and any number of things cooked on it, besides making a place to cook coffee.

Fresh salad prepared at home and carried in sealed jars, is always a welcome addition to any outdoor meal.

Thermos bottles are another great convenience; they will carry either hot or cold drinks.

The real fun of an outdoor meal is having the fire and doing the cooking over it.

Green peas, cooked and seasoned with cream, carried in a sealed jar, will always be eaten to the last pea. Green onions with plain bread and butter, with the peas, will make a good meal.

Sandwiches should never be lacking. As there are countless fillings for sandwiches one may have anything desired. Brown bread, chopped green pepper with onion filling, makes a fine sandwich. Fresh cucumbers sliced and dipped into French dressing makes another tasty filling. Sweet sandwiches are good for the little folks and take the place of cake. Use jam, jelly, maple sugar, and cream with a few chopped nuts. One will find any supplies of fruit or vegetables, meats and nuts, combine to make good fillings.

ENSEMBLE SUITS GO STRONG; MANNISH COATS FOR JUNIORS

THE ensemble suit, from the time of its introduction, has been a success with discerning women of fashion. As a result of increased variety in design, it shows signs of becoming an established rival of the plain, mannish tailored suit, and is making a wider appeal than ever this spring. The ensemble is especially well adapted to styles in formal suits, but it has been developed lately along those very practical lines that lead to unanimous approval.

In these late versions of the ensemble, practical suitings are used for the coats which are cut on simple lines and long enough to either cover the frocks worn underneath or to allow a few inches to show. Interesting details of tailoring are introduced in these straight-hanging, practical coats, as in the large patch pockets on the coat at the right of the picture given here. These are covered with tucks, which probably contribute to the tailored finish of the frock also. Frocks to be worn with these very useful coats are made of printed silk, of plain crepe, of the material in the coat, or they reveal silk or crepe in combination with the cloth used in the coat. The frock shown in the figure at the left of the picture is severely tailored, with fashionable slit pockets at each side and bone buttons by way of finish on the skirt. These buttons emphasize the introduction of fullness in the skirt and this additional fullness and slit pockets are two late style points in the tailored mode. But the most popular frock for ensemble suits is made of printed silk and it has comfort and cheerful color to recommend it for summer wear.

The coat shown in the picture introduces a little color in the simple embroidered pattern that finishes the flaring sleeves and collar and both coats are of the sort that are useful for all-round wear.

Of interest alike to youth and its elders are the handsome gayly plaided soft wool coats, which feature so definitely for sports and travel this season. Grownups are pleased to refer to their new double-breasted woolen coats, so smartly tailored, as prince of Wales models. Little folks are wearing topcoats similar in design, for an outstanding feature of children's apparel today is that it is almost amusingly a reproduction of the styles worn by mother and big sister.

The same mannish topcoats which stand for latest style to grown folks are being repeated for juniors. All the characteristic details are stressed, especially the notched collar, the double breast, with either slash or patch pockets. Yes! even the tiny boutonniere on the lapel is worn by little girls. They tiny felt hat imparts a finishing touch.

Not only is the style and cut of topcoats for children similar to that of older folks, but the materials are the same. The scope of the fabrics extends from smooth finished fabrics to softest woolens. Listed in the former are covert rep, suede-finished cloth, kasha and fine twills. Camel's-hair cloth, tweed and cheviot weaves register among the more sportslike woolens, pastel tints in these offering distinct appeal.

In some of the newer models there is some attempt to introduce a godet fullness at the front, but this idea is perhaps not as popular as the inverted plait which is often inserted at each side of the lighter-weight cloth coats. Lightweight colorful flannel coats in such shades as copenhagen, china and madonna blue, lanvin green, and that very much talked-of shade, bois de rose, are being exploited for summer wear over dainty tub frocks. Black satin-tailored types are also included in fashionable coats for juniors.

Lesson for May 31

PETER AT LYDDA AND JOPPA

LESSON TEXT—Acts 9:32-43.

GOLDEN TEXT—And they went forth and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following.—Mark 16:20.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Two Wonderful Things That Peter Did.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Story of Two Miracles.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Two Great Miracles.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Place of Miracles in the Spread of the Gospel.

In order to grasp the significance of this lesson, we should recall the condition which prevailed in the church as suggested in verse 31.

1. Freedom From Persecution.

Saul, the ringleader of the persecutors, had only recently been converted, thereby disorganizing their forces and causing the church to enjoy a breathing spell. This period of rest was not used for growing lazy, indifferent, worldly and forgetful of God, but for growth in grace and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

2. Spiritual Growth and Development.

Most blessed will be the results following the times of outward peace if the members of the church will but spend time in building it up. The real meaning of the word, "edified" is built up. This does not mean merely that the members were being instructed and comforted, but that strenuous efforts on the part of individual members, as well as the body as a whole, were being made for the advancement of the divine life. As suggested by another, this metaphor involves:

(1) A Foundation. This is Jesus Christ. No other must be laid (I Cor. 3:12-16).

(2) Continuous progress. This means that a Christian's activities are purposeful, and that the work he undertakes moves forward with the proper progression.

(3) Persistent effort. This means that the present day's work begins the foundation upon which tomorrow's work must be built. Thus day by day his life is being raised higher and higher as each separate round of material is being laid by strenuous efforts.

(4) Completion. Finally the work is done. The building is completed; the top stone is brought forth and placed.

3. Outward Growth.

Building up within the church causes the whole work to be admired and respected by those without, inducing them to come and identify themselves with it.

I. Peter's Tour Among the Saints (v. 32).

This resulted in securing new converts.

II. Two Stupendous Miracles (vv. 32-43).

These were the greatest signs wrought since the days of Christ. The dreadful malady of palsy is vanquished, and a corpse is retenanted by the departed soul. The Lord had promised these signs as they went forth with the gospel message. They were given as encouragements to the disciples to convince them that the gospel did not lose any of its power by being spread, but rather it increased in power.

1. The Healing of Aeneas (v. 32-35).

This man's needy condition appealed to Peter just as men today should appeal to us in their semi-dead state. Like his Master, Peter could not refuse the needed help. In this he does not direct attention to himself, but confidently appeals to the power in the name of Christ. He said, "Jesus Christ healeth thee." The man who had kept his bed for eight long years immediately arose and made his bed. Peter cleverly kept this miracle from being the end by making it the means to the end—that end was the preaching of the gospel.

2. The Raising of Dorcas (vv. 36-43).

This woman was full of good works and almsdeeds which she "did," not what she tniked of doing. She was a practical Christian woman. Her death was a real loss as was evidenced by the mourning of those who had been helped. If all professing Christian women would use their needles as Dorcas did there would be much less of that profitless fancywork done. When this good woman fell sick and died, the disciples sent for Peter. This shows their growth in faith in the Divine power. Peter again imitated the example of Jesus in putting them all forth. At his command her soul came back to live in her body. This again caused the people to believe on the Lord.

In God's Purpose

In no case does origin determine value. From the religious point of view, the dignity and worth of man lie in any case in God's purpose concerning him, and that purpose is not affected by the particular method of his working.—Henry Churchill King.

Old Temple Uncovered

How tremendous a role the earthquake has played in the history of mankind is once more hinted in a discovery of the expeditionary force from the University of Pennsylvania museum at Beisan (once Bethsheen, later Scythopolis) in Palestine. The force has uncovered the ruins of a temple of Bacchus of which the columns were six feet in diameter. Among the columns, which had toppled over, were a portion of an enormous foot, in all probability from a heroic statue of Bacchus and some delicate Roman mosaics, utensils and statuary.

CHILTON COUNTY NEWS

VOLUME 4. CLANTON ALABAMA, THURSDAY, JUNE 4, 1925 NO. 39

Rev. B. Lawrence Elected Superintendent of Education

The school board of Chilton county, at its regular meeting last Friday, elected Rev. Buford Lawrence as county superintendent of education for a four year term. Mr. Lawrence received 3 votes on the first ballot, W. T. Bean received one and Mr. Mims one. I. M. Helms of Parrish, was also an applicant. According to custom the action of the board was made unanimous.

Mr. Howard L. Foshee, who has so faithfully performed the duties of this office so acceptably, was not an applicant for reelection.

Miss Hazel Cox, the efficient assistant to the superintendent, will remain in the same capacity with Mr. Lawrence. Miss Cox is very efficient in her line of work and the new superintendent as well as the people of the county are fortunate on being able to retain her connection with the office.

Mr. Lawrence comes to this office well qualified. He is a graduate of Howard college, a young man full of energy and talent business ability, and will no doubt carry on the work as efficiently as his immediate predecessor.

Small Fire Monday at Forest Lumber Co.

A fire which would have proved very costly had it not been discovered in time, was that late Monday afternoon at the Forest Lumber Company in Clanton.

The fire originated in a shaving house at the boiler room and was making much headway. With the volunteer fire fighters doing effective work with the equipment at hand soon had the blaze under control.

Several hundred dollars worth of damage was done. A kiln of lumber and huge stacks of lumber were close by, but fortunately they were not damaged.

MEMORIAL DAY AT PLEASANT GROVE

Memorial day was very fittingly observed at Pleasant Grove church, May 30, with a very fine program, together with the decoration of the graves.

Rev. F. C. Gibson, pastor of the church, acted as chairman for the day.

Interesting addresses were made and a sermon at eleven o'clock by Rev Joe Gibson of Pittsview.

Judge L. H. Reynolds made a talk on temperance. Prof. J. L. Johnson delivered a memorial address and later in the day gave a talk on the question of evolution.

Rev. T. J. Deason gave a very timely and instructive talk, as did Rev Joe Gibson and A. U. Jones of Billingsley.

Quite a neat sum was realized for the benefit of the community from cold drinks and cream.

Citizens of this thriving community had met recently and had cleaned off and put the cemetery in good condition.

Maplesville Minstrels Draws Good Crowd

The minstrel show presented at the Maplesville school building last Friday night was a success, financially as well as the entertainment afforded.

The play was sponsored by the parent-teacher association of that thriving town in west Chilton. The characters were all Maplesvile talent and proved themselves very interesting entertainers.

So interesting was the play that they were urged to present it again. It will be presented the second time on Friday night, June 13.

Rev. J. D. Deason Knows What Editors Like Best

Rev. J. D. Deason, one of Chilton county's good preachers, remembered us with a feast of roasting ears Monday. It was a rare treat, and coming so early in the season for this kind of produce, made our family feel that it was right up-to-now with this dish which it is very hard to devour without blowing like a goose.

Brother Deason in a note accompanying the package stated that he would not attempt to write the news of the visiting in his community as a lot of people would not want the general public to know just how much they visit and who they visit. He stated, however, that he was not ashamed of the visit he made Saturday, spending the night with Rev. Connell in the Stanton community and attending the fifth Sunday meeting at Stanton. He stated that it was a great meeting.

Brother, we appreciate your kind remembrance, and wish to state that with out beans, buttermilk and blackberry pie, we almost lost a half day trying to wake up after feasting on this diet.

Confidence

CONFIDENCE IS ONE OF THE GREAT FACTORS IN THIS WORLD. SO MUCH DEPENDS UPON CONFIDENCE?

You employ your doctor because you have confidence in him. You have confidence in your lawyer, in your advisors. And in your bank? Yes, indeed, or you wouldn't keep your money there a minute. Without confidence we do not deesrve patronage. Confidence in this Bank is what has made it strong.

Mad Dog Bites Several Dog on Streets of Clanton

People of Clanton are somewhat alarmed at the present time on account of the killing of a mad dog at the home of Mr. G. M. Baker in South Clanton Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker had been away visiting Sunday, and on returning home their small dog attempted to bite one of the children. Mr. Baker kicked it away. He then shot the dog and sent its head to Montgomery. It was pronounced mad.

In conversation with a News reporter Mr. Baker says the dog was on the streets of Clanton last Saturday night and had a fight with a crowd of dogs between Elmore's store and the railroad. Also later it had another fight in front of Chilton Hardware with another crowd of dogs, biting several each time. People of Clanton should be very careful, for their childrens sake, when around dogs at this time and those who had dogs that were bitten Saturday should keep same up for further developments. One human life is worth more than al the dogs everywhere.

CLANTON	1	1	0	1.000

Several double plays were feature of the game. The home run of B Lewis and the consistent hitting of Webb Parrish also added to the games interest.

This is the first game for the newly organized Clanton team and gives the fans the confidence that a good team will represent them this year.

Following is the box score by the official scorer:

Clanton tossed their hat in the ring for the amateur base ball championship for Alabama Wednesday afternoon at West Blocton. Meeting the heavy hitters from Masena, Alley, pitching for Clanton let them down with five hits and struck out eleven. The entire Clanton team played pennant winning ball, the kind that will make them hard to win from during the coming season.

The boys from Masena played a jam up game, Thompson pitching the sort of baseball that usually wins.

Vaughn Quartet Delights Clanton

Vaughn's saxaphone Quartet of Lawrenceburg, Tenn., delighted a large audience at the high school auditorium Tuesday night under the auspices of the young mens' class of the Methodist Sunday school.

The quartet composed of H. E. Barnett, tenor; Theo. R. Shaw, soprano; W. B. Walbert, alto; and A. M. Pace, rendered a program of both saxaphone and vocal music, that was highly entertaining and instructive.

The program is well balanced musically, vocal music predominating. Mr Barnett rendered a splendid tenor solo, as did Mr. Shaw. The musicians brought down the house with their songs, "Couldn't hear nobody pray," and "Swing low sweet chariot."

The Vaughn quartet is a distinct asset of the south. They deliver a clean, wholesome and elevating program of music that is recognized as of the best. They are showing by precept and example the better class of program, and instilling into the hearts of our young folks the better way of entertaining themselves.

This was not the first appearance of this band of musicians, and it will likely be invited to come back in the future. The pro rata proceeds for the Sunday school class will come in handy in the equipping of the Sunday school quarters in the new Methodist church.

Central Alabama Hospital Turns Out First Graduate

The first epoch in the history of the Central Alabama Hospital was written Tuesday evening at the First Methodist church. At that time the first graduate from this worthy institution received her diploma or degree.

Miss Grace Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson of the eastern part of the county holds the honor and distinction of being the first graduate nurse of this institution

In fitting ceremonies the graduating exercises were held Tuesday evening. Dr. V G. Gragg, chairman of the board of the hospital, acted as master of ceremonies. Dr. A. J. Ezell read a passage of scripture and offered the invocation. Dr. C. C. Wilkerson gave a short address in which he gave a resume of the profession of nursing and how it originated in the eighteenth century. He gave figures to substantiate the facts of the wonderful work of ministration to the afflicted and paid a tribute to the honoree of the evening

Vaughn's quartet, who were to give a performance at the high school later in the evening, rendered a selection.

Dr. Gragg read the charge to the graduate who pledged her faithful performance to the ethics of the profession

Miss Robinson has proven a competent student while at the hospital and has won the admiration of those with whom she comes in contact

Central Alabama Hospital can well be proud of the progress it is making. It is serving a territory that heretofore has had no facilities when delicate operations had to be performed or when the life of a loved one hung by a thread. No institution can take the place of a good hospital, and the general public has saved much since the erection of the hospital here about three years ago.

As the people learn of the efficient service rendered and of the kind and courteous treatment accorded by a competent coterie of employes, the patronage will grow until finally it will reach out its ministering arm to all within reach.

The efficient management heretofore is bringing it to the front.

The Fatal Pill Was Pleasing, Not Painful

The Fatal Pill" failed to produce death when given at the high school Friday night by local talent. Instead, it was mirth provoking and highly entertaining.

"Winning a Husband," given at the same evening didn't prove as serious a proposition as some are led to believe.

With these two plays, the high school winds up its school term, and aside from the splendid term of study, the school pupils have given the Clanton public a series of plays and programs that would have been a credit to any school.

JONES-BARNES.

On Monday, at high noon, marriage vows, that culminated a pretty romance were spoken in the parlor of Mr. J. W. P. Murphy's home near Clanton.

Mr. Lester Jones and Miss Mabelle Barnes were the contracting parties and Dr. Ezell officiated.

The marriage came as a surprise to the many friends of the young couple, and only immediate friends were in the ceremony.

Mrs. Jones is a native of McMinnville, Tenn. The past year she gave satisfactory service as an instructor in the Lemison high school, and since her transplantation to Alabama, she has made many warm friends.

Mr. Jones has a business interest in one of Clanton's busiest furniture emporiums.

Immediately following the ceremony and the expressions of good wishes, the couple boarded their roadster and came to Clanton for a few brief moments.

In the meantime a party of well-wishers composed of Misses Margery and Lorene Murphy, Edna Lowery, Billy Smith and J. C. Joones of Thorsby, armed with material expressions of good wishes, boarded a car and hastened to an advantageous position on the roadside, from which point they had planned to shower the happy pair with old shoes, rice, etc.

Impatiently did the would-be-fusiladers await the approach of the newlyweds, when they became informed by passers- by, that the roadster with its happy cargo, bound for McMinnville, via Birmingham, had eluded them by fully thirty minutes.

After a honeymoon of a few days spent with the bride's relatives in Tennessee, Mr. and Mrs. Jones will return to Clanton and establish their home

The following is reproduced from Gondelock's "Fishing Lines" in Sunday's issue of the Birmingham News:

White's, just below Lock 12 Mr. White has a delightfully located camp near a big spring and nothing gives him more pleasure than to entertain his friends. The fishing was good and a number of big ones were caught on the trot line, including a 14-pound blue cat. Mr. Rogers caught an eight-nound catfish on his light tackle while standing on the ledge just below the power house. Last Wednesday the 20th was the big day of the year with the negroes in Florida, as they celebrate the day as memorial of emancipation and the whites have to take the day off to because the negroes all take the day and shut down all business where they are employed, and they outnumber the whites about seven to one throughout this part of Florida.

While the negroes were having a big time our white folks spent the day fishing and picnicing. Quite a number met here and the men went fishing bringing in some 100 or more fine bream, trout and jack which was soon made ready for eating by the girls and ladies. Dinner was spread in the grove at the school house and everyone that desired had their fill of fish.

NOW DOES ALL HER WORK

Has No Backache, No Bad Feelings Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Drove Her Illness Away

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"I was in a badly run-down condition and I would get weak spells and terrible headaches. I felt so badly last year that I could not do any housecleaning. The minute I would lift or stoop it seemed as if I was going to fall to pieces. I told a neighbor how I felt and she said that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was surely the right thing for me. I took four bottles then and in the fall of the year I took three. I had been treated by a doctor but he gave me an iron tonic and that did not help me. It seemed that the tonic did not have in it what the Vegetable Compound did. That gave me the strength and ambition I needed and I have gained in weight. This year before I started to clean house I got four bottles of the Vegetable Compound and am taking it right along. I tell all my ... nds about it and how much good it do ... They can notice it because I have ... ained in weight. I weigh 118 now and do all my work myself again."—Mrs. EMIL O. BRANDENBURG, 651 37th Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

ALL WORN OUT?

Are you lame and stiff; tired, nervous and depressed; miserable with backache? Have you suspected your kidneys? Good health depends upon good elimination. But sluggish kidneys allow impurities to accumulate and upset the whole system. Backache is often followed by dizziness, depressing headaches, dullness, and other annoying kidney irregularities. Why experiment? If your kidneys are sluggish, why not use Doan's Pills. Doan's is a harmless stimulant diuretic used the world over. Ask your neighbor!

An Alabama Case

W. K. Thames, Sr., cattle dealer, Greenville, Ala., says: "Sharp pains often seized me through my back. I suffered terribly from a dull, heavy ache across my kidneys. My kidneys became too free in action and the secretions scalded in passage. Colds settled in my kidneys. Doan's Pills cured me of the trouble."

Dr. Moffett's Baby Book is just what mothers have long needed, according to letters from thousands of mothers who have found it interesting, helpful and sound.

"I am a young mother," writes Mrs. F. M. Effinger, of Milton, Fla., "and I don't know what I would have done without Teethina and the helpful advice in your book. My baby started teething at three months and was awful cross. But I gave Teethina and followed your directions and she was soon well. Now, at six months old, she is a big, healthy baby with several pretty white teeth and more coming through."

Baby's suffering and mother's anxiety are soon relieved if Teethina is given in time. It costs only 30c, yet it is worth its weight in gold, as millions of mothers know.

WHITE DIARRHEA IS CAUSED BY A GERM

White diarrhea in chickens, a very infectious disease which may be transmitted from chick to chick by contact, is caused by a germ which multiplies rapidly in the body of the chick, causing a severe diarrhea that proves fatal in a large majority of the infected flocks. It has been definitely proved that hens which appear healthy may carry in their organs of reproduction the germ which causes this disease and which manifests itself in the young chicks within two or three days after hatching. Healthy chicks in the same incubators or brooders may become infected by contact, or by eating food or drinking from vessels that have become contaminated with the droppings of these sick chicks.

White diarrhea usually develops quickly, causing a heavy loss in chicks that are a few days to a week or more of age. The chicks huddle together, appear sleepy or stupid, and have no appetite. The droppings are white in color and this causes a condition called "pasted up behind." The chicks die within a few hours or days after the disease is noticed.

All sick chicks should be killed and, along with all litter, refuse, and feed that is found in the brooder house, burned. All utensils used in and about the brooder house and the house itself, should be thoroughly cleaned, scalded with boiling water, and disinfected. Only healthy chicks should be put in the disinfected brooder house. It is best if possible to move them to entirely new quarters.

No satisfactory medical treatment for infected chicks has been found. The disease may be prevented by hatching eggs from disease-free flocks.

Certain drugs used in the drinking water aid in preventing the spread of disease in chicks. Bichloride of mercury in the proportion of 20 grams to every gallon of water is recommended. Sour milk or buttermilk should form a good part of the ration. To save a flock when the infection has once started requires constant care and untiring efforts.

Direct Sunshine Is Fine Food for Young Chicks

Feed your chicks sunshine if you want them to grow rapidly and strong. Scientists say that leg-weakness in chicks reared indoors is caused, not by the wrong feed, but by the lack of direct sunshine which enables them to use their food in building a good, strong skeleton. And by direct sunshine they mean sunshine that has not lost most of its effect by being sifted through glass or cloth. Leg-weakness is at the seat of many chick troubles, preventing sufficient exercise and making it difficult for the chicks to secure their feed.

It is therefore important that the chicks be allowed outdoors on the sunny days as early as possible. A little while each day is better than not at all. A small yard can be provided so as to simplify getting them back into the house when desired. If, because of cold weather, the chicks cannot be outdoors, the windows should be opened at the bottom so as to allow the entrance of the sun's rays without interference.

Green stuff such as clover sods that have been grown in the sunshine, yolks of egg laid by hens that have been on range, and crude cod liver oil, fed at about 1 to 2 per cent of the ration, will help to make up for the lack of sunshine, but most poultry keepers will prefer to use sunshine whenever possible.—Cora Cake, Extention Poultry Specialist, University of Minnesota.

Seed Poultry Yards for Prevention of Diseases

Success with chicks depends largely upon the condition of their runs. The most effective prevention and control of diseases and parasites transmitted through the soil, is to provide a heavy growth of vegetation which will clean up the soil. This applies particularly to coccidiosis, intestinal worms, and tuberculosis.

Alsike, blue grass, and timothy or retch and rye are very satisfactory seed mixtures for brooder runs and poultry yards. A generous application of lime will aid in the growth of vegetation and cleansing the soil. Seeding the yards in this way not only overcomes the disease contamination of the soil, but provides an abundance of green feed in the yards which is so essential for the chicks in the spring."

The brooder houses should be moved so the ground occupied by chicks this year can be seeded now. They should be placed on new ground each spring and the following year they may be returned to the ground on which they now stand.

Free Range for Poults

Poults should not be allowed free range until they are about six weeks of age, after which time there is little danger from ordinary disease. Before that time they should be inclosed in a pen about 18 inches high. They will need special care during storms and should not be allowed to go through the grass while the dew is heavy. Both hens and poults should be examined frequently for lice, and if they are found they should be dusted twice a week.

HOW TO SOLVE A CROSS-WORD PUZZLE

When the correct letters are placed in the white spaces this puzzle will spell words both vertically and horizontally. The first letter in each word is indicated by a number, which refers to the definition listed below the puzzle. Thus No. 1 under the column headed "Horizontal" defines a word which will fill the white spaces up to the first black square to the right, and a number under the white spaces up to the first black square to the next black one "vertical" defines a word which will fill the white squares to the next black one below. No letters go in the black spaces. All words used are dictionary words, except proper names. Abbreviations, slang, initials, technical terms and obsolete forms are indicated in the definitions.

Peculiar Wills

One of the most puzzling of all testaments was that left behind by Miss Cora Johnson, who died in Boston in 1910. She left worldly effects worth only $100, but her will disposed of a fortune of $700,000. Relatives were perplexed, for they thought that somehow or other she might really have had that much money. After a time, however, it was found that the spinster had an obsession that she was to come into a great fortune.

In another case a man had so great a hatred of short people that he had his fortune divided among his relatives who measured 6 feet 4 inches in height or more. Since it was a family noted for its height, more people came in for some of the money than would be otherwise imagined.—Philadelphia Record.

Birds That Fell Trees

A little bird no bigger than a canary builds a nest as big as a house! This is in South Africa, where birds are very sociable. They live in large colonies, the members of which all build in the same tree.

Each couple contrives a nest of mud, joining its walls to those of its neighbor. As the colonies consist of several thousands of birds, the feathered town soon reaches very respectable proportions.

The same tree is occupied the season that follows by the same colony, and new nests are constructed on top of the old ones. Occasionally the whole mass of nests will come crashing down amid much squawking. Sometimes it is the tree that collapses through the weight of so many houses and their in hab

COLD DESSERTS

During the summer, the desserts which appeal to the housewife are those which are refreshing and easy to prepare.

Banana Whip.—Take six ripe bananas, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of walnut meats and one cupful of whipped cream. Press the bananas through a ricer, add the lemon juice, sugar and walnut meats chopped fine. Chill thoroughly and serve in sherbet glasses with a spoonful of cream. A teaspoonful of finely-minced mint added to the fruit before mixing adds a nice flavor.

Lemon Snow.—Soak two tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-half cupful of cold water and after ten minutes add two cupfuls of boiling water, one cupful of sugar, the juice of three lemons and the grated rind of one. Stir until dissolved and chill. When cold and beginning to set, beat with a whisk until frothy, then fold in three well-beaten egg whites. Heap by spoonfuls on a glass dish and sprinkle thickly with coconut. Chill and serve with a custard sauce.

Marshmallow Custard.—Beat two eggs slightly and add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two cupfuls of thin cream and flavoring to taste. Place a marshmallow at the bottom of each custard cup and pour the mixture over them. Bake in a pan of hot water until the custards are set. Place in the ice box to chill.

Pineapple Compote.—Take one pineapple to five bananas. Slice the pineapple and cook in a heavy syrup until tender. Cool and arrange in a glass dish. Cover with sliced bananas, sprinkle with grated nutmeg and repeat. Serve with whipped cream and cake.

Cream Prune Pie.—Put through a sieve a cupful of stewed prunes; add a cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of cornstarch, one-third of a cupful of sugar, the yolks of two eggs well beaten, pour into a pastry-lined plate and bake until firm. Cover the top with a meringue, made from the two whites, adding a little sugar and flavoring. Bake until brown in a slow oven.

Fruit Ice.—Take two cupfuls of fruit juice, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, one and one-half to two cupfuls of sugar, depending upon the fruit juice used, and one quart of water. Freeze in a freezer until smooth and velvety.

Summary Good Things.

Cooling drinks are much appreciated during the warm summer days.

Try to have a variety of different juices, so that there may be something on hand at any time. Whey has a delicious flavor when combined with fruit juices, and is especially wholesome.

Whey Punch. — Take one cupful of whey, one and one-quarter cupfuls of sugar and boil together for five minutes. Cool and add a quart of whey, the juice of two lemons and one cupful of shredded pineapple.

Whey Sponge.—Take two cupfuls of whey, two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, one-third of a cupful of water, two-thirds of a cupful of sugar, one egg white, one cupful of grated raw carrot, the grated rind of a lemon, the juice of half a lemon. Soak the gelatin in cold water, dissolve in hot water. Mix with the whey, add sugar and set the mixture in a pan of ice water. When it begins to thicken around the edges, beat well with an egg beater, add the lemon rind and the juice and carrot. Fold in the well-beaten egg white and turn into a mold. Serve as a salad.

Tomato and Pear Salad.—Cut tomatoes into quarters and alternate them with quarters of ripe pears. Arrange on lettuce and serve with a highly seasoned salad dressing. Canned pears will be good, if the fresh are not obtainable.

Grape and Ginger Ale Jelly.—Heat a pint of grape juice with two tablespoonfuls of sugar; when hot pour over two tablespoonfuls of gelatin which has been softened in a tablespoonful of cold water. Add a pint of ginger ale. Mold and cool on ice until ready to serve.

Peas and Peppers.—Take the tops from six green peppers, remove the seeds and soak over night in strong brine. Fill the shells after draining with one-half cupful each of minced meat and bread crumbs and one cupful of cooked peas. Season with onion juice, a bit of peanut butter, salt, pepper, thick cream to make moist enough to serve well. Bake until the peppers are tender. Serve hot.

The bolting of food with drinks of any liquid is the cause of many bodily ills. Food not properly masticated gives the digestive tract extra work to do to break it up and soften it for assimilation. If we could be prompted to chew, chew, chew our food, and eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables we would need little medicine and few surgeons.

GARMENTS DEMAND PROPER ATTENTION

One of Essentials to Have Clothes in Condition.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Garments even of the best quality, design, and workmanship will soon become shabby through lack of care; while those that may perhaps have cost only half as much may be kept fresh looking for a considerable length of time by the painstaking care of the wearer.

One of the greatest helps in keeping clothing in good condition is to give immediate attention to the repairs, such as mending rips and torn places, sewing on loosened buttons, fasteners, and trimmings, and reworking worn buttonholes. Also "preventive" darning may lengthen the period of service of many a garment. This is done by re-enforcing a worn place with rows of fine stitches, or by laying a piece of cloth (like the garment if possible) under it and darning it down with ravelings of the material.

Cleanliness demands that all outer clothing should be rid of the accumulation of dust and dirt immediately after wearing. Silk and woolen garments and hats should be brushed. If one can afford them it is well to have a collection of brushes suited to various materials, for example, one with rather short stiff bristles for heavy woolen outer clothing, a whiskbroom for general brushing, a softer bristle brush for velvet or silk, and a specially shaped soft brush for hats. A piece of velvet is also good to use for brushing dust from silk or satin.

Underclothing and all other washable garments should be washed before they become so soiled that hard rubbing is necessary. Cleanliness increases the length of service from a garment and hence is real economy. This is particularly true of stockings. Frequent washing prolongs their life for two reasons; it removes perspiration and grit, which damage the fibers, and it changes the place where the strain of wear comes.

All clothing, including shoes, should be aired after wearing. Perspiration will cause wrinkles and disagreeable odors and tend to rot fabrics, unless the garments are placed in a good circulation of air before they are put in closets and boxes. Brushing and airing clothes often, and when possible out-of-doors, will do much toward keeping them fresh and clean and should supplement the nightly airing needed by garments in constant use.

The immediate removal of spots, especially from woolen garments, is desirable because dust settles in them and makes later cleansing more difficult.

The care of clothing is less expensive if one can press the garments at home. To do this easily requires special equipment, with the addition of a heavy cotton cloth to use in pressing woolens. An ideal equipment, which might be acquired by making occasional additions to the appliances already in the house, according to Farmers' Bulletin 1089, Selection and Care of Clothing, consists of an ironing board of the type used for skirts, a sleeve board, a seam board, a tailor's press board, a tailor's cushion, irons, wax, cloth for rubbing off the iron after waxing, a press cloth, cheesecloth or old thin muslin, and an old bath towel.

The seam board is a triangular board, about 18 inches long, and has the upper edge slightly rounded; it is slipped into sleeves when seams are to be pressed open. The tailor's press board is supported by two upright pieces set on a heavy base. It may be used on any table and is excellent for pressing shaped and tailored garments, such as coats. The tailor's cushion, sometimes called a ham, is oval in shape and narrower at one end than at the other; it is made of heavy cotton duck, stuffed very tight with wet woolen rags, then dried in the hot sun or in a cool oven to prevent mildew.

A strip made of heavy cotton duck 1¼ yards in length makes a satisfactory press cloth, because when thoroughly wet it does not dry out quickly under the heat of the iron. An old bath towel provides a soft surface for pressing embroidered garments; it may also be used to wrap up silk waists immediately after rinsing and thus to absorb some of the water before they are ironed.

EGGS ARE VALUABLE FOR THE CHILDREN

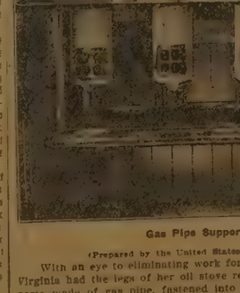
Fine Source of Building Material and Energy.

Easter day for Easter eggs, Christmas day for Christmas presents, and the Fourth of July for firecrackers! So runs the calendar for the children. But luckily for their good nutrition, eggs are not restricted to Easter Sunday in quite the same way that presents belong to Christmas and firecrackers to the glorious Fourth. Eggs are so valuable in the building of healthy little bodies and lend themselves to so much variety in preparation that mothers should think of them as running a close second to milk in the children's list. This is easy to accept in view of the function which each of these foods is primarily intended to fulfill. Cow's milk is secreted to make the young calf grow, and is therefore rich in properties which promote growth. But eggs are produced to create baby chicks, and when one remembers that an egg kept at the right temperature for about three weeks produces a chick so well developed that it begins to walk and eat at once, it goes without saying that eggs are a fine source of building material and energy.

And just now when even popular advertisements ask, "Have you had your iron today?" it is worth knowing that egg yolks are the richest source of this mineral so essential in making red blood corpuscles. At the same time they provide other minerals needed in the construction of muscle, bone and blood. Nor are they found lacking in vitamins! In fact, one learning his A B C's in the vitamin alphabet might well begin with a study of eggs since at least two or three of these elusive substances so vital for proper growth and development are present in the yolk and white.

Though eggs are a valuable source of these food elements, they must be introduced into the diet of young children gradually because they are such a concentrated food. Otherwise they are likely to cause digestive upsets and come to be forever barred from the menu of the child who most needs them. A half a teaspoonful of egg yolk seems very little to give at first but in many cases it is better to begin with even less. Some doctors recommend that the tines of a fork dipped in egg yolk should be whisked through the baby's orange juice or cereal gruel until the infant becomes adjusted to handling this concentrated food. Increasing the amount steadily, the child of a year and a half takes a whole egg yolk easily and a whole egg occasionally, while his father thinks nothing of eating two eggs for breakfast along with a lot else and then finding egg in the muffins, salad dressing, cream pie, etc., throughout the other meals of the day.

EASY TO SWEEP AROUND AND UNDER STOVE



Gas Pipe Supports Hold Stove.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With an eye to eliminating work for herself an ingenious farmer's wife in Virginia had the legs of her oil stove removed and set the stove on two supports made of gas pipe, fastened into the wall. The difficulty of sweeping around and under the stove was completely removed. A fireproof backing was put on the wall and the stove itself set sufficiently far out to avoid all risk of fire. The picture was taken by the United States Department of Agriculture.

GOLDEN TEXT—Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons.—Acts 10:34.

PRIMARY TOPIC—A Strange Sight Which Peter Saw.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Why Peter Went to Caesarea.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Peter's Broadening Vision.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Gospel Intended for All Men.

Through the conversion of Cornelius, the "middle wall of partition" was broken down (Eph. 2:4).

I. Cornelius (10:1-2).

1. His Official Position (v. 1).

He was a Roman officer over a company of 100 soldiers.

2. His Character (v. 2).

(1) A devout, pious man.

(2) He was a praying man.

(3) He was charitable.

(4) He was respected by his family. The Lord chose Cornelius for the transition of the gospel to the Gentiles because of his character and position.

II. The Supernatural Preparation for the Transition of the Gospel to the Gentiles (10:3-33).

In order to bring this about:

1. Two Visions Were Given.

(1) The vision of Cornelius (v. 3-8).

While engaged in prayer, an angel of God announced that his prayer and alms had come before God as a memorial, and instructed him to send to Joppa for Peter who would tell him what to do.

(2) The vision of Peter (v. 9-16).

He saw a certain vessel containing clean and unclean animals let down from heaven. This vessel let down from heaven and taken back indicated that both Jews and Gentiles were accepted on high.

2. A Messenger Sent From Cornelius (vv. 17-22).

Peter was greatly perplexed over what he had seen, but not for long, for messengers from Cornelius made inquiry at the gate for him. The Spirit informed Peter of the matter, and bade him go, nothing doubting. Thus we see that both had been prepared for each other by God.

3. The Meeting of Cornelius and Peter (vv. 23-33).

(1) Peter took six witnesses along (v. 23).

He had the good judgment to know that on a matter of so great importance, he must have witnesses.

(2) Cornelius waiting for Peter (v. 24).

He called together his kinsmen and friends.

(3) Cornelius about to worship Peter (v. 25-28).

Peter repudiated his act and protested that he was but a man alongside of Cornelius.

(4) The reciprocal explanation (vv. 27-33).

Peter explained to him how God had taken from him his Jewish prejudice, and asked that Cornelius state the purpose of his having sent for him. Cornelius explains how God had appeared unto him and instructed him to send for Peter.

III. Peter's Sermon (vv. 34-43).

1. The Introduction (vv. 34-35).

He showed that God is no respecter of persons, but that in every nation those who fear God and work righteousness are accepted of Him.

2. His Discourse (vv. 36-43).

In the discourse he touches briefly upon the mission of Jesus showing that by means of His baptism and anointing with the Holy Spirit, He was qualified for His work as mediator. He then exhibited the work of Christ:

(1) In His life (vv. 36-39).

He went about doing good, even casting out demons as a proof that God was with Him (v. 38).

(2) In His death (v. 39).

The just suffered for the unjust that He might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh (I Pet. 3:18).

(3) In His resurrection (vv. 40-41).

God raised Him up the third day showing openly that Christ was His Son (Rom. 1:4), and that His sacrificial work was satisfactory (Rom. 4:25).

IV. The Holy Spirit Poured Out (vv. 44-48).

As the gospel was entering upon its widest embrace, the Spirit came in new power.

V. Peter Vindicates His Ministry to the Gentiles (11:1-18).

Being called to account for visiting and eating with Gentiles, Peter rehearsed the whole story in such a way that his narrative took the form of logical argument, and showed how that God had set His seal upon the work by the miraculous gift of the Spirit.

ENJOYABLE PICNIC AT GORES POND.

(Contributed)

A closing of Mrs. Curry's school of beginners was celebrated on Friday with a picnic at Gores Pond.

At ten o'clock, Mesdames. "Doll" Simms, Bud Jones, J. Earl Gowan, K. M. Vinson, W. M. Wyatt and J. Z. Mims in their cars, assembled in front of Mrs Curry's home, received the giddily anticipative pupils and the pharmalia that crowns any picnic with the halo of genuine satisfaction.

Then for Gores Pond with a height of Upon arrival, no time was lost in donning a wading-pool. This recreation of wading was indulged in until the announcement for dinner.

Appetites were keenly whettened, for anticipative children do not usually breakfast at the accustomed hour.

All varieties of delicious sandwiches were spread within easy reach of the hungry youngsters, together with the many other kinds of dainties.

Near by were buckets of cold water and tea and iced lemonade. The children were absolutely unrestrained and all enjoyed the dinner fully.

At the noon hour, Mesdames Arthur Johnson and Oscar Jones, who could not leave home earlier, arrived. Scraps dispensed with, cloths folded, etc., a stunt party was proposed.

Which one of the party while blindfolded would be enabled, upon hearing each child's voice, could identify it? Well: Mrs. Curry would naturally have a better chance for identification of the children since daily association with the youngsters, would necessarily revert to her advantage. Accordingly, Mrs. Curry was blind-folded. The children were formed into a large ring and in an orderly procession began their march toward Mrs. Curry, who was seated near by.

Mrs. Hugh Jones then instructed Mrs. Curry to hold hands for playing thimble. One after another of the children made deposits with: "Hold fast all I give you."

The recipient truly had only one thought in regard to the game: she was doing her "dead level best" to recognize each voice and succeeded admirably in her effort.

The final deposit made, Mrs. Jones, while unbinding Mrs. Curry announced: This is yours! The children wished to make you a present, we decided this to be the most practical scheme."

Upon beholding, Mrs. Curry realized that she had a double-hand full of buckets. A gracious gift from appreciative patrons through her pupils.

After more wading, all made ready for the trip home; each cherishing happy recollections of the day.

Among the children who were represented in the game of thimble, were:

Gus Downs, Gertiwyl and Kin Vinson, Jr., Kermit and Mary Nelle Jones, Marshall Lee Ware, Mary Courtney Jones, Helen Moore, Joe Hall Johnson, Joe Earl and Ruth Gowan, Vida Wyatte, Louise Mims, Mary Edith Jones, Elizabeth Williams, Cameron McDavid, Rosemary and Mike Pickens, and James Jones.

Completing the list of those participating in the festivities of the occasion were: Mesdames: "Doll" and Joe Ben Downs, M. L. Ware, Hugh Jones, Arthur Johnson, J. Earl Gowan, K. M. Vinson, Oscar Jones, W. M. Wyatt, J. Z. Mims, Curry, Thomas and Paul Gowan and Annie Laurie Thomas.

RECOGNIZING GREATNESS

It has been said that of living men we hold opinions, and of dead men we form judgements. Hence, the varying standards of greatness. Estimates differ, so there is no absolute criterion when we speak of individual worth. A man is not great because others say he is, yet the verdict of many must outweigh the estimate of the few. He who is able to command a large following because of his life and meritorious deeds must have in his personality the elements of greatness. He certainly is more than an ordinary individual.

Some have ability to influence others, and inspire them to see the noble and beatific vision which they see. This is often one of the hardest tasks in the world, yet, if successful, is one of the most handsome and crowning triumps that ever come to men.

Another kind of greatness that causes men to marvel is that which comes through versatility. It is natural or acquired aptitude for various tasks. It is playing on a harp of many strings. Who does not take off his hat to the man who has the lofty vision of the inspired poet and the acumen of the practical man of affairs, who shows you that he can do anything that anybody else can do?

Whether we want to think so or not, these are all elements of greatness. They have been loved and detested, idolized and persecuted, burned and canonized. Sometimes their greatness was recognized, sometimes it was not, yet these folks have generally builded better than they knew.

But the final proof of greatness lies in the permanence and value of one's work: in the excellence of the example that is set; in what people canaccomplish that is worth while in contrast to the deeds of others

The final test of greatness is in the realm of character. Truth, Love, Justice, Sympathy, and all other ingredients in a sterling example are forces indestructible and immortal

He who embodies in his character such forces is great. Renowned he may not be; greatness requires no herald nor forerunner, and asks for none. It is own prophet.

The [illegible] of Mr Cox include one stretch of 35 miles, most of which call for grading and paving. He also has secured other state contracts. He is forging to the front as one of the leading contractors of the state and class of work being put up is giving him the opportunity to win in the very stiffest competition with other contractors.

COLLECTORS EAGER TO GET MEMORIAL COINS

An interesting question under debate among coin collectors is the probable money value of the Stone Mountain Memorial coin on the completion of the great monument. Various anniversary and exposition coins put forth by the government for individual states are now held at from three to ten times their face value. The Alabama centennial coin, less than three years old, sells, it is said, among the informed, for five dollars. The government once issued five million one dollar gold pieces, and but five for they proved to be hard to count in quantities and easily lost. They have long since entirely disappeared from circulation, and are almost as scarce as blue moons. They are extremely valuable.

Many circumstances unite to make the Stone Mountain coin the most valuable of its kind in America. There is begin with, an overwhelming sentiment behind it; one that will bury it among the family treasures and heirlooms for all time. It is estimated that ninety-five per cent of the issue will disappear in this way. The remainder will be held abroad as gifts from friends or gathered up eagerly by collectors who recognize that the enormous advertisement afforded day by day for years by the progressing work will bring a constant demand. The crowds that visit the mountain in even the unfinished stages of the monument, would, in time, buy the entire issue.

A well-known southern business man discussing this subject said: If I had a young child or grandchild to provide for and were looking for a safe investment, I would be inclined to buy Memorial coins. Ten thousand of them would cost me ten thousand dollars but in a pinch they would always have an instant collateral value of five thousand dollars. I am confident that the child of ten now, coming into possession of the coins at twenty-one could sell them at the foot of Stone Mountain for fifty thousand dollars

THE MEMORIAL COIN

Atlanta, Ga., May 30.—President Coolidge has accepted as a gift from the Stone Mountain Memorial Association the first coin minted under the Act of Congress authorizing five million half-dollars in memory of the valor of the soldiers of the South.

Inlaid in a plate of Georgia gold bearing a suitable inscription, it was presented to President Coolidge on May 15 by Hollins N. Randolph, president of the association, who called at the White House for that purpose and a letter expressing the president's appreciation of the gift has been received at the association office in Atlanta.

President Coolidge's coin is actually the first that came from the mint last month, 21 on the birth anniversary of Stonewall Jackson, when one thousand coins were minted in the presence of Robert J. Grant, director of the mint, and [illegible] representing the Stone Mountain Memorial Association, consisting of Hollins N. Randolph president, E. Rivers, vice-president and Joseph A. McCord, Treasurer.

President Coolidge's coin was the first one removed from the package for the purpose of placing it in the gold plate made for him of Georgia gold in honor of his approval of the Act

Each coin of that thousand was placed by Mr. Grant in a separate envelope bearing a serial number, and the thousand were then sealed by Mr. Grant, paid for on behalf of the association by Mr. McCord, and shipped to the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta.

DO WE WISH TAX EQUALITY?

Our theory of government is based upon the principle of equal taxation There is a constitutional desire to treat all men alike in the matter of their financial relationship to the government—civic or national. But the government and all its political subdivisions keep issuing a regular flood of tax exempt securities for public undertakings of all kinds, thereby furnishing a loophole for thousands of persons to escape all taxation. This is a wheel within a wheel that is working backward. If there were not so many tax-exempt securities, there would not be so much public extravagance

If we are sincere in our demand for tax reduction and tax equality, why do we not change our tax-exemption laws which permit such unfair distribution of the tax burden.

JULIA PARRISH

GONE IS THE DAY OF THE RADIO "FILLER"

"Back in the early days of radio broadcasting, the program manager didn't have to worry about 'filling' his time on the air. One or more phonographs and an automatic piano were fixtures of the broadcasting studio, and when there was a lull in the program the studio announcer made good use of a few of the latest record releases or pianola rolls to fill in the time

That practice, however, is a thing of the past. The radio audience no longer wants to listen to just plain 'fillers' to kill time, so to speak. Today, everything that comes off the air must be fresh or first-hand. Moreover, the various features must be fitted into the program with the utmost care and judgement, so as to make for a harmonious ensemble," says Charles B. Popence, manager, station WJZ and WJY

THE FARMERS' PROBLEM

That the farmer is entitled to cost of production, plus a reasonable profit for his products is an undisputed fact. The average farmer in the past has paid too little attention to his overhead of cost of running his business.

It is coming to realize more and more that other than try to fix selling prices high enough to cover production, interest and profit, he must cut down cost of production, because farming is a business of world competition.

So Big

By EDNA FERBER

Upon her first view of a field of cabbages, Selina DeJong exclaimed, "How beautiful"

The remark was long a standing joke, one of the few jokes of the stolid Dutch vegetable gardeners among whom she had come to live.

The greatest story from the pen of Edna Ferber, a writer who has been voted unanimously, "the female O. Henry."

Consistency, Thou Art a Jewel!

Vice President of the United States Dawes delivered an eloquent plea in Birmingham last week for a change in senate rules whereby the minority cannot prevent passage of legislation it believes inimical to the country it has been elected to serve. To make his ideas more forceful he held up our own senior senator, Oscar W. Underwood, as one of those who is heartily in favor of this change.

Mr. Dawes can preach this doctrine all he wants to—that kind of doctrine is an axiom with some brethren from the clime from which he comes. but when our own senator has the effrontery to come to his home state and our home state after enjoying the suffrage of the voters for these many years, and tell us we need what he advocates. it is something else.

So inconsistent is Mr. Underwood in his stand that we quote from the record of his speeches, one made when the republicans were trying to ram the Dyer anti-lynching bill down the throats of an unsuspecting people some time last year and the other in Birmingham last week when Mr Dawes spoke on the same subject:

There was no desire on my part or the part of those of my colleagues with whom I was acting that we should delay the public business. But the bill is so clearly in contravention of what we regarded as a great constitutional right that we felt we were justified in going to extremes in trying to [illegible] its passage. We have no apologies to offer and we have nothing to take back in reference to what we have done On the other hand, should the bill again appear with an effort to take it up in the senate, we would renew the fight we have made before. Of course. I do not think a fight of this kind could be justified except as a very extreme measure against a matter which we consider an invasion of a public right.

Shall we longer contend that a minority of the senate has more wisdom more capacity or more honesty than the majority of that body? . . . . .

The freedom of our government and the personal liberties of the citizens of the United States are not protected by a minority band of senators.

Mr. Underwood is playing his last political tune. He is singing his swan song, we believe, of his cherished antilution to set at the head of this government He no doubt sees the evening shadows gathering on his senatorial throne, and with the "prestance" he has with his elite brethren of New York and Chicago, he hopes, we believe by this change, to help him win the democratic nomination in the future

He has been wanting to get away from Alabama for years it seems, and we are willing to give him a wide berth [illegible] to Virginia, New Jersey, New York Japan Turkey, or better still get himself rid of kissing the foot of the pope in Rome

When the people of the south become to know that they are recognized as a part of this republic, then will be time enough to right about face on cloture, but until then, these wouldbe legislative reformers are sowing to the wind.

People of the south are not so quick to forget as some people think They have not forgotten Mr Lodge and his cloture program yet. They have not forgotten Mr. Dyers bill which Mr Underwood so eloquently helped to rock to sleep in the last congress.

When the republican party get ready to advocate pensions for the old Confederate soldiers who are left will be plenty of time for us to get in the cloture band wagon. and that will be a cold day in August.

Ex-Governor Glasscock of West Virginia, must think the people of the south are a lot of fools if he thinks they ought to vote the republican ticket just to keep two parties aligned against each other. If a man's a republican sincerely, let him be so. If a democrat alright But if a man is so shallow as to vote just to keep two "well-balanced parties" against each other, he ought to be bored for the hollow-horn.

TRADE BUILDS CITIES

If merchants and their helpers were not a pretty good natured class of people, whose rough edges have been worn away by much contact with their home folks, they would have reason to get irritated at times.

There are some people who will send off or go to distant cities and make important purchases of clothing and house furnishings. Then when they find that they want some little trifling article in a hurry, they will rush down to the home store and demand that it be supplied them instanter, and blam the store if it does not have precisely what they want. They expect these stores to keep stocked up all the time on a wide variety of goods. yet they will not help supply the all around patronage which is the only basis for keeping such a general stock.

It is a tremendous convenience and advantage to have a fine group of retail stores in a town. Such establishments connect a community with sources of supply that deal all over the world. A good store supplies the comforts and essentials of civilization, and it is a wonderful benefit to have it close by where you can call on its service at any moment, and get its supplies and its advise.

But people can not expect to have the kind of stores their community is entitled to on the basis of its population and wealth, if they are constant ly running off to other places to buy goods. Unless they give their patronage to their home stores, the home store can not serve them efficiently

It is well to remember that th ome stores and the men who own and operate them are a tremendous force working all the time in Chilton couny to provide this community with all forms of modern equipment. to improve its civic advantages and to advance its prosperity. When you support them. you back up and help your community.

A DAY IN JUNE

The world we live in has two divisions—outdoor and indoor. And the people in it may be roughly classified as outdoor or indoor people with outdoor or indoor minds.

We who live more and more indoors who work indoors and play indoors and worship indoors, have need from time to time to get out into the open "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, sang an ancient poet, "from whence cometh my help."

This change is ours today. As of old, there is always something new and prophetic in the coming of June. No man, unless he be utterly dead of soul but feels a new thrill of life and a quickening of the pulse, as he witnesses the renewal of the year.

Since time began this lesson has touched the heart of mankind with new hope. If God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and to morrow is cast into the oven, will He not much more. and by a mightier ministry, renew the drab spirits of man.

BEING STUDIED NOW

A study of the production, marketing and consumption of farm products in Louisiana and southern Mississippi is being made by the United States Department of Agriculture cooperating with Louisiana State University the Mississippi Agricultural and Mechanical College, the New Orleans Association of Commerce, and other public agencies, to furnish an economic basis for production and marketing programs for improving farm conditions

The survey is one of the most extensive of its kind in which Federal and State agricultural and commercial agencies have cooperated. The work will be closely watched by public agencies throughout the country with a view to making similar surveys in other areas.

Special consideration will be given in the study to fruits and vegetables, dairying, poultry, livestock. and feed crops. The work will include also a study of city marketing and consumption.

Committees have been organized for each commodity or situation to be studied, composed of Experiment Station and Extenton Department specialists, and representatives of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Active work on the farm phases of the survey will begin shortly after June 1, the project to be completed by October or November this year.

To develop the possibilities fo profitable changes in existing types and practices of farming the survey will cover the present production of farm products, the marketing structure and preparation of products for market, and the present and potential markets for products grown in Louisiana and southern Mississippi

A detailed survey of the consumption of farm products in New Orleans and within the state as a whole will be made to determine how local producer are meeting present consumption requirements as to quality, quantity and seasonable supply, and to determine whether cognizance is being taken of the future needs for consumption and preparations being made to meet such needs. and whether improvements can be male in methods of distribution.

All available information will be assembled and studies will be made of markets putside the area to which surplus products are being shipped. Thes facts will have a bearing on how local producers are meeting the requirements

The several phases of the study are to be brought together in final report for each commodity or group of commodities. and interpretations of the surveys, summeries, and definite suggestions will be prepared for the guidance of individual producers and the various agencies interested in agricultural improvement in the areas covered.

CHEVROLET FACTORY MAKING NEW TRUCK RECORD FOR 1925

Detroit, May 25.—The improved Chevrolet trucks, which have registered a progressive gain since the new line was announced early this year, reached during April a production of 3,952, an increase of nearly 40 per cent over the 2,831 trucks built during the corresponding month of 1924.

May production of trucks is exceeding that of April.

Of the 3,952 April truck production, 1,440 were the commercial chassis which follows closely the design of the passenger car chassis. April, 1924, production of this type was 1,011. The remaining 2,512 trucks built last month were the utility express chassis of one ton capacity which carries the same power plant and controls as the commercial chassis but has a special heavy duty rear axle, large gears and bearings and a five-inch channel frame. The April, 1924, production of the utility express chassis was 1,820.

The utility express has cantilever front springs and semi-elliptics at the rear. Its wheel base is 120 inches against 103 in the commercial chassis.

Both trucks are adapted to a wide variety of bodies. Equipment includes the Alemite system, speedometer, oi pressure gauge and electric starting and lighting.

The steady increase in production of the two chassis this year is shown by the following figures; January, 407; February, 1,737; March 2,854; and April, 3,952. The comparatively low January total was due to the fact that the commercial chassis did not get into production until February, only one truck of that type having been made during January.

WITH TELEPHONES

When the gigantic United States liner Leviathan docks at New York you can sit down at the telephone in your stateroom and call up any one of 16,000,000 telephones scattered over the American continent. When she docks in England, at the other end of her voyage, you can't even telephone ashore for a cab to meet you at the pier.

This was cited recently by an English newspaper as an example of Britain's relative backwardness in the matter of telephone facilities. "All the trans-Atlantic liners are fitted with telephone systems," stays the Dorset Daily Echo of Weymouth, England. "The Leviathan, for instance, has a telephone in every stateroom, enabling passengers to converse with anyone in any part of the ship. And when these liners reach New York the first cable thrown ashore, before the ship has docked, contains a lead which is fitted into a socket on the quay, and the ship is at once in telephone communication with the whole of America! Before the ship stops passengers can speak from their stateroom to their friends ashore, can telephone their offices or ring up hotels and reserve accomodation. The same facilities are offered at such comparatively unimportant places as Buenos Airs and Montevideo. Yet at Southhampton, Liverpool or other British ports—among the most important in the world—these facilities cannot be obtained."

LETTER HAS MANY SCARED

Note: This was handed to us with request that it be published.—Editor.

Country papers throughout the United States are printing what is alleged to be aletter written by Christ.

In this letter was an injunction that it should be published to the world by whoever found it, together with the statement that misfortune and bad luck would follow the person having possession of it in the event that it was not given publicity.

There was likewise a promise that whoever may have a copy of this in his or her possession will prosper and be followed by good fortune.

The Blade has received some hundreds of requests to print this letter, so if it will relieve the superatitious fear of any one, here it is.

According to the history of the letter is was written by Christ just after his crucitixion signed by the Angel Gabriel ninety-nine years after the Savior's birth and presumably deposited by him under a stone at the foot of the cross.

On this stone appeared the legend, "Blessed is he who shall turn me over."

No one knew what the inscription meant, or seemed to have sufficient curiosity to investigate, until the stone was turned over by a little child and the letter which folows was discovered

"Whosoever works on the Sabbath day shall be cursed. I command you to go to church and keep Holy the Lord's day without any manner of work. You shall not idle or mispend your time in bedecking yourself in perfluities of costly apparel and vain dressing for I have ordered it a day of rest. I will have that day kept holy that your sins may be forgiven you.

"You will not break my commandments, but observe and keep them, being written by my hand and spoken from my mouth. You shall not only go to church yourself, but also your man servant and maid servant. Observe my words and learn my commandments.

"You shall finish your work every Saturday at 6 o'clock in the afternoon, at which hour the preparation for the Sabbath begins. I advise you to fast five days in the year, beginning on Good Friday and continuing the five days following in remembrance of the five bloody wounds I received for you and mankind.

"You shall love one another and cause them that are not baptised to come to church and receive the Holy Sacrament, that is to say baptism, and then the supper of the Lord, and be made a member thereof and in so doing I will give you long life and many blessings. Your land shall be replenished and bring forth abundance and I will comfort you in the great temtation and surely he that doeth to the contrary shall be cursed.

"I will also send hardness of the heart on them and especially on hardened and unpenitent unbelievers. He that hath given to the poor shall find it profitable. Remember to keep the Sabbath day, for the seventh day I have taken as a resting day to myself.

"And he that hath a copy of this letter written by my own hand and spoken by my own mouth and keepeth it without publishing it to others, shall not prosper, but he that publisheth it to others shall be blessed by me and it their sins be as many as the stars by night, and if they believe they shall be pardoned and they that believe not this writting and my commandments will have my plagues upon you and you will be consumed with yor children, goods and cattle and all other worldly enjoyments that I have given you. Do but once think of what i have suffered for you. if you do. it will be well for you in this world and in the world which is to come.

"Whosoever shall have a copy of this letter and keep it in their house, nothing shall hurt them. neither pestilence, thunder nor lightning, and if any woman be in birth and put her trust in me she shall be delivered of her child. You shall hear no more news of me except through the Holy scriptures, until the day of judgement. All goodness and prosperity shall be in the house where a copy of this letter shall be found. Finished."

The story goes that the little child who found it passed it to one who became a convert to the Christion faith. He failed to have the letter published. He kept it, however, as a sacred memento of Christ and it passed down to different generations of his family for more than one thousands years.

During this period the family suffered repeated misfortunes, migrated to different countries until finally one of them came to America bringing the letter with them. They settled in Virginia, then moved further south, still followed by misfortune when finally the last member, a daughtrc, approaching her death bed called a neighbor, Mrs. Thompson, giving her the letter and related its history for more than one thousand years. The Thompson woman began the attempt to have it published and it first appeared in the Rome, Ga., Tribune on October 31, 1891. It then appeared in the Dalton, Ga., Citizen and Mrs. Wortman, now living in Marion, Ind., clipped it and kept it in her possession for many years without an effort to have it published. She was followed by misfortune which she attributed to her neglect in trying to have the letter published.

Mrs. Ruby Crutchfield of Trezavant, Tenn., is also said to have had a copy and failed to have it published for three years, and was followed by a varied lot of misfortunes which she attributed to the fact of her neglect in tris respect.

Statisticians are experts who can prove that figures sometimes lie.

If a man marries a woman because she has more sense than he has he is never permitted to lose sight of the fact.

The Heart of the Nation

This railroad, one of the greatest transportation systems in America, serves fourteen states and approximately one-quarter of the entire population of the United States. The figures shown on the map above further emphasize the importance of railroad service in the development of both rural and urban communities—for, people bring prosperity and prosperity brings happiness.

This condition which applies in L. & N. served territory exists in all parts of the country where the railroad service is above the average. The railroads, according to the late James Hill, rank next in real importance to religion and the public schools.

PERVUS DE JONG

SYNOPSIS. — Introducing "So Big" (Dirk DeJong) in his infancy. And his mother, Selina DeJong, daughter of Simeon Peake, gambler and gentleman of fortune. Her life, to young womanhood in Chicago in 1885, her unconventional, somewhat seamy, but generally enjoyable. At school her chum is Julie Hempel, daughter of August Hempel, butcher. Simeon is killed in a quarrel that is not his own, and Selina, nineteen years old and practically destitute, secures a position as teacher at the High Prairie school, in the outskirts of Chicago. Living at the home of a truck farmer, Klaas Pool, a Dutch, twelve years old, son of Klaas, Selina perceives a kindred spirit, a lover of beauty, like herself. Selina hears gossip concerning the affection of the "widow Paarlenberg," rich and good-looking, for Pervus DeJong, poor truck farmer, who is insensible to the widow's attractions.

"Well!" exclaimed Selina, feeling as though she had witnessed the first act in an exciting play. And breathed coyly. So, too, did the watching congregation, so that the widow could be heard driven off in quite a gust. As they jogged home in the Pool farm wagon Maartje told her tale with good deal of savor.

Pervus DeJong had been left a widower two years before. Within a month of that time Leendert Paarlenberg had died, leaving to his widow the richest and most profitable farm in the whole community. Pervus DeJong on the contrary, through inheritance from his father, old Johannes, possessed a scant twenty-five acres of the worst lowland—practically the only lowland—in all High Prairie. The acreage was notoriously barren. Pervus DeJong patiently planted, sowed, watered crops, hauled them to market, seemed still never to get on in the thrifty Dutch community where getting on was so common a trait as to be no longer thought a virtue. Luck or nature seemed to work against him. His seedlings proved unfertile; his stock was always ailing; his cabbages were worm-infested; smut-bees bored his rhubarb. When he planted largely of spinach, hoping for a hot spring, the season was dry. Did it turn the following year to sweltering heat, all auguries pointing to a late spring and summer, the summer proved the wettest in a decade. Had he been small, puny and insignificant he had luck would have called forth scrupulous pity. But there was about him the lovableness and splendor of the stricken giant.

It was on this Pervus DeJong, then, that the Widow Paarlenberg of the 160 acres, the comfortable farmhouse, the gold neck chain, the silk gowns, the white hands and the cooking talent had set her affections. She wooed him openly, notoriously, and with a Dutch vehemence that would have swept another man off his feet. It was known that she sent him a daily baking of cakes, pies and bread. She tricked, cajoled, or nagged him into eating her ample meals. She had asked his advice—that subtlest form of flattery. She asked him about ditching, humus, rotation—she whose rich land yielded, under her good management, more profitably per single acre than to any ten of Pervus'.

Feeling that the entire community was urging him toward this profitable match with the plump, rich, red-lipped widow, Pervus set his will like a stubborn steer and would have none of it. He was uncomfortable in his own house; he was lonely, he was unhappy. But he would have none of it. Vanity, pride, resentment were involved up in it.

It was very first time that Pervus DeJong met Selina he had a chance to meet her. With such a start, the end was inevitable. Then, too, Selina in the wine-colored cashmere was trying hard to keep the tears in full view of the whole of High Prairie. Urged by Maartje (and rather enjoying the idea) Selina had attended the great meeting and dance in Ooms' hall above the general store near the High Prairie station. Families for miles around had come. The new church organ—that time-hallowed pretext for social gayety—was the excuse for this evening. There was a small admission charge. Adam Ooms had given the hall. The three musicians were playing without fee. The women were to bring supper packed in boxes or baskets, these to be raffled off, the highest bidder whose privilege it then was to sup with the fair one whose basket he had bought. Had he could be had at so much the head. All the proceeds were to be devoted to the organ. Maartje had packed her own basket at noon and had driven off at four with Klaas and the children. She was to serve on one of those bustling committees whose duties ranged from coffee making to dishwashing. Klaas and Roelf were to be pressed into service. Jakob Hoogendunk could convey Selina to festivities when his chores were done. Selina's lunch basket was to be a separate and distinct affair, offered at auction with those of the Katrinas and Linas and Sophias of High Prairie. Not a little apprehensive, she was to pack this basket herself. Maartje, departing, had left copious but disjointed instructions.

Maartje's own basket was of gigantic proportions and staggering content. Her sandwiches were cubic blocks; her pickles clubs of cucumber; her pies vast plateaus.

The basket provided for Selina, while not quite so large, still was of appalling size as Selina contemplated it. She decided, suddenly, that she would have none of it. In her trunk she had a cardboard box such as shoes come in. Certainly this should hold enough lunch for two, she thought. She was a little nervous about the whole thing; rather dreaded the prospect of eating her supper with a High Prairie swain unknown to her. Suppose no one should bid for her box! She resolved to fill it after her own pattern, disregarding Maartje's heavy provender.

She had the kitchen to herself, Jakob was in the fields or out-houses. The house was deliciously quiet. Selina rummaged for the shoe box, lined it with a sheet of tissue paper, rolled up her sleeves, got out mixing bowl, flour, pans. Cup cakes were her ambition. She baked six of them. They came out a beautiful brown but somewhat leaden. Still, anything was better than a wedge of soggy pie, she told herself. She boiled eggs very hard, halved them, devilled their yolks, filled the whites neatly with this mixture and clapped the halves together again, skewering them with a toothpick. Then she rolled each egg separately in tissue paper twisted at the ends. Daintiness, she had decided, should be the keynote of her supper box. The food neatly packed she wrapped the box in paper and tied it with a gay red ribbon yielded by her trunk. At the last moment she whipped into the yard, twisted a brush of evergreen from the tree at the side of the house, and tucked this into the knot of ribbon atop the box. She stepped back and thought the effect enchanting.

"What Am I Bid! Thirty Cents! Shame on You, Gentlemen!"

She was waiting in her red cashmere and her cloak and hood when Hoogendunk called for her. They were late arrivals.

Selina, balancing her box carefully, opened the door that led to the wooden stairway. The hall was on the second floor. The clamor that struck her ears had the effect of a physical blow. She hesitated a moment, and if there had been any means of returning to the Pool farm, short of walking five miles in the snow, she would have taken it. Up the stairs and into the din. Evidently the auctioning of supper baskets was even now in progress. The auctioneer was Adam Ooms who himself had once been the High Prairie school teacher. A fox-faced little man, bald, falsetto, the village clown with a solid foundation of shrewdness under his clowning and a tart layer of malice over it.

High and shrill came his voice. "What am I bid! What am I bid! Thirty cents! Thirty-five! Shame on you, gentlemen. What am I bid! Who'll make it forty!"

Selina felt a little thrill of excitement. She looked about for a place on which to lay her wraps, espied a box that appeared empty, rolled her cloak, muffler, and hood into a neat bundle and, about to cast it into the box, saw, upturned to her from its depths, the round pink faces of the sleeping Kuyper twins, aged six months. Oh, dear! In desperation Selina placed her bundle on the floor in a corner, smoothed down the red cashmere, snatched up her lunch box and made for the doorway with the childish eagerness of one out of the crowd to be in it. She wondered where Maartje and Klaas Pool were in this close-packed roomful; and Roelf. In the doorway she found that broad black-coated backs shut off sight and ingress. She had written her name neatly on her lunch box. Now she was at a loss to find a way to reach Adam Ooms. She eyed the great-shouldered expanse just ahead of her. In desperation she decided to dig into it with a corner of her box. She dug, viciously. The back winced. Its owner turned. "Here! What—"

Selina looked up into the wrathful face of Pervus DeJong. Pervus DeJong looked down into the startled eyes of Selina Peake. Large enough eyes at any time; enormous now in her fright at what she had done.

"I'm sorry! I'm—sorry. I thought if I could—there's no way of getting my lunch box up there—such a crowd—"

A slim, appealing, lovely little figure in the wine-red cashmere, amidst all those buxom bosoms, and over-heated bodies, and flushed faces. His gaze left her reluctantly, settled on the lunch box, became, if possible, more bewildered. "That? Lunch box?"
